Western Union Barred From Giving Files to Committee.

Decision Is First To Halt Congress

Body Went Way Beyond Subpena Powers, Judge Rules.

By Felix Bruner.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District of Columbia Supreme court ruled yesterday that the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee had gone "way beyond" the proper use of the right of subpena in seizing private telegrams.

In a history-making decision, Justice Wheat enjoined the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over to the committee messages sent and received by the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw. The committee had subpenaed all messages sent and received by the firm during 10 months of last year.

The decision is believed to be the first instance in which a court has issued an order restraining any action of Congress.

Confident of Senate.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, declared he was "confident the Senate will not submit to an unconstitutional restriction of its own constitutional functions." Previously he had hinted that he would ask the Senate for legislation forbidding courts jurisdiction in such a procedure. After the decision, he said he would consult the full committee before making the next move.

Justice Wheat rendered his decision orally from the bench after he had interrupted arguments that had gone on for more than four hours.

Stopping a rebuttal argument by Frank J. Hogan, attorney for the law firm, Justice Wheat said:

"Mr. Hogan, I do not believe that I want to hear any more.

"I have listened to the case very fully. It has been fairly argued on both sides. It does not make any difference whether it is Mr. Silas Strawn or who it is.

"Unreasonable Search."

"The claim was made that this subpena which has been served upon the telegraph company amounts to an unreasonable search and seizure, and is therefore violative of the legitimate powers of the Senate committee. It is purely a question of law. I would be the last one in the world to claim any right to interfere with the powers of the Senate, or with the exercise of its legitimate discretion. Where it has discretion, I have nothing else to say about it, nor has any other judge. Where it has power, and that power is validly exercised, I have nothing to say about that.

"The claim is made here by the plaintiffs who, it seems to me, have a legitimate interest, that they will be seriously affected by obedience to this subpena upon the Western Union Telegraph Co. I think that they have a legitimate cause of action. I think that the court has jurisdiction, and, in effect it is an action to protect them in their rights under the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution.

"Feeling as I do, that this subpena goes way beyond any legitimate exercise of the right of the subpena duces tecum, I think that I am bound to grant the injunction as prayed for. That is the view that I take of it, that this subpena goes way beyond the legitimate use of the subpena duces tecum, and that the plaintiffs here have a legitimate interest in the controversy, and they have the right to be protected by the court when they claim protection under the fourth amendment of the Constitution."

Appeal Seen Remote.

Possibility of appeal of the case appeared remote. The Senate committee was not a party to the suit, but was represented by Crampton Harris, Alabama lawyer, as a "friend of the court." Paul Lesh, attorney for the Western Union and for T. B. Kingsbury, Western Union manager, the only defendants, told the court that the company held a "nonadversary" attitude toward the case.

Harris intimated in his arguments that the committee might choose to ignore the court order and demand that Kingsbury bring in the telegrams. He added that if the Western Union manager refused he might be held in contempt of the Senate. If he should deliver the

'Fool,' 'Jackass' Cries in House; Threat of Fist Fight Is Voiced

Catcalls and Jeers Bring Scathing Lecture on Dignity by Byrns.

By the United Press.

Angry shouts of "fool" and "jackass," catcalls, jeers and a challenge to a fist fight threw the House of Representatives into turmoil yesterday and brought nearly 400 members a scorching lecture on dignity from Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, asked permission to extend his remarks in the Congressional Record and add "about an inch" of data.

Representative Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington, recently convicted of disorderly conduct following a New Year's Day prank in which he jangled all the telephones of an apartment house here, arose and asked mischievously:

"What, of importance, could the gentleman put in 1 inch in the Record?"

The House roared. Zioncheck flushed and laughed good naturedly. He bobbed up again a few moments later when Representative William A. Ekwall (Republican), Oregon, blond and chunky, sought permission to make a 5-minute speech explaining his attitude toward communism.

"Does the gentleman wish to make a fool of himself?" fired Zioncheck.

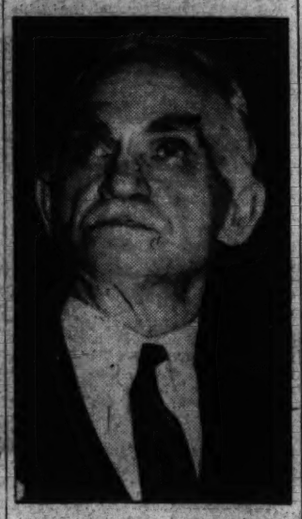
"If anyone could have made a bigger jackass of himself than the gentleman from Washington, I don't know who it is," Ekwall shouted.



SPEAKER BYRNS.

Party leaders leaped to their feet. A dozen voices clamored for recognition. Chairman John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, of the Rules Committee, demanded Ekwall's words be "taken down"—a move

Tax Exemption Due for Banks, Underwriters

Sub-Committee Also Near Agreement on 'Cushion' in Corporate Levy.

By Robert C. Albright.

House tax conferees last night reached virtual agreement to exempt banks and insurance companies from operations of the new corporations earning tax, and were near a similar understanding on "cushioning" small corporation surpluses against heavy taxation.

Breaking nearly a week's impasse on both issues, the Ways and Means tax sub-committee cloaked its progress with a strict secrecy rule, after new Treasury schedules revived hopes for safeguarding moderate corporate reserves against serious tax inroads.

Nearly a score of new tables were laid before the sub-committee by Treasury experts, four of which carried rates that would not only "cushion" reserves, but yield the full $620,000,000 annual revenue the President insists is needed.

Although the sub-committee arrived at no formal decision, it is understood a predominant majority favor the "cushion" principle and need only to pass definitely on the rates to be applied.

Schedule Favored.

One of the rate schedules most favored, which would yield all of the revenue required, and still offer a rate of taxation light enough on the lower brackets to permit accumulation of what members consider a reasonable surplus to be covered into reserve, is the following:

Undistributed Earnings (Per Cent)	Tax (Per Cent)
Up to 5 per cent	15 per cent
5 to 15 per cent	30 per cent
15 to 25 per cent	45 per cent
25 to 35 per cent	50 per cent
Over 35 per cent	55 per cent

Treasury statisticians told the sub-committee that corporate reserves over the past 15 years have averaged about 30 per cent of corporate earnings, and it was with a view to subjecting that first 30 per cent to a lower or "cushion" tax rate that the new levies were ordered compiled.

Virtual agreement to exempt banks and insurance companies

Auto Immunity Inquiry Action Due Saturday

Senate May Select Group on Traffic Privilege Resolution of King.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

First steps of a sweeping Senate investigation to determine the extent of alleged discrimination and special privilege practices in Washington traffic law enforcement are expected Saturday when a recent resolution by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, is laid before the Senate District Committee.

Indicating a special sub-committee would be appointed to begin the inquiry, Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, said earlier plans had been delayed pending completion of the current House traffic inquiry.

Cites Stories in The Post.

"We don't want to cover the same field" said King. "Provisions of my resolution are broad, but we have been waiting to see how wide a field the House investigation covers."

Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the House Traffic sub-committee, plans to conclude his hearings this week, it was announced. Only a few witnesses are still to be heard.

Visibly aroused over apparent abuses of certain Congressional privileges, Senator King, citing a series of stories in The Washington Post, introduced his resolution immediately following a recent Senate speech by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Strikes at "Immunity."

King asked that a comprehensive study of these reputed "privilege" abuses be made and that a complete report be presented to the Senate.

At Saturday's District committee meeting, it was said at King's office yesterday, the traffic resolution will be discussed with a view toward immediate action. It is likely that recommendations for appointment of an investigating sub-committee will follow.

In his resolution King struck at "Congressional immunity, special privileges and discrimination," and called attention to the possibility of inadequate laws governing strict

8-Year-Old Boy to Face Court In $50,000 Lumber Yard Blaze

An 8-year-old boy may face a Juvenile Court judge on a charge of setting a $50,000 fire that destroyed a Southeast Washington lumber yard, 10 garages and damaged 9 homes.

Police said David Miles, the boy, emphatically declared yesterday at the Fifth Precinct that he was quite capable of starting the fire.

His mother cannot believe that her small son could possibly have started the fire, but Detective Sergt. Watson Salkeld said, after an investigation, that much evidence points toward the boy.

Salkeld had spent several days questioning residents of the neighborhood around Eleventh, Twelfth, N and O streets southeast. Evidence pointed to David so the policeman took him into the Fifth Precinct Station for questioning.

David, according to police, built a small fire in the rear of a shed to keep warm. The fire spread to the lumber yard of Galliher & Klimkiewiecz and David ran home.

The boy's father, a P. W. A. worker at the Navy Yard, said his son was at home playing with his brothers and sister at the time the fire started.

Three false alarms within 20 minutes kept firemen and police on the jump early yesterday.

The alarms in rapid succession were sounded at Nevada avenue and Quesada street northwest, Thirty-ninth street and Military road northwest, and Forty-first and Garrison streets northwest.

Holt Charges Denied in Full By Hopkins

Says Maladministration and Politics Refuted by Field Report.

By Sidney Olson.

Repeated charges of maladministration and political usage of the Works Progress Administration in West Virginia made by Senator Rush D. Holt, of that State, were denied in every detail in a calm but thorough repudiation last night by Federal WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Holt immediately retorted that "He (Hopkins) is probably 'too damned dumb' to know what is going on in West Virginia," and that "Investigation by the WPA forces was like sending Baby Face Nelson to investigate Dillinger."

Hopkins' statement, based on field investigations in West Virginia by Field Representative Alan Johnstone, asserted:

1. Not a person on relief rolls in West Virginia secured work through political influence on WPA projects.

2. All appointments to administrative places were made on a basis of merit.

3. Over 60 per cent of administrative appointees had no political indorsement whatever.

4. Senator Matthew M. Neeley (Democrat), West Virginia, accused by Holt of using WPA administrative appointments to build up a political machine, is exonerated, as the field report shows that Senator Neely was in the Orient on official business during the formative period of the West Virginia WPA.

Brother's Dismissal Upheld.

5. The dismissal by F. W. McCullough, WPA administrator for West Virginia, of M. S. Holt, jr., brother of Senator Holt, is sustained. M. S. Holt had been temporarily reinstated as district engineer in the Parkersburg area pending investigation of his brother's charges.

6. The charge of Senator Holt that "I made a speech against WPA on Monday, and my brother was fired out of it on Friday," is refuted. The report shows that McCullough had recommended M. S. Holt's dismissal on maladministration charges three days before Senator Holt's speech.

7. The dismissal of M. S. Holt had been recommended after an inquiry into the Parkersburg office showed that the Senator's brother had admitted being in charge of the area where investigators found "prosecution of unapproved projects, overloading of projects with supervisory personnel, and improper placing of administrative personnel on project pay rolls."

8. Johnstone's report to Hopkins concluded with the assertion that:

"Early in February of this year, subscriptions had been solicited and taken from the employes of the Parkersburg office to pay the expenses of broadcasting a speech delivered by Senator Holt at St. Mary's, West Virginia, on February 7."

Senator Holt had promised in the Senate that if Hopkins "whitewashed" the West Virginia WPA regime, he would support a national probe of the relief activities of this Administration. Such probes have been proposed by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Holt Threatens Action.

Holt said last night he would take the floor today to "sweepingly dispose of Cocky Harry," referring to Hopkins.

In a series of speeches in the Senate, from February 17 to March 6, Senator Holt had charged things ranging from the assertion that two West Virginians now holding Federal positions had been "lobbyists" for the Appalachian Coals, Inc., to others that WPA Administrator McCullough in West Virginia was a "42 per cent loan shark."

In his statement to the press last night, Holt said:

"Using Mr. Hopkins' own favorite expression, he is probably 'too damned dumb' to know what is going on in West Virginia. I had heard from the start that the matter was to be whitewashed and that promises had been assured those interested that the report would be satisfactory. Investigation by the WPA forces was like sending Baby Face Nelson to investigate Dillinger. They are all members of the same gang. I challenge Mr. Hopkins or any member of the gang to disprove a single solitary statement I made on the floor of the United States Senate.

"The whole purpose of the investigation, I found out after having these men trailed in West Virginia, was to try and find out things about me, not to investigate their own rottenness which has now been de-

Fay Templeton, 70, Is in Actors' Home

Englewood, N. J., March 11 (U.P.).—Fay Templeton, 70, once a queen of musical comedy, is in the Actors Fund Home here, where she may spend her remaining days. She arrived from Pittsburgh several days ago.

The fortune she earned during many years on the stage has vanished. Friends said the former toast of Broadway refused hospitality because "it would be charity." She felt differently about the home because she helped to support it in her lush years.

"There's no use putting off the evil day any longer," Miss Templeton said.

Second Emergency Session of Cabinet

Real Fear Felt French Will Open Hostilities on the Reich.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 11—Great Britain, despite a reported French threat to quit the League of Nations, was believed set on a middle-of-the-road policy for tomorrow's vital conversations over Germany's breach of the Locarno Treaty.

There were reports Prime Minister Baldwin himself would try his hand at steadying the rocking continental situation.

While Locarno representatives converged on London amid a tense air of threatening uncertainty, the cabinet met in emergency session for a second time in eight hours tonight.

For nearly two hours it listened to reports from Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Viscount Halifax, privy seal, on yesterday's Locarno talks in Paris, at which France demanded Germany be compelled to withdraw some of her troops from the Rhineland.

Another Session Likely.

A further cabinet session is expected tomorrow morning, but there was no indication it would change the policy.

This includes giving a hearing to Adolf Hitler's proposals for peace pacts as a substitute for the shattered Locarno.

Authoritaitve quarters thought it logical that Baldwin, as an original signer of Locarno, should head the British delegation trying to reframe security and prevent chaos.

France's reported threat to quit the League if Britain does not back her in a strong stand apparently failed to impress greatly diplomatic and official quarters in London, which frankly doubted such an irrevocable step would be taken.

"Desperately Serious."

"That is bluff," an important diplomat remarked. "But there is no doubt France is desperately serious."

The real fear in London was that France, seeing no chance of punishing Germany collectively, might decide to do the job herself, immediately presenting League members with the question of determination of responsibilities. It was believed the cabinet studied this question tonight.

The Locarno conferees, including representatives of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, will meet in the old cabinet room of the foreign office, an anteroom of the "Locarno room."

Intense activity was noted in diplomatic quarters as envoys kept contacts with each other and their capitals. The foreign office discussed the situation preliminary to the League Council Saturday in St. James' Palace.

Observers, checking off membership of the Council, agreed it would be deadlocked if called upon to rule between divergent Franco-British views.

Italy May Hold Key.

The position of Italy, which may eventually be the key factor, was not disclosed as reports reached London from Rome that Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador here, who will represent Premier Mussolini, would adopt a passive position because of sancti s.

Meanwhile, in the House of Lords, Earl Stanhope, undersecretary for foreign affairs, reaffirmed Britain's belief in the League.

"There is a possibility we may get in a war or of collective action in various parts of the world," said Stanhope, "but unless you undertake collective action you cannot hope for collective security. The government's view is that the risk is worth taking."

"I have every confidence in the ultimate issue of the conversations," he said.

King May Wed Greek Princess

Dark-Haired Greek Princess Believed Consort Bachelor King Had in Mind in Asking Parliament for Family Funds.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, March 11.—Edward, bachelor King of England, told the House of Commons today that he might marry and tonight many Britons believed a dark-haired Greek princess named Eugenie may be their next queen.

The hint that King Edward was looking for a bride came in a message to Parliament dealing with what British call the civil list. In America it would be called the king's salary and expense account.

Parliament makes a financial settlement at the beginning of each king's reign. Edward's message today asked the House of Commons to renew the income received by his father, the late King George.

Marriage Possible.

In that message was this paragraph:

"His Majesty desires that the contingency of his marriage should be taken into account so that in that event, there should be provision for Her Majesty the Queen and the members of His Majesty's family, corresponding to the provisions which the House of Commons has been willing to make in like circumstances in the past."

Up jumped William J. Thorn, blunt-spoken member of the Labor Party, determined to get an answer to a question that has agitated the empire for 20 years.

"May I ask," he said, "whether His Majesty has given any guarantee he is going to get married?"

There was laughter, in which the stiff-necked chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain—who was reading the King's message—did not join. Nor did he reply. Instead he droned on with the message.

England's Pastime.

Soon the news got around London, and Englishmen again were indulging in what has become a national pastime—picking a bride for Edward VIII. Everybody has suggestions; in fact, there were so many suggestions The London Star printed a front-page box and under it the caption: "Her Majesty the Queen." Inside the box was a big question mark.

The familiar list of European royalty was reviewed by the amateur matchmakers and one of the first names to pop up was that of Juliana, plump princess of The Netherlands. Grand Duchess Kyre of Russia also was mentioned.

But persons who usually make the smartest guesses about such things chose Princess Eugenie of Greece, 26-year-old cousin of Princess Marina, who married King Edward's brother, Prince George.

There are political and religious difficulties in the way of Edward's marriage with any member of

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, March 11.—Seeking "escape from mediocrity," two honeymooning couples sailed for the South Seas today to live in thatched huts and eat fish with natives of a tropical isle.

"Our folks think we are a wee bit cracked," said brown-haired, serious-eyed Marjorie Hogan, one of the brides.

The expedition is a sequel to the double wedding February 28 in Pontiac, Mich., of Murrill F. Walls, 28, Pontiac High School teacher, to Amber Penny, 21; and Archie Hogan, 23, Albion College athlete, to a schoolmate, Marjorie Faddis, 21.

"We decided it all inside an hour—to get married and go to Tahiti, I mean," explained diminutive Mrs. Walls, looking very jaunty in a green and white silk costume.

Said Hogan, who postponed taking a hotel management course at Cornell for this adventure: "This proposition appealed to me more. I expect to gain from it. The experience and travel ought to be valuable."

"I don't like alarm clocks," remarked Walls, who aspires to be an actor. It was Walls who rebelled against "mediocrity."

He didn't like Potomac High School teaching with the prospect of "working hard all your life and getting nothing for it at the end except maybe being called an honest man."

Life nowadays, he said, is fraught with "economic uncertainty, war threats, cultural retrogression."

Walls sketched what plans are made so far—to leave the liner Maunganui at Papeete, assemble supplies, get transportation to Moorea or some other island where there are few or no whites, obtain a hut or two and live like natives. Shorts and trunks will be their attire.

"We had cosmetics showers before we left," said Mrs. Walls, "so we're all fixed."

Paris Is Ready to Quit League in Fear of Future Carnage.

Reich Punishment Will Be Demanded

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Paris, March 11.—French talk of a preventive war against Adolf Hitler was coupled tonight with a threat of withdrawal from the League of Nations with her allies on the eve of momentous conferences on Germany's violation of the Locarno Treaty.

Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin went to London for vital conversations, beginning tomorrow, French officials said, almost convinced he should make a preventive war against Hitler now, rather than "submit to carnage two years from now, when treaty breakers will be strong."

The French delegation carried to the London Locarno and League talks a mandate to stand firm for punishment of the Reich.

France, officials said, is resolved to throw her all into the crisis if necessary to preserve "the future peace of Europe," as Premier Albert Sarraut told Parliament yesterday.

"War Ahead Anyhow."

An authoritative French spokesman said:

"We know war is coming in two years, anyhow. We might as well have it now, while we are prepared.

"The only way in which Hitler's troops will leave the Rhineland is for the Locarno signatories to drive them out, but a stitch in time saves nine.

"There comes a time when a nation refuses to be humiliated in front of the world. French honor is at stake and we are ready to draw the sword if necessary to keep it unsullied."

The army commission of the Chamber of Deputies viewed the situation so seriously it decided to send a six-man delegation to inspect frontier fortifications tonight.

Amid fears of possible war, 20 deputies made a pilgrimage to the battlefields of Verdun, where France and Germany once locked in a world conflict.

France to Aid Italy.

Premier Mussolini's willingness to stand with France was said frankly by officials to have brought France to pledge to work for the removal of sanctions against Italy.

France, they added, probably will shortly abolish a prohibition against Italian goods and loosen financial restrictions without awaiting action by the League.

Should France do this, they said, her allies probably would follow, especially Yugoslavia and Rumania, whose sanctions against Italy were never enthusiastic. If France quits the League, they added, these others probably would do so also.

Flandin left for London accompanied by four advisers and his daughter, Mme. Breguet, wife of a military plane manufacturer. He was reported ready to tell Britain that France is not alone in her desire to see Germany punished.

Officials said Britain must back France in order to prevent "the death of the League of Nations."

"This Is a Poker Game."

One asserted: "This time, France will be satisfied with no gestures. Germany must remove at least 70 per cent of her troops from the Rhineland. The world must know that Germany has ceded.

"This is a poker game, but France knows that she has a royal flush, and, if the cards are laid on the table, she is certain of winning. Therefore she is willing to go the limit."

This source admitted, however, he could not see how Hitler, to insure his prestige as a dictator, could withdraw a large percentage of his troops.

An official said "other powers whose policies are based on collective security and who are determined to support the French and Belgian stand before the League of Nations have informed us that, if the treaties seemed worthless, they will not hesitate to quit the League.

In diplomatic quarters this was taken as meaning Soviet Russia and the Little Entente, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

The administrative committee of

Nuns, Priests Fleeing Spain As Riots Spread

Burning of Churches Increases; Catholic Schools Suspend Classes.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 11.—Catholic priests and nuns, threatened with violence as political disturbances continued in central and southern Spain, were fleeing for the frontier and other points of safety tonight.

At Madrid, Seville, Malaga and other cities, the clerics were reported abandoning their rectories and convents and resident students were being returned to their homes after Extremists threatened to burn religious schools.

The wave of convent and church burnings since the Leftists won an election victory has been much more widespread than that which followed the overthrow of the monarchy. Property damage may exceed that of the memorable "conflagration day" of April 11, 1931, when millions of pesetas worth of church property was destroyed.

Priests and nuns, thus far, have not been subjected to physical attacks, but fear of mob violence has led many to seek safety. In Seville, nuns have disguised themselves in ordinary dress and removed relics and other religious objects to places of concealment.

More than 50 persons have been killed in the post-election disturbances and more than 30 churches and convents attacked. One priest at Ceheginin, Murcia Province, shot one rioter dead when a crowd of demonstrators burned his home.

Strong forces of police and civil guards patrolled the Madrid suburb of Vallecas, where rioters earlier in the day looted a number of business establishments.

It was understood that a train load of nuns left for points in Northern Spain, where they will be given refuge in private homes. A number of nuns were reported to have crossed the borders to Gibraltar, France and Portugal.

Meanwhile, the government maintained strict censorship not permitting the Spanish press to mention disorders.

Madrid (Thursday), March 12 (U.P.).—Infuriated mobs formed in Madrid early today and threatened to sweep through the city burning and pillaging in sympathy with Red rioters in southern Spain, where more than 20 have been killed and 70 wounded since Saturday.

Reinforced police squads and armored cars were ordered to patrol every street and alley in Madrid.

Conscripts' Furloughs Canceled by Holland

Amsterdam, March 11 (U.P.).—Dutch army conscripts due to go on furlough Saturday have been ordered retained until further notice, Premier Hendrikus Colijn announced in a broadcast to the nation tonight. He cited international tension.

Guffey Coal Act Is Denounced In High Court

Large Crowd Hears Legal Attacks on Two Major New Deal Laws.

By the Associated Press.

A legalistic bombardment against two New Deal laws—the Guffey coal and the 1933 securities acts—resounded for three hours yesterday in the Supreme Court.

Frederick H. Wood, New York attorney, and Charles I. Dawson, former Kentucky Federal district judge, denounced the Guffey act as unconstitutional on the grounds that it violated State rights, was an improper delegation of legislative authority, and took property without "due process of law."

The securities act was assailed by James M. Beck, former Republican solicitor general, who contended it was a measure to "coerce American citizens to waive constitutional rights."

After Beck had concluded, the court took the securities case under consdieration. The arguments were begun Tuesday in a suit brought by J. Edward Jones, New York dealer in oil stock.

Arguments on the Guffey measure, intended to permit Federal regulation of prices, wages and hours in the soft coal industry, will continue today and probably part of tomorrow.

Courtroom Packed.

Dawson will be followed by the Government's spokesman, John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney General. Wood will then offer a rebuttal.

The courtroom was packed yesterday. In all, 1,174 persons entered the marble-columned chamber to hear part of the arguments. The courtroom holds only 320 at one time.

Wood, who successfully argued for the Government in the gold clause cases and with equal success against the Government on the NRA, spoke two hours.

He began in a calm, even tone, but before long, as he warmed to his subject, he was shouting. Chief Justice Hughes smilingly asked Wood to lower his voice.

"To accept the Government's contention," Wood said, "would potentially subject all matters which affect interstate commerce to Federal regulation, resulting in erection of a centralized government of unlimited authority not contemplated by the Constitution."

He added that if the power to regulate interstate commerce "cannot be exerted as the NRA decision holds that it cannot, to stimulate industrial activity in a period of Nation-wide depression by an assumption of control over all industry, clearly it may not be exerted to assume control of a particular industry for the purpose of increasing the share of the national income derived by those engaged in that industry."

Arguments Summarized.

Dawson, who held New Deal laws, including NRA, invalid while he was a Federal judge, emphasized that the Guffey act attempted to regulate "matters purely local." He summarized his arguments as follows:

"The Government has no power to provide for regulations dealing with the production end of the industry which is inherently local.

"Regulation of the price of intra-State sales is beyond the reach of Congress.

"If production or intra-State sales are beyond the control of Congress, the whole act must fall."

Impending Impeachment Trial of Judge Ritter in Senate Recalls Louderback 'Farce.'

By Franklyn Waltman

FOR the twelfth time in its history, the Senate has been sworn as a court of impeachment and is preparing to hear evidence of charges of misbehavior, high crimes and misdemeanors in the conduct of a corporate receivership proceedings against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of the Southern District of Florida.

The Senate has no more solemn and serious duty than that of trying an impeachment of a member of the Federal judiciary for the reason that nothing is of greater importance in this country than that the integrity of the courts should be unblemished—that, in the words of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, a judge "in reality must be a paragon of official virtue."

And to quote Senator Thomas further "if this land is to remain a land of law, then whenever those who are guardians of the law and of the rights of citizens are hailed into court on a charge of high crimes and misdemeanors the very Government itself is on trial."

Trial of impeachment cases, with the exception of passing on the qualifications of its own members, is the only judicial power of the Senate. Thus it will be interesting, in view of the many proposals to confer on Congress the judicial power of the Federal Government, to see how the Senate acquits itself in this case. Its record in the last impeachment trial was not a creditable one.

* * *

The last impeachment trial held by the Senate was that of Federal Judge Harold Louderback, of the Northern California District, and if memory serves correctly, the charges against him also grew out of Federal receivership proceedings. He was acquitted. The manner in which the Louderback trial was conducted was aptly described several days ago in the House by Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, the chairman of the House managers presenting the charges against the California jurist.

"When we concluded the trial of the case in the California impeachment matter in the Senate—and I say this with all respect for the Senate and the way they tried that case," asserted Mr. Sumners, "I thought there had never been a greater farce.

"We offered evidence when not more than three Senators were sitting * * * We sat there for ten days and offered evidence, and one of the leading Senators told me when I asked him about the matter that he would not convict anybody when he had not heard the testimony against him. We had no way of tying Senators to their seats."

Hardly a stronger indictment against the Senate sitting in its judicial capacity could be drawn. Those who observed the Senate during the Louderback case know that it is true. Yet in recent months hardly a day has passed but that some Senator has not criticized the Federal courts or proposed that their power be restricted, thus increasing the judicial power of the Senate.

Conscientious members of the Senate feel shame over that body's apparent indifference to the impeachment trial of Judge Louderback. Many, however, are inclined to blame that "farce" on the system rather than on the members who absented themselves from the daily hearing of evidence.

When it was originally provided that the Senate should hear impeachments, it is contended, it was not anticipated that the body should ever have a membership of 96, an unwieldy jury indeed. Moreover, the complexity of present-day life has so increased the duties of members of the Senate, it is argued, that few members of the body can devote their full time for ten days or more in hearing evidence.

In an effort to solve this problem Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee almost a year ago persuaded the Senate to pass a resolution authorizing the presiding officer of the Senate, on order of that body, to name a committee of 12 Senators to receive evidence and take testimony in impeachment trials—such evidence to be referred in transcript form to the Senate for its decision. Safeguards are provided whereby the Senate could summon before it for further examination any witness whose testimony was not clear.

* * *

The Senate has not yet resorted to this innovation in impeachment trials, several lawyers in that chamber contending that such a procedure is of dubious constitutionality since the duty of hearing impeachment trials is placed on the entire body—not on a committee.

But it is doubtful whether the Ashurst plan would solve the difficulty, since Senators who will not attend impeachment sessions and will not read what transpired there cannot be expected to read the transcript taken by one of its committees.

The point of all this is that criticism of Federal judges—of whatever station—comes in poor grace from Senators who are negligent of their duties in maintaining the integrity of that judiciary, either before or after their appointment.

Undoubtedly there are incompetent—perhaps venal—judges on the Federal bench. Some of the incompetents have found their way to the bench in the last three years. But the fact seldom mentioned is that the Senate approved the appointment of every member of the Federal judiciary, and if judges are not qualified for their work it is first the fault of the President, who appointed them and secondly the fault of the Senate which confirmed them.

Far too often men with political influence have been named to the Federal bench as a patronage reward to a State boss—perhaps a Senator—and far too often their nominations have been rushed through the Senate with only cursory examination, once the majority Senators from that State have given their approval. Hearings are held only when one of the Senators objected or when the appointee has been charged with misconduct. Strange as it seems, hardly anyone cares whether the appointee is qualified professionally to be a guardian of the law.

Item Taken From Treasury-Postoffice Bill in Stormy Debate.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate threw out $26,500,000 for ocean mail subsidies yesterday, apparently forcing a showdown on measures to set up a system of direct aid for the American merchant marine.

The subsidy was eliminated from the $975,000,000 Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill after a stormy debate. The bill then was quickly passed and sent to conference with the House.

The Senate's action pointed to an early battle between foes of some direct subsidy measure, who are threatening a filibuster and Senate leaders who claimed President Roosevelt favored a compromise bill introduced by Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the Commerce Committee.

While Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, in charge of the Treasury-Postoffice bill, conceded the committee eliminated the ocean mail appropriation to force action on substitute legislation, he said it was the understanding of the committee that in event this failed, the $26,500,000 appropriation would be attached to a later deficiency bill.

Fraudulent Contracts Charged.

During the heated debate, Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, charged the present ocean mail contracts were faudulent. This was hotly denied by Senator White (Republican), Maine.

Supporters of the rival ship subsidy bills meanwhile continued to battle in the Senate Commerce Committee over the form of the new legislation to be submitted to the Senate.

Copeland put forward the compromise measure worked out by the Postoffice and Commerce departments which provides a maximum 50 per cent construction subsidy, an operating subsidy sufficient to offset lower foreign costs and a lending fund from which owners might borrow 75 per cent of construction money for new ships.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, sponsored another bill limiting construction subsidies to 33 1-3 per cent. It provides, however, that in event private capital could not be interested in building or operating the merchant lines, the Government could do it.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, asserted he would accept the Guffey bill with certain amendments, but warned that with "about 20 others," including Senator Black, he would try to kill the Copeland bill with a filibuster.

Copeland Pleads for Subsidy.

On the Senate floor, Copeland pleaded for restoration of the ocean mail subsidy until it was certain substitute legislation would be passed.

Denying the present contracts under which shipping companies are paid a high mileage rate for carrying the mail were fraudulent, White asserted that President Roosevelt, the Postoffice Department and the Attorney General had all the information concerning the contracts and had made no move to attack them or cancel them.

Glass voiced no direct opposition to a ship subsidy, but declared "we ought to stop this miserable fraud" of appropriating $26,500,000 annually to carry ocean mail when "we are told it actually costs less than $4,000,000" to transport it.

He approved the President's insistence that a direct subsidy be granted as a substitute. He said he had been informed that Mr. Roosevelt favored the Copeland bill.

In the uproar that followed Minority Leader Bertram Snell made a point of quorum and the bells summoning members to the chamber were rung.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, moved successfully to have the harsh words eliminated from the record.

Rising from his chair, Speaker Byrns snapped his criticism of a "custom that is growing in the House in which members deal in personalities." He warned that in the future these rules would be strictly enforced against Democrat and Republican alike.

Rattle of Applause.

A rattle of applause greeted his remarks. But a moment later, Zioncheck began what appeared to be a half-hearted apology to Ekwall, who still had the floor, and was brought up sharply by Maverick, who said the Washington Congressman was renewing his previous attack on the Oregonian.

"Let him come out in the corridor, I'll take care of him," Ekwall said menacingly.

The chair upheld Maverick, and the incident ended. A few seconds later the House began consideration of the legislative supply bill, and Zioncheck was the first speaker.

"Why can't we have dignity in this House?" he asked.

Robinson Submits Plan To Legalize Holt's Pay

By the Associated Press.

To insure the legality of the salary paid Senator Rush Holt and his office force from January 3 to June 21, 1935, Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday introduced an amendment to the legislative supply bill specifically authorizing such payments.

Senator Holt was elected to the term beginning January 3, 1935, before he had attained the constitutional age of 30. To avoid a contest he refrained from taking the oath as Senator until his thirtieth birthday six months later.

Business Gains Over Last Year Are Reported

2 U.S. Agencies Show Level Higher for January and February.

By the Associated Press.

Maintenance of higher business levels in the early part of 1936 as compared with last year was reported yesterday by two government departments.

"Business activity," the Commerce Department said, "has declined moderately below the December peak, but the major indexes for both January and February were higher than for the corresponding months of 1935."

The Federal Reserve Board's February department store report showed sales 13 per cent over February, 1935. This was accounted for partly by the extra leap year trading day.

Sales were at about the same level as in January, and the gains were reported general in all reserve districts.

At his press conference, Secretary Roper noted a break in the recent downward trend of automobile sales, with a 30 per cent gain in the week ended March 4 over the previous week.

Better weather accounted for much of the change, altering a picture that had been regarded with some concern in automobile circles, Roper said.

The Commerce Department noted that the January and February recession from December was "influenced by special and temporary conditions," including the severe weather.

The department regarded as significant "the substantial increases in both employment and pay rolls in the durable goods industries in comparison with a year ago."

An upturn in gross freight revenue of Class 1 steam railways from $2,631,505,040 in 1934 to $2,787,018,189 last year was reported yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Passenger revenue increased from $345,887,351 to $357,480,974.

The commission also reported February employment of those railways at 1,029,996 persons, an increase of 6.3 per cent over the same month a year ago.

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 11 (AP).—Secretary Perkins told the Civitans Club today that industrial employment mounted 31 per cent between April, 1933, and December, 1935.

At the same time, she said, industrial pay rolls had increased 61 per cent.

The Labor Department chief compared these figures with a 33 per cent drop in employment from April, 1930, to April, 1933, and a decline of 53 per cent in pay rolls during that same period.

"The figures cited do not represent all the gains in private industry in which approximately 5,000,000 men and women have been returned to jobs since the low point of the depression," she said.

"Farmers, merchants, manufacturers and investors have also experienced real improvement in their affairs.

"With the heavy industries showing an increase in employment which began last summer, we should be able to look forward to further gains."

Tax Exemptions Approved

from the new corporation taxes was reached yesterday in the face of the fact that the Treasury had computed its $620,000,000 revenue estimates on a basis that allowed no exemption for these fiduciary institutions.

Under the understanding reached by the sub-committee, both banks and insurance companies would be subject to the same taxes now current, but these afford preferential treatment, giving banks special exemptions for income of a given character, and allowing insurance companies to exempt premiums collected, etc.

The sub-committee was told that if banks and insurance companies were the only fiduciaries exempted, the loss in revenue would not be substantial. Treasury spokesmen testified that in 1933 bank earnings approximated $18,000,000, and those of insurance companies, $33,000,000. They estimated that these returns would be doubled in 1936, reaching approximately $33,000,000 for banks and $66,000,000 for insurance companies, or a total of $12,000,000. At most, exemption of this class of companies from the new graduated rates could mean a loss of only $34,000,000 from the estimated $620,000,000, it was said.

Treasury Agreeable.

Sub-committee members took the position that they are not willing to jeopardize financial institutions of this character by the imposition of a heavy tax, and felt the loss of revenue resulting was not sufficient to make an issue of the question. The Treasury had "reserved judgment" as to what should be done about banks and insurance companies, but in the final analysis granted there was room for special treatment.

In an open telegram to President Roosevelt, Harrison E. Spangler, director of the Western division of the Republican National Committee, warned last night that enactment of the Administration's proposed program would "further retard recovery," the Associated Press reported from Chicago.

"The demand which you have made on Congress for a new tax bill is already having a disastrous effect on the business of the country," Spangler wired. "If it or any substitute is enacted, the costs of living for the common people will mount higher and higher."

Spangler said the President's plan came as a "shock" in view of the fact that he "repeatedly assured the country during the past three years that NO new taxes would be levied." He said that instead the Government should cut costs by discharging "two hundred and fifty thousand of the new political appointees, which you through Mr. Farley have placed upon the pay rolls since your inauguration."

See "Grieving Spell."

The National Association of Manufacturers, through John C. Gall, associate counsel, meanwhile warned that the Nation is in for a "grieving spell" of taxation, but urged that "business men withhold judgment until they have had an opportunity to study the details" of the President's new tax plan.

Speaking in Hartford, Conn., Gall said the President's proposal "holds possibilities for both good and evil."

"We may criticize the conditions which make new taxes necessary," he said. "We may deplore the fact that the present Administration has been ruled by a squanderlust. We may, with justification, point out the extravagance and waste which have accompanied Governmental experiments of the past three years. But the accounts must be settled."

Gall said the National Association of Manufacturers is withholding judgment until the bill is reported in final form.

People's Lobby Proposal.

The people's lobby in a statement last night said it will ask the Ways and Means Committee to levy $1,000,000,000 in taxes on corporation "liquid surpluses," repeal of an equal amount of Federal consumption taxes, and collection of $2,000,000,000 additional revenue from personal income taxes, estate taxes, and taxes on "beneficiaries of Government expenditures."

Aside from a few special taxes that may be levied to make up for losses from modification of the President's original tax proposals, however, it did not appear highly likely that the Ways and Means sub-committee would go far outside the Administration's own program. Special taxes being talked about informally include increased rates on beer, liquor and even automobiles.

Word that the tax sub-committee is now functioning under a secrecy agreement was brought to reporters by Chairman Samuel B. Hill.

"The lid is on now," said Hill. "I can't say a thing."

To this, Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, added very little.

"We have clarified the atmosphere on a good many matters, and are getting near something," he said.

The sub-committee is expected to conclude preliminary discussion of the corporation tax proposals today, and pass on to the proposed "windfall" tax, which would impose a 90 per cent tax on processors who benefited from a refund of impounded and unpaid processing taxes. The constitutionality of this latter proposal is still questionable.

A more controversial issue lies ahead in the Administration's recommendation of new processing levies, scaled down below the old rate, but broadened to include other than farm commodities. There is substantial sub-committee opposition to this proposal.

Three New "Cushion" Plans.

Three additional "cushioned" corporation tax schedules submitted yesterday included one ranging from a 15 per cent tax on less than 8 per cent of surplus to a 55 per cent levy on over 32 per cent; another ranged from a 10 per cent tax on less than 8 per cent surplus, to 55 per cent on over 40 per cent, and still another spread from a 10 per cent levy on less than 5 per cent of reserves to a 55 per cent tax on over 45 per cent. The highest loss under any of these schedules was estimated at $55,000,000, and in most cases there would be no loss whatever.

In addition, the Treasury submitted new schedules following the fixed income tax brackets of the present corporation income tax, and ranging from 20 to 33½ per cent tax.

One of the Treasury's later tables would follow the brackets of the individual income tax, imposing a maximum of 87.5 per cent tax on undistributed income in excess of $5,000,000.

Both Sides See Victory in New Strike Parleys

Leaders in New York Building Fight Confer Again With LaGuardia.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 11.—Both sides foresaw victory tonight as strikers and employers conferred again with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in search of a settlement basis for the 11-day-old building service strike.

"I predict victory within 48 hours," said James J. Bambrick, strike leader, as he prepared to attend the conference.

"The strike was a flop, and we knew it was going to be a flop," said Walter Gordon Merritt, spokesman for the owners.

Meanwhile, gum-booted pickets sloshed through a drizzling rain before more than 2,000 buildings in the metropolitan area. One hundred and fifty strikers, Bambrick said, had appealed for Federal relief to tide them over the strike period, and it was announced at strike headquarters that many others were planning to follow suit.

Owners claimed service was near normal in all buildings affected, but the city health department continued to receive calls from tenants for garbage removal, heat and emergency elevator service.

Bambrick said the conference "looked like it might be another all-night session" after the mayor had conferred for a half-hour with the realty representatives in the reception room of his offices and then returned to his desk to talk with the union officials.

Mayor LaGuardia asked the disputants to confer again after listening to a radio address by Merritt last night in which he said the operators were ready to arbitrate minimum wages. Merritt emphasized, however, that the realty advisory board would arbitrate nothing else.

The union, on the other hand, entered the conference prepared to put its men back to work immediately after selection of an arbitrator to mediate all its demands. That has been the mayor's repeated suggestion as a basis for settlement.

Although Bambrick claimed the operators were "about to capitulate," there was no apparent weakness in the landlords' front.

N. Y. Strikebreaker Raid Traps 31 Men

New York, March 11 (AP).—Detectives tonight raided the American Confidential Bureau, Inc., detective agency furnishing replacements for building service strikers, and seized 31 men for questioning.

"We didn't like the looks of some of the mugs looking for jobs there," said Detective Lieut. Martin Owens.

At least two of the men seized were well-known police characters. One, Salvatore Arcidacio, was convicted with Salvatore Spitale under a State "public enemy law" making it a crime for criminals to consort.

Police made it clear management of the bureau was not involved.

Two patrol wagons were called to the agency headquarters.

Lieut. Martin said the 31 would be fingerprinted and that if any were found to be wanted or known to be involved in rackets they would be run through the line-up tomorrow.

Dr. Kurt Simon, whose Park avenue apartment was looted of a fur coat and jewelry valued at $100,000 by a "replacement" elevator operator, declared today "the people of New York are put at the mercy of known criminals, hired as strikebreakers."

Dr. Simon, former publisher of the Frankfurter Zeitung, famous German newspaper, left Germany because of Nazi persecution. He professed to see little difference between dangers of living in Germany and in New York.

"Kidnapers, murderers or worse are free to break into our homes," he complained. "I believe that if the police investigated records of the men being hired they would find 50 to 60 per cent have criminal records."

Police arrested Joseph Flanagan, "replacement" employe at the building occupied by Dr. Simon, and held him in $25,000 bail after he allegedly admitted he knew the man who looted the Simon apartment. He was charged with acting in concert.

The strikers, through their leader, James J. Bambrick, today offered $200 reward for arrest and conviction of "any so-called strikebreaker who assaults or robs the renting public of New York."

Bambrick asserted tenants were living in fear of assault and robbery by the replacement workers.

Youth, 22, Executed In Shoe Theft Slaying

Columbus, Ohio, March 11 (AP).—Twenty-two-year-old Norman Peacock died in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary tonight for the murder of a Cincinnati couple from whom he tried to steal a pair of shoes.

Peacock entered the death chamber at 8:01 p. m., smiled feebly at the 90 men there to witness his execution, and remarked: "It won't hurt, will it?"

He received the first 1,850 volt charge at 8:03 and was pronounced dead seven minutes later by Dr. George W. Keil, prison physician.

Death Elevator Passes District Inspector Test

Lift in Which Youth Was Killed Shows No Defects, Oehmann Says.

District elevator inspectors yesterday reported they had been unable to discover any defect in design or mechanism of the automatic elevator at 7611 Georgia avenue in which 14-year-old Harvey Crowell apparently was crushed to death Tuesday night.

Report of the inspectors, J. M. Brown and J. A. Black, was made public by Col. John W. Oehmann, District building inspector. He has ordered a second inspection to be made today, Col. Oehmann announced. Following report on that inspection he will submit the findings to Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, and to police investigating the lad's death, Colonel Oehmann said.

Although no official was prepared to state a definite conclusion on the cause of the death, first fears that his body had been tossed into the elevator dwindled.

Dr. Magruder said the case would remain open until he had received final reports from the elevator inspectors and police.

A coroners jury will be sworn in today at 11:30 a. m. preparatory to an inquest, although Dr. MacDonald said he is not now sure an inquest will be held.

The boy was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe H. Crowell and lived on the second floor of the apartment with his parents. He was an honor student at Paul Junior High School and the president of his class.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. from the Takoma Park Baptist Church. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Baby Saved as Surgeon Takes Organs From Lun

A surgeon, who requested his name be withheld, said Gary's organs, including his stomach, spleen and intestines, were in his left lung. The lung was unable to expand and the heart also had been pushed over to the right side.

The surgeon cut away three ribs to perform the delicate operation, using tissue from the mother's body.

Murder Figures' Finances Sifted

New York, March 11 (AP).—Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd investigating the Drukman murder case began a subpoena service tonight upon Wall Street to check financial records of 39 persons.

More than 1,000 printed subpoenas, each bearing names of all the individuals, were ready for mail and personal service.

On the list of persons whose records he seeks were Irwin Steingut, former speaker and present Democratic leader of the State Assembly; Chief Assembly Clerk Carmine Anzalone, District Attorney W. F. X. Geoghan and nine assistants, four policemen, a grand jury clerk and two former grand jury men in the Drukman case, and an attorney who represented one of the three convicted murderers.

Todd, supplanting Geoghan for the trial, obtained the convictions on the indictments of a special grand jury after a first jury had failed to indict. Rumors of bribery were recurrent in the case.

Todd has told Supreme Court Justice John McCooey that he had evidence one of Geoghan's assistants had been paid $2,000 by Leo P. Byk, called a "slot machine czar."

Youth Is Guilty In 'Baby Doll' Canada Murder

Convicted in Death of 3, Kidnaping of Infant to Aid Mother.

Dorchester, N. B., March 11 (AP). Arthur Bannister, 20-year-old lumberjack, smiled broadly today as he was convicted of murder in the weird "baby doll murder-kidnap" case—a conviction carrying a mandatory sentence of death.

Cracking jokes, he was sent back to his cell to await the trial of his 18-year-old brother, Daniel, on a similar charge.

Then their mother, Mrs. May Bannister, will be tried on a charge of kidnaping and planning a plot which ended in the death of three persons and the abduction of a 6-month-old girl.

The Crown contends Bannister murdered Philip Lake, a squatter settler, Lake's common-law wife and their infant son so that his mother could gain possession of the baby girl in order to deceive two male friends. She had told the men she had become a mother so she might extort money from them, the prosecution asserted.

Before the alleged kidnaping, the prosecution asserts, Mrs. Bannister walked through the streets with a bundled up baby doll and then was faced with the necessity of obtaining a real baby to continue her deception.

Justice J. H. Barry said he would not pass sentence upon Arthur until conclusion of the present assizes and then adjourned court until tomorrow morning, when either Daniel, 18, Arthur's brother, or the mother will be placed on trial.

Chicago to Take a Vote On What Time 'Twill Be

Chicago, March 11 (AP).—A popular vote on what time it should be in Chicago was promised today by the city council.

Reversing itself in an unusual action in answer to a letter from Mayor Edward J. Kelly, the aldermanic body adopted a resolution asking the people to decide whether they want to keep Eastern standard time, made official March 1, or to turn back the clocks to the central standard basis.

Final Beatty Honors Prepared by Britain

London, March 11 (AP).—Official Britain prepared tonight to pay final honors to Earl Beatty, former First Lord of the Admiralty, who died early today after a long illness.

Funeral services for the World War navy hero were planned for Monday at St. Paul's Cathedral, where his body will be laid in a crypt close to the remains of two other of England's famous sea captains—Lord Nelson and Earl Jellicoe.

69 Indictments Are Returned By Grand Jury

Five Men, Woman Held for Conspiracy to Violate Gaming Laws.

The grand jury yesterday returned 69 indictments to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Supreme Court. Included in the report was the jury's finding that in 13 other instances they were unable to find sufficient evidence upon which to base an indictment.

Five men and a woman were indicted for conspiracy to violate the gaming laws in connection with the operation of an establishment in the 500 block of E street northwest. They were James T. Joyce, Joseph M. Essek and Thomas F. Brennan, arrested when police raided the place, and John M. Sinsheimer, Agnes Abbott and John Gorka, for whom warrants are now outstanding.

In other indictments, Pete Vidi, Robert DeCosta and Raymond Hale were charged with having robbed David Pirie at the point of a pistol last month. The same trio also were charged with robbing William L. Hughes. In all, the three obtained less than $10.

Rachel Stitt, colored, was charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Edward Wallace, also colored, and Raymond Turnispeed, colored, was accused of second degree murder in connection with the shooting of Herbert Gist, colored, February 4.

Those indicated were: Alva Sole and Julius L. Lohoefer, nonsupport; David Page, Joseph Banks, Lacey Lowery, Earl Layton, Vefite McKinney, Bozie Hightower, Charles W., Thomas, Charles T. Jackson, Albert Marberry, Calvin Satterwaite, William Powell, George Brown, Elmer G. Hollins, John H. Rock, Elmer Day, Dibrel L. Inge, John T. Landon, Clarence Powell, joyriding; Ernest P. Beach, Paul McDonald, Harry Leroy Porter, Harold L. Kirby and Joseph B. Johnson, grand larceny.

Fred Burke, Henry Hutton, Carroll Ford, William Cogswell, Edward J. Dailey, Pomroy Brown, George Yarrell, William D. Branson, Leroy Tucker, Fred McCoy, Charles Bell, William Washington, Wallace D. Lyles, housebreaking; Pete Vidi, Robert DeCosta, Raymond Hale, John Johnson, Francis L. Frederick, Henry H. Brown and William Robison, robbery.

James T. Joyce, Joseph M. Essex, Thomas F. Brennan, John M. Sinsheimer, Agnes Abbott, John Gorka, gaming charges; Charles Shepherd York, John F. Quirk and John D. Herbert, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. Code; Beatrice F. Gauthier and William W. MacDonald, false pretenses; Frank E. Hooker, forgery and uttering; Lafayette I. Martin, incest; George W. Windsor, assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge; Walter James Bowie, manslaughter; Raymond Turnispeed, second degree murder, and Rachel Stitt, first degree murder.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: William Howard Day, joy-riding; Albert Powell and Baxter Underwood, attempted grand larceny; William Walker, grand larceny; William F. Chaconas and Stanley Thomas, robbery; Richard Mills, assault with intent to commit robbery; Dorothy E. Burrell and Helen G. Sallee, assault with a dangerous weapon; Robert Carter, violation of the liquor-taxing act of 1934; Edward A. Brooks, homicide; James E. Lee, gaming; Mafie A. Swanson, false pretenses; Samuel Anderson, housebreaking.

Lillian Emerson Divorces Harts, Jr.

Mrs. Lillian Emerson Harts, former stage star and prominent socialite of New York and Washington, was granted an uncontested divorce yesterday in Reno, Nev., from William Wright Harts, jr., the Associated Press reported.

Her former husband is the son of Brig. Gen. Harts, builder of the Lincoln and Arlington Memorials and chief of staff of the Army of Occupation in Germany in 1918.

Mrs. Harts charged cruelty and asked restoration of her maiden name, which she made famous on the New York stage. A property settlement agreement was made December 9, 1935.

Several of Washington's social leaders attended the couple's elaborate wedding in St. Bartholomew's Church in New York, June 28, 1932. They had been living there most of the time since then, friends here said yesterday.

Pulaski Statue Removal Sought

A proposal that the statue of Casimir Pulaski be removed from the starling-infested triangle bounded by Pennsylvania avenue, Thirteenth street and E street was made yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

The measure proposes that the memorial to the noted Pole be moved to the more dignified triangle formed by Pennsylvania avenue, E street and Fifteenth street. The latter triangle has no trees.

The director of public buildings and public parks is authorized to move the statue. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $15,000 to accomplish the transfer.

Wire Ruling

messages he would be in the position of being in contempt of the court.

He was in the position of an innocent bystander caught in a battle between the legislative and the judiciary branches of the Government. That an attempt will be made to fix a line of demarcation between the jurisdiction of Congress and that of the courts appeared certain.

The committee sought the telegrams of the law firm avowedly because an expense account of the American Liberty League showed that the league had paid for $117 worth of messages sent by the firm. When court opened Silas Strawn, who was instrumental in bringing the suit, and Ralph M. Shaw, one of his partners and head of the Liberty League in Illinois, were in court. So was Raoul Desvernine, chairman of the legal committee of the Liberty League.

Hogan pointed out that in subpenaing all the telegrams of the law firm the committee included messages of a personal nature, messages between husband and wife and messages between lawyer and client.

He quoted the fourth amendment:

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects from unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated."

"There are no exceptions to the guarantee of that right," he said.

"The Constitution does not provide that that right shall not be violated except by a committee of the Senate or the United States or except by the Senate."

The attorney cited a number of instances in which the courts had held that "blanket" subpenaes could not be issued for telegrams and records.

"It is settled beyond dispute," he said, "that the guaranteed right that the papers of an American citizen shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures applies to an attempt to compel production of such papers by a subpena duces tecum so general and sweeping as to be unreasonable. . .

"It is difficult to conceive what method of reasoning would be resorted to to support the position that the provisions of the Constitution of the United States are not binding on bodies whose members are required to solemnly swear that they will protect and defend it."

Hogan said there was no contention that the Senate was without power to conduct investigations or to subpena evidence. He said, however, that it was contended that it had no power to subpena messages in the hope that "something might turn up pertinent to the one legitimate subject of inquiry."

In asking the court to grant an injunction, Hogan made it plain that the action was not against the Senate committee.

"The fact that a violation of the Constitution is prevented should not disturb anyone who has taken an oath to support the Constitution," he added.

Hogan did, however, attack the constitutionality of the resolutions under which the committee operates on the ground that they are so broad as to strike at the "constitutional right to petition and to assemble and would strangle the freedom of the press."

In arguing for the committee, Harris told the court that "it is highly important for the Congress to know whether expressions they receive are genuine and voluntary."

"Feigned sentiments," he said, "faked messages, collusive clamors, all conceal true conditions and prevent remedial legislation. We find, therefore, a clear-cut power in Congress to investigate for itself.

"The immunity granted by the fourth amendment is personal. Only the owner of property seized or trespassed upon can complain."

Through his arguments Harris questioned the property right of the plaintiffs in telegrams filed in the telegraph offices.

"The generality of the subpena does not excuse the witness from producing the papers," he said. "He must bring them to the Senate and let the Senate decide their relevancy."

"It is difficult to conceive of any injury at all resulting from obedience by the respondent to the subpena unless the complainant has sent messages of such a type that they should not be entitled to protection by the court," he added.

He said the granting of the injunction would result in a "very unseemly and unfortunate conflict of jurisdiction" between the court and the Senate.

Harris made much of the fact that the Western Union had "no real interest in defending this suit." He added that the situation was such that the court would not be given full information. He characterized the suit as "an effort to get this court to interfere with the law-making function."

"I suppose you will admit, "Justice Wheat interposed, "that the Fourth Amendment is binding on the Senate as well as on anybody else. They have not more right to practice unreasonable search and seizure than anybody else, have they?"

Harris said there was some question as to whether the provisions of the amendment apply generally.

"I don't believe you think the Senate can conduct an unreasonable search and seizure," the court said. "I am called upon to decide whether this subpena will operate as an unreasonable search and seizure."

In rebuttal, Hogan told Justice Wheat that "you have a right to interfere not with law making actions but with law violating actions of an agency of the Senate."

The American Civil Liberties Union, liberal organization, joined with the Liberty League yesterday in denouncing the seizure of telegrams. In a letter to Senator Black, officials of the organization urged that "telegrams improperly seized be returned to the telegraph companies and that a procedure consistent with the right of American citizens be followed exclusively in obtaining further evidence."

Farley Orders Berlin Barred From Mail Use

Accused by U. S. of Having Traded on Reputation of Business Groups.

Frederick A. Berlin, accused by the Postoffice Department of having traded on the reputation of the Washington Board of Trade and the Better Business Bureau, was barred from the use of the mails yesterday by Postmaster General Farley.

The order was issued on the recommendation of Assistant Solicitor Thomas J. Murray before whom hearings were held several weeks ago at which Berlin was asked to show cause why a fraud order barring him from the mails should not be issued.

The case, which did not entail criminal action, was based on the alleged activities of the National Board of Trade, the National Better Business Bureau and the International Better Business Bureau, all of which are said to have been organized by Berlin from his offices of 1319 F street. All of these organizations were effected by Farley's order.

Informed of the decision of the Postoffice Department, Berlin said he would appeal the case on the ground that the evidence submitted did not warrant such an order. He added that he would seek a Congressional investigation of the matter.

Speaker Describes Poetry of Firdausi

The story of Firdausi, tenth century Persian poet, was told in an illustrated lecture at the Freer Gallery of Art yesterday afternoon by Eustache de Lorey, former director of the French Institute of Arts and Archeology at Damascus.

Firdausi's principal work, the "Shah-Nameh," or "History of Kings," was written some time after 975 A. D. This epic poem traced the history of Persian rulers back into mythological times, giving at length legendary tales of regal love and adventure.

In the fourteenth century, after Persia had been conquered by the Mongols, the "History of Kings" came to be used as a source for Persian nationalistic art. Miniature painters, goaded by their Mongol oppressors, illustrated scenes from Firdausi's epic in water color. The largest of these miniatures that has been discovered is about 16 inches square, about twice the size of most. The oldest of them dates back to 1330 A. D.

Slides reproducing these miniatures in color and in black and white formed the illustration for the lecture. M. de Lorey will give other lectures on aspects of Persian art today, tomorrow and Saturday, at 4:45. They will all be held at the Freer Gallery of Art. Admission is free.

Judge Is Favored By Senate Group

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday unanimously reported favorably the nomination of Judge Edwin R. Holmes, of Mississippi, to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, who is opposed to confirmation, commented "the fight has just begun."

Bilbo said he would carry his fight to the floor of the Senate. His speech will be his maiden address in the Senate, where for the past year and a half he has sat silent.

The nomination was recommended by Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, and disagreement between the two Senators over the nomination has resulted in a political break and announcement by Bilbo he will support a candidate in opposition to Harrison's re-election next fall.

New Deal Job Plea Arrives From Egypt

Boston, March 11 (AP). — From Cairo, Egypt, came a doctor's plea to United States Marshal John J. Murphy today for a New Deal job.

A letter from Dr. Hafez Zaky asked Murphy's help to get him a job when he returned to the United States.

Zaky said he was an American and that his passport would expire April 9 unless renewed. He asked Marshal Murphy to have it renewed so he could remain long enough in a Cairo clinic to earn his fare home.

Three lusty whoops and a long Hooray!
At last good luck has come our way,
For in the paper, we've just read
That traffic lights—green, yellow, red—
Will soon be timed so as to give
Those who dare cross a chance to live.

For years the auto's reigned complete
At every intersecting street;
And we've been made to dodge or run,
Lest horrible injury might be done.
But now it seems the lights will give Us clerks a chance to cross and live!

Hauptmann Aid Would Compel Jafsie to Help

Fisher Will Demand Indictment if Educator Declines to Talk.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 11.—Counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, racing against time in a fight to save their client from the electric chair, said tonight they would demand the indictment of Dr. John F. Condon if he refuses to answer questions concerning the Lindbergh kidnaping.

With Hauptmann scheduled to be executed in about three weeks, the chief hope of C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's chief counsel, was in the appearance of the gray-haired garrulous Jafsie, who is steaming north on a cruise boat, due next week.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman plans to bring all possible pressure on Jafsie to force him to explain "glaring discrepancies" in his Flemington trial testimony and statements he made prior to Hauptmann's arrest. The Governor is opposed to indicting Condon, a move that could be used as a basis for his extradition from New York to New Jersey, but that course of action is being strongly urged upon him by defense counsel.

Hoffman Plans Pressure.

The Governor plans to exert the heaviest possible pressure to force Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, to see Condon and obtain from him satisfactory explanations of several "doubts" raised by Hoffman in a 5,000-word brief last January.

If Schwarzkopf refuses to act, the Governor will endeavor to submit a list of questions to Condon through Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, of New York City.

Hoffman said he wanted to know why Condon now believes Hauptmann alone committeed the murder when at various times he has stated that he heard other voices in the rooms from which "John," the ransom receiver, was speaking to him by telephone.

The Governor also wants to know about the identity of the mysterious woman who gave Condon instructions during the ransom negotiations and the names of the persons who allegedly offered the educator a $250,000 bribe to shift the blame from Hauptmann to the late Isidor Fisch.

Hauptmann Declines Plea.

An interesting sidelight to the return of Condon came out of the State prison death house today. Hauptmann, it was learned, frequently has been urged to permit a special sentimental appeal asking Jafsie to come back and give the doomed man his final chance for life. But Hauptmann refused.

"Don't worry," he told his advisers. "He will come back by himself."

Capt. H. J. Majilton, Jafsie's Panama host, said in Cristobal:

"There wasn't anything mysterious about Condon's departure. He and his daughter had finished their vacation. Dutch's arrival did not influence their leaving. Dutch had no authority to question Condon and the latter was not requested by Gov. Hoffman to return. I believe he would have gone back before if asked."

Andrew Dutch, a New Jersey State motor vehicle inspector, was reported to have gone to the Canal Zone to interview Condon for the Governor.

Commons Barely Beats Public Ownership Bill

London, March 11 (AP).—By only 21 votes the House of Commons, barely one-third filled, tonight defeated a motion calling for legislation to replace the capitalistic system by public ownership of instruments of production and distribution.

The motion was introduced by Wilfred Paling, Laborite member from York. The vote was 121 to 10.

Paling told the members "Millions of pigs are being wantonly destroyed in the United States" and that "acres of cotton-producing land are being plowed up" under the American capitalistic system.

Federal Judges Rule Cleaning Act Illegal

Newark, N. J., March 11 (AP).—Three Federal judges ruled today that the State act to regulate the cleaning and dyeing industry was unconstitutional.

Counsel for the board created by the act announced the decision would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

In an opinion by District Judge William Clark, and concurred in by Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis and District Judge Philip Forman, the legislation was held a violation of the "due process" clause of the Federal Constitution.

I Made Up My Mind To Get Thin..and Did!

It was so simple! I ate what I liked, took no strenuous exercises, did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives—yet day by day I felt myself getting lighter, the fat seemed to slip away. Now I have a lovely, graceful figure—and I never felt better in my life!

EDWARD M. CURRAN.

Curran Named District Judge By Roosevelt

Senate Approval Likely at Once; Succeeds Schuldt on Police Bench.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Edward M. Curran, 35, an assistant corporation counsel since 1933, to succeed Judge Gus A. Schuldt on the Police Court bench.

The nomination of Curran, who has been a resident of the District for the past 12 years, was forewarded to the Senate on the recommendation of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. Confirmation, Senator W. H. King, chairman of a District sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he was aware of no opposition to the appointment, and he probably will report the nomination favorably by the first of next week.

Several weeks ago Judge Schuldt's term expired. For the past 12 years the judge, a Republican, has held this post. He plans to enter private law practice.

Curran, a Democrat, teaches at Catholic University and at Columbus Law School. From the former institution he received both his bachelor of science and law degrees. A native of Maine, he holds an A. B. from the State university there.

Curran is a member of the Democratic Council of the District and the Washington Division of the Young Democrats of America. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Fraternity and an honorary member of Gamma Eta Gamma, legal fraternity.

Prior to his appointment as assistant corporation counsel, Curran practiced law here. His first duties with the District were in Police Court. Later, he was promoted to direct trial work.

He is married and has one child, 11 months old. His home is 1650 Howard street northwest.

Baby Chimpanzee Given Good Chance to Survive

Chicago, March 11 (AP).—Little Adam, the prize baby of Brookfield Zoo, began his second month of life today with a good chance of becoming one of the few chimpanzees ever born and raised in America.

Director Edward Bean credited Adam's lease on life to his mother, Sally, who has been zealously nursing him since the day he arrived.

"Sally's mother love is what we're depending on to bring Adam safely through his infancy," Bean said. "As far as I know, only one chimpanzee has lived to be a year old. That one was born in Toledo."

Belgrade's Parliament Votes Military Funds

Belgrade, March 11 (AP).—Parliament approved today a budget of $234,000,000 which includes $46,000,000 for military purposes.

The opposition, which enacted violent scenes recently climaxed by last week's attempt to assassinate Premier Stoyadinovich, was not present when the vote was taken.

U. S. Air Corps To Get World's Greatest Motor

Woodring Announces Huge Order for New Wright Cyclone Engines.

Speeding the Air Corps expansion program another step on its way, Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring yesterday announced the purchase of a large order of "the most powerful aircraft engines in the world."

Advised by foreign military attaches that aircraft plants abroad "are working day and night" in the development of large air fleets, Woodring told reporters that some of the new American motors are capable of producing 1,000 horsepower, an increase of 250 horsepower over types now in service. About 100 of these new "super engines" will be installed in a squadron of "Flying Fortresses," he added.

The Woodring announcement confirmed a story published in last Saturday's Washington Post that officials at the War Department were soon to award the big contract, one of the largest ever granted a single company.

$3,850,000 for Motors.

Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Paterson, N. J., will build the new motors at a cost of $3,850,000. A total of 512 new units will be constructed. Of this number, 432 will be of the "super engine" type and will be installed in the 90 bombers ordered last December.

In announcing the order, General Staff officers at the department made the following statement:

"The large order for modern engines will be of the greatest value to the Air Corps in the replacement of many engines now nearly obsolete or worn out and without question will add to the safety and effectiveness of the equipment in which they are installed."

The "super engine," which is a 9-cylinder, air cooled, radial engine known as "Cyclone R-1820-G," is the result of the co-operative effort of the engineering staff of Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and the Wright engineers," officers said yesterday.

"In its manufacture are incorporated the new dynamic damper which practically eliminates torsional vibration in crank shafts, new supercharger devices, new types of cylinder heads with greatly increased cooling area, which has resulted in lowered fuel consumption, which, according to engineers, is now comparable to that of Diesel engines," it was said.

A total of 328 of these engines will be used for installation in and spares for 82 new all-metal twin-engined bombing planes being manufactured by the Douglas Aircraft Co., of Santa Monica, Calif.

Group for Flying Fortresses.

Another group of 104 engines will be used for 13 four-engined all-metal bombing monoplanes being manufactured by the Boeing Airplane Co., of Seattle, Wash., officers stated. These four-engined Boeing planes are commonly known as the "Flying Fortresses."

"In addition to the powerful engines for the bombers, the War Department has also contracted for 80 nine-cylinder Wright Whirlwind engines of 450 horsepower which will be used for installation in and spares for 40 basic training monoplanes now being manufactured by the North American Co., of Los Angeles, Calif." officers said.

Patronage Won NewHampshire Races, Says Ely

Leader in Massachusetts Abandons Fight; New Deal Wins in South.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 11.—Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely (Democrat), foe of the New Deal Administration, tonight credited the success of Roosevelt-pledged delegates in New Hampshire to "all the power of the greatest patronage organization this country has ever seen."

Announcing his decision to abandon his previously announced intention of sponsoring an unpledged Massachusetts slate of delegates to the Democratic national convention, Ely, director of the American Liberty League and friend of Alfred E. Smith, said:

"One lone Democrat can't lick $4,000,000,000, and he is foolish to try."

Ely, commenting on the New Hampshire election, said "the protest against this Administration was substantial, but it was not enough to win.

"The Roosevelt Administration, fearful of the results if the Democrats were left to their own natural choice, sent Mr. Farley into New Hampshire. Every possible agency was called into action against the unpledged delegates."

Meanwhile, United States Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, declared tonight that the New Deal, in itself has been recovery's greatest enemy.

The Roosevelt Administration's economic policies have nullified rather than aided convalescence from depression, the Iowa Senator told the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts in an address which was broadcast.

"The New Deal," he said, "alternately pleads, exhorts, commands and intimidates. It has, in itself, been the greatest enemy to recovery."

Dickinson charged the Roosevelt Administration with "shamelessly exploiting" the defenseless poor, and declared January's drop in employment, as shown by American Federation of Labor statistics, provided "incontestable proof of the New Deal's failure."

"In the whole history of American humanitarian effort there is no more disgraceful page than this political abuse of charity and the defenseless poor."

No Partisanship in Attack.

Houston, Tex., March 11 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, said in an address tonight "there is nothing partisan or sectional in the universal popular attitude toward the strange and alarming financial policy of Roosevelt and the New Deal."

"There can be no partisanship in a demand for a sweeping, ruthless reduction in costs of government," he asserted. "Likewise, there is no flavor of partisanship in a demand for a sound currency. Similarly, there is naught of partisanship in a demand for a Federal budget, annually balanced. * * *

"To allege, as the New Dealers do, 'that those of us who cry out against reckless spending * * * and all the rest of the boondoggling which has been going on would economize by 'letting the people starve' is to be guilty of flagrant demagoguery."

He attacked President Roosevelt's proposed new taxes, asserting the burdens would fall on the average man and woman.

Roosevelt Wins in Georgia.

Chipley, Ga., March 11 (AP).—President Franklin D. Roosevelt rolled up a heavy majority over his Georgia critic, Gov. Eugene Talmadge, in a Presidential preference primary today in Harris County—the second county so to vote—incomplete returns tonight showed.

Returns from 5 of 14 precincts gave Roosevelt, 314; Talmadge, 24.

Roosevelt's name was on the ticket in today's election, but Talmadge's was not.

Seminole County, like Harris, a rural area, recently gave Roosevelt a 5 to 1 vote for Talmadge.

A scheduled Presidential test today in Barrow County, home of Senator Richard B. Russell, jr., friend of the National Administration, was called off after four State officials, friends of Talmadge, and candidates in local races there, asked that it not be held.

Moses Arouses Speculation.

Manchester, N. H., March 11 (AP).—Speculation over former United States Senator George H. Moses' political fate held New Hampshire's interest tonight in the wake of the Nation's first Presidential primary which voted him second place on the Republican slate of delegates at large.

New Hampshire sent a solid delegation to the national conventions, pledged on the Democratic side to President Roosevelt and friendly, but unpledged, on the Republican side to Col. Frank Knox, Manchester and Chicago newspaper publisher.

Moses, erstwhile president pro tem of the Senate, who was relegated to private life by Senator Fred H. Brown, Democrat, in the Democratic landslide of 1932, polled 29,168 votes yesterday, on a basis of returns from all but 14 of the State's 294 precincts.

Bridges Is High Man.

High man on the Republican slate of seven delegates at large to the Cleveland convention was Gov. H. Styles Bridges with 32,242.

Today Moses, mentioned frequently as a possible candidate for the Senate this year against his one-time colleague, Senator Henry W. Keyes, Republican, had only this to say regarding the possibility that he might attempt a comeback: "One fight at a time."

Two other features of yesterday's election commanded considerable political interest. One was the failure of two Landon candidates for places on the Republican side to make the ticket.

The other was the defeat of two Democratic candidates for district seats, who had not pledged themselves to the renomination of the President.

Ground, Takoma Park, Md., 36 miles; James J. Walling, jr., 1609 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 36 miles; John Washington, 66 L street northwest, 38 miles.

Boula Zuzanis, 14, of 3212 Georgia avenue northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture when knocked down by a hit-and-run driver at Georgia avenue, near Keefer place, last night.

First Lady Outlines Peace Machinery

Cleveland, March 11 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt recommended an international police force, world-wide laws and a world tribunal to prevent war in a lecture here tonight on "The Way to Peace."

Attendance was "disappointing," said Mrs. Katherine Wallin, director of a lecture organization sponsoring Mrs. Roosevelt's appearance. She said there were between 1,500 and 1,700 persons present.

Mrs. Roosevelt's appearance in Cleveland was preceded by published reports that a party faction had discussed a possible boycott against the lecture in a move to influence party leaders to the support of W. B. Gongwer, county Democratic chairman, as a national convention delegate.

"I don't known anything about the political dispute except what have read in the papers," Mrs. Roosevelt said before the lecture. "I am simply on a lecture tour."

Immunity Inquiry Near

enforcement of local traffic regulations.

He cited a Congressional act providing special automobile tages for use of members of Congress while on Government business. These tags sanction parking of Congressional cars at any available curb space in the District, except at fire plugs, loading platforms and loading stations.

"This is the only law granting any kind of immunity to members of Congress—as far as I can learn," King said. He agreed with Senator Borah, who held that certain immunities under the Constitution applied only to civil cases.

Meanwhile, the long-debated question of "Congressional immunity" may be settled by a parking ticket placed on the auto of Senator Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin.

While issuance of a warrant against Duffy, charging him with violating a parking regulation, awaits routine court procedure, he has intimated he will fight any charges pressed by police.

Doubts Violation Occurred.

He expressed doubt that the alleged violation even occurred and said he would demand his constitutional rights, contending a member of Congress is not subject to arrest for traffic infractions.

Duffy held that if a member is attending a Congressional session, or traveling to or from one, he cannot be arrested for violating any ordinances which do not involve a breach of the peace.

On the other hand, Senator Borah contended that constitutional exceptions—treason, felony and breach of the peace—covered all offenses for which any person may now be arrested in the United States.

And while this question of "equal justice" and punishment for lawbreaking legislators continued on Capitol Hill, a serious setback to local "crack-down" enforcement measures was threatened yesterday by a case in District Supreme Court.

Traffic officials were called upon to show cause why driving permits of convicted first-offense speeders, suspended under a recent order, should not be restored.

System Assailed.

The suspension system was attacked as unconstitutional by attorneys for Calvin B. Hartman, of 1356 Sheridan street northwest, who, on February 17, was convicted of speeding and fined $7. Subsequently, his permit was suspended for 15 days.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, his assistant, M. O. Eldridge, traffic officials of the Police Department and the District Commissioners were ordered to appear in court Monday to "show cause" why this and other permits, suspendde during the current enforcement campaign, should not be returned.

Power of the Commissioners and board of review and revocation of operators' permits to revoke or suspend a license for "any cause" they may deem sufficient was attacked as "an unwarranted delegation of legislation authority."

It was also argued that, by suspending the permit, Hartman was denied protection of the "due process" clause of the Constitution. Without his permit, it was pointed out, he is deprived of the use of his car as completely as though it had been taken from him.

Although repeated action against the suspension order has been threatened before, this is the first case in which the system has been attacked in court.

More than 200 permits have been suspended for speed convictions in the last several weeks.

Officials agree that this drastic action has brought a marked decrease in the number of traffic accidents, together with better observance of regulations. The system has received support from the House traffic sub-committee as well as traffic authorities of Maryland and Virginia.

Envoy Werlich Dies in France; 11-Year Record

McCeney Werlich, 44, second secretary to the American embassy at Paris, died at his post early yesterday, the State Department announced. He was appointed in January, 1935.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, he attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and became a technical adviser and foreign expert. He was first appointed to the foreign service in 1925 and was made a vice consul of career in 1926. During that year he was made assistant secretary general of the preliminary conference on oil pollution of navigable waters here.

His first appointment as a secretary in the diplomatic service came in 1928, when he was assigned to Warsaw as third secretary. A year later he was appointed consul.

Leaving Warsaw in 1931, he held positions as secretary at San Jose, Costa Rica, and at Monrovia, where, in 1933, he also held the consulate for four months before being shifted to Paris as third secretary in December, 1933. On January 31, 1935, he was promoted to the position he held at the time of his death.

Retired Baker Dies Suddenly

Funeral Services for S. E. Gundersheimer Set for Tomorrow.

Samuel E. Gundersheimer, 84, founder of the baking firm of Gundersheimer, Inc., 516 Second street northwest, died last night in Sibley Hospital of pneumonia. He was ill since Sunday.

A native of New York City, Mr. Gundersheimer came to Washington in 1893 and establishing the baking company in its present location. He retired about 15 years ago, the business passing to his son, Jerome H. Gundersheimer, who now is president of the firm.

The son and daughter are the only members of the immediate family surviving. Mrs. Gundersheimer, the former Esther Speiro, of New York, died in 1903.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Danzansky funeral home at 3501 Fourteenth street northwest, with Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, officiating. Burial will be in the Washington Hebrew Cemetery.

Maj. E. R. Campbell Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Maj. Edward R. Campbell, 92-year-old defender of Fort Stevens during the War Between the States, who died Tuesday night of pneumonia at Mount Alto Hospital, will beheld at 2 p. m. today from the funeral parlors of V. L. Spears, 1009 H street northwest. Burial with military honors will be in Battle Ground National Cemetery.

Major Campbell was a member of the Sixth Army Corps which was rushed from City Point to Fort Stevens to defend the Capital against the 18,000 Confederate soldiers under Gen. Jubal Early.

Mrs. Burket Rites At Linden Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Frances Rhees Burket, prominent school and civic worker, will be held today at 2 p. m. at her home in Linden, Md. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Burket died Tuesday in the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, after a short illness. The widow of Joseph U. Burket, one of the pioneer electrical merchants, she was the daughter of the late William J. Rhees, who for many years was historian of the Smithsonian Institution.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Burket was active in the Eistophos Science Club and the Short Story Club and was a leading woman's suffrage advocate. She also was a landscape painter.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. J. E. Benedict, jr., and a son, Rhees E. Burket, both of Linden, two sisters, Mrs. B. O. Loxley and Miss Flora G. Rhees, of Pasadena, Calif., and a brother, Dr. B. R. Rhees, of Newark, N. J.

J. C. Leonard Funeral Rites Planned Today

Educator, Writer Will Be Buried at Cambridge, Md.; Was 54.

John C. Leonard, 54, educator and writer, who died in Garfield Hospital Tuesday, will be buried at Cambridge, Md., his birthplace, at 11 a. m. today. The Rev. W. G. Harris, pastor of the Zion M. E. Church there, will officiate at the services.

He was graduated from the Cambridge High School and later Harvard University in 1903. For six years he taught in the Philippine Islands and one year in Puerto Rico before coming to Washington as an examiner for the Civil Service Commission, where he was employed four years.

Surviving are his stepmother, Mrs. James C. Leonard, of this city; three sisters, Mrs. J. Edward Le Compte, of Cherrydale, Va.; Mrs. D'Arcy Barnett, Caldwell, N. J., and Mrs. Raymond Ziegler, Philadelphia, Pa.

T.L. Connor Dies; Gas Firm Veteran

Thomas L. Connor, retired credit manager of the Washington Gas Light Co., died yesterday in his home at 1338 Parkwood place northwest. Death resulted from a paralytic stroke suffered March 2. He was 68 years old.

Connor was associated with the company 52 years, working in various departments and holding positions of complaint clerk, receiving teller and assistant chief clerk.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Connor; a daughter, Sarah; two sons, Lawrence and Thomas Connor, jr.; two brothers, John T. and Lawrence A. Connor, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Donaher.

Funeral services will be held in the Sacred Heart Church at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery

Richard Seek, Lincoln Guard In Battle, Dies

Richard Smith Seek, 92, Lincoln's bodyguard at the battle of Fort Stevens and one of the oldest residents of Montgomery County, died Tuesday night at Mount Alto Hospital. He had been ill for a month.

A retired contractor and builder, Seek was the proud possessor of a 15-inch gold cup presented him by President Theodore Roosevelt for having the largest living family in the county. He was the father of 16 children.

Only two Civil War veterans survive him in Montgomery County. A third, Maj. Edward R. Campbell, also a veteran of Fort Stevens, died a few hours before him in the same hospital.

Born in Rogersville, Tenn., Seek moved to Indiana shortly before the war. He served in the Eighth Cavalry throughout the Civil War, being wounded in the Battle of Bull Run. He fought under the command of Samuel A. Erwin.

In 1883 he moved to Four Corners, Md., later living in a log cabin until he completed his home at what is now Seek's Corner, near Takoma Park, Md.

As the contractor in charge of the job he placed the stone memorial to Abraham Lincoln at Fort Stevens Memorial Cemetery.

Surviving Seek are his widow, Mrs. Isabel Cole Seek; nine sons, David O., of Prince Georges County; Gilbert and Charles, of Washington, and Edward, Best, Everitt, Adam, Beall and Q. V. Seek, of Montgomery County; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Forney, of Prince Georges County, and Miss Eve Seek, Montgomery County, and 60 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from his home. The Rev. J. Wesley Loftis, pastor of the Silver Spring Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial with full military rites will be in Colesville Cemetery.

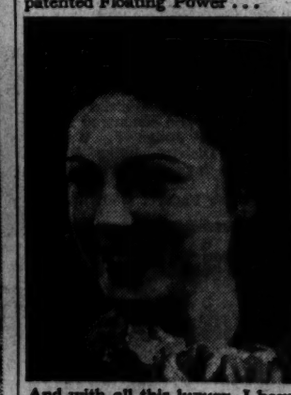
"No Wonder Fashion Authorities Call this Money-Saving Car the 'Beauty Winner'" Says MADY CORRELL, featured in "Dark Tower," "June Moon," "Kill That Story" and "Sweet Mystery of Life"

The smart lines of this handsome new Dodge . . . the careful attention that has been given to the niceties of interior appointment, appeal to me beyond measure.

No wonder so many famous fashion authorities have called this new Dodge the "Beauty Winner" of 1936 . . . it surely looks much more expensive than it is.

And that's the amazing part about it . . . although it is more spacious and more luxurious than last year, it is priced still lower.

. . . and with such expensive-car features as the famous Airglide-Ride . . . genuine hydraulic brakes . . . safety-steel bodies . . . and patented Floating Power . . .



And with all this luxury, I have seen reports from owners all over the country stating they are getting remarkable gas mileage. For a combination of beauty, luxury and money-saving features, it seems to me that it would be pretty hard to beat the new Dodge "Beauty Winner."

Italy Will Hold Aloof if Allies Keep Sanctions

Will Take No Part in London Locarno Parley if Bans Remain.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 11.—Italy, an official spokesman said today, will adopt an attitude of "absolute reserve" at the London Locarno talks, refusing to collaborate with France and Britain as long as sanctions are applied against her.

(French officials admitted in Paris today they had promised to lead a drive for the lifting of sanctions against Rome in exchange for Fascist support against Germany in the Locarno crisis.)

Premier Mussolini will be represented at the talks beginning tomorrow by Dino Grandi, the ambassador to London.

The spokesman said Italy wants to avoid committing herself on Germany's violation of Locarno because sanctions are continuing and because Great Britain and France, directly concerned under the Locarno Treaty, were most active in keeping sanctions in force.

He added that any discussion of an African peace would have to be held over until at least a preliminary settlement had been reached in the Locarno crisis.

Official reports said Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the African armies, had returned to the northern front by airplane from Asmara.

Italy is continuing to send supplies and men to Africa although she qualifiedly accepted a League plea to enter peace negotiations.

The S. S. Principessa Mario sailed from Naples with 1,480 men and officers and the aircraft carrier Miraglia departed with 40 bombardment planes.

Italy to Keep Silence.

Rome, March 11 (U.P.).—Italy will refuse to participate in discussion of sanctions against Germany when the League of Nations Council sits in London Saturday.

Officials said that Dr. Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will be instructed to leave the Council table during any discussion of sanctions unless, first, an agreement is reached suspending sanctions against Italy for her African invasion.

Further, Italy will demand promise of a favorable settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

War Conditions On Rhine Border

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press

Strasbourg, March 11.—Warfare conditions, minus only the shooting, prevailed on France's fortified eastern frontier today.

Troops, heavy artillery, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns and even dugouts were ready in the towns on the French ring of steel and concrete.

Precautions against air raids were taken after German airplanes flew over the French frontier six times Monday and Tuesday. Other flights were made over the Luxembourg and Saar borders.

One plane, flying at 5,000 feet, was sighted above Veckring, four miles inside French territory. Others were seen at Montmedy, Kanfen and the French village of Waldwisse.

French anti-aircraft guns refrained from firing, but in each instance French pursuit squadrons ascended and chased the Nazi ships back.

Rubber Strike Members To Consider Peace Plan

Akron, Ohio, March 11 (AP).—Spokesmen for the United Rubber Workers Union said tonight they would refer to the union membership a peace plan proposed by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. for settlement of a strike in the company's plants.

Without divulging the nature of the proposals, the union's negotiating committee announced it was sending notices to union workers that a meeting would be called, possibly tomorrow night, to consider the plan.

The union committee received the plan late today in a meeting with company representatives. The strike has made 14,000 workers idle for more than three weeks.

War Threat

the Chamber of Deputies approved a bill authorizing organization of the nation on an emergency basis in wartime and preparations were hurried to expand the air fleet by large appropriations for the next four years.

The general staff estimated German forces in the Rhineland at 90,000 men. France for the moment is merely manning her fortress system and intervening spaces by utilizing only a few regiments from interior garrisons, but is holding in reserve an estimated 300,000 soldiers now on the mainland.

French troops along the border are estimated at about 100,000. France's total army is about 700,000 including the mobile guards and gendarmerie. Nearly 200,000 of these are abroad.

Day and Night Patrol.

The border aerial defense is specially organized under Gen. Bertrand Pujo, who took charge immediately when the Locarno crisis developed. Air forces are patroling the border day and night.

Jesse I. Straus, American Ambassador, made his second visit in four days to Flandin today. The talks were described as "routine," although some sources said the ambassador and the foreign minister discussed the workings of America's neutrality act and its possible effect on France if "the worst comes."

The high military committee met in a session over which Premier Sarrault presided to consider aerial defenses. Attending were high army, navy and air force omcials.

Belgium Stands by War Allies In Defense of Locarno Treaty

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Belgium, March 11.—Belgium, "strong in our right and sure of our friends," is ready to stand with France and Great Britain in defending the Locarno Treaty, Premier Paul van Zeeland told an expectant Chamber of Deputies today.

The premier of the tiny country which was among the most tragic World War sufferers, advised the nation to remain calm.

Van Zeeland, who attended the Locarno conference in Paris yesterday, opened his address by saying:

"With common sense and cool resolution, in spite of the errors and past angers of the hour, we can spare our children the horrors, uncertainty and misery which our generation had to bear."

He pointed out that the Franco-Soviet mutual military assistance pact, which Adolf Hitler gave as his reason for violating Locarno, does not concern Belgium, and that Germany's repudiation of the pact is "unjustified" so far as this country is concerned.

"Should the Locarno powers fail to agree on the problems facing them," he said, "the worst consequences are possible for us, the whole world and our civilization."

He pledged Belgium's allegiance to Locarno "until it is replaced by another accord between all interested parties."

Previously in the Chamber session Raymond Foucart had suggested that Belgium expel all German subjects "except anti-Hitlerites" because of Germany's denunciation of Locarno.

Van Zeeland described the Franco-Belgian military accord as now largely outdated by the Rhineland developments, but assured Deputies contacts between the military staffs must be mantained as a necessary safeguard to security.

Gen van der Berghe, chief of the Belgian general staff, conferred with the French military attache to Brussels and the Belgian military attache to Berlin yesterday.

Prior to Van Zeeland's speech the newspaper Libre Belgique declared the government was seeking possibility of negotiating with Germany rather than lining up definitely with France in a strong stand.

Naval Treaty Plan Approved; To Run 7 Years

Only Minor Features Left; Ships to Be Limited to 35,000 Tons.

London, March 11 (AP).—The draft of a naval treaty was approved today by delegates to the naval conference sitting as a committee reviewnig the work of the technical drafting committee.

The treaty is now complete except for escape clauses and other minor features. The draft sets the expiration date for the proposed pact at 1942.

Authoritative sources said Great Britain and the United States might undertake an exchange of views on the questions of fortifications in the Pacific before the American delegation leaves for home.

The immediate reason for the discussion was said to be the expiration next December 31 of the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 providing for Pacific Ocean fortifications. The conversations would indicate the attitude of the two nations toward any sudden Japanese move in the Pacific.

Under the new terms which retain the maximum limit of 35,000 tons, battleships will be split in two groups. The first category will include battleships of 17,500 to 35,000 tons. The second will include those from 8,000 down to 100, leaving a nonconstruction zone between 8,000 and 17,500 tons.

The lowest size gun in the main batteries of any battleship must be 10 inches. Thus, by the new classification, the size of a gun would determine largely the difference between a small battleship and a cruiser.

The treaty retains the present limitation of large cruiser to 10,000 tons and 8-inch guns, but a building holiday is declared on this type of vessel.

Although the American delegation accepted the holiday, it was learned that they will insist on an escape clause in the treaty giving signatories permission to build large cruisers if Great Britain should exceed its announced program of 70 cruisers of all types.

The Americans stated that they feel an increase in the British program would interfere with the present equilibrium of the two fleets.

Midget Queen Dies; Crowned by Barnum

Chicago, March 11 (AP).—The 50-year stage career of the "Scottish Queen" of the midgets was closed tonight by death.

After a half-century of entertaining royalty and lesser folk all over the globe, 41-inch Jennie Quigley died yesterday at a nephew's home. She was 84.

Jennie owed her royal title to the late P. T. Barnum, who bestowed it upon her when she arrived in the United States from Scotland at the age of 13.

Rumania Will Spend $100,000,000 for Arms

Bucharest, March 11 (U.P.).—Rumania today decided to spend $100,000,000 for rearmament in view of the strained international situation.

Moscow Asks 'United Front' On Nazi Issue

Formation of Peace-Loving Ring Urged to Convince Reich of Security.

Moscow, March 11 (AP).—An appeal for a united front at conversations of European powers on the Locarno Treaty was launched tonight in the official press.

The newspapers treat the idea of a preventive war—where one of the Locarno signatories might attack Germany to prevent an attack on itself—as out of the question. They say it should be made clear to Germany that the nations surrounding her are in accord for a plan of collective security.

The organization of a "front of peace-loving states" will be the only means to convince the Nazis that "everything is not to be permitted," Izvestia said.

The paper called Hitler's offer of separate nonaggression pacts in Eastern and Western Europe an "attempt to divide possible adversaries of German and spread illusions among peace-loving masses in order to gain time for the next fait accompli."

The official French-language newspaper, Journal de Moscou, scoffed at the idea of a Nazi pact with Lithuania, declaring such a pact would be destro ed by the Germans at their own convenience.

Without going to the extent of committing the Soviet Union to opposition to German re-entrance to the League of Nations, the papers commented with sarcasm on Hitler's readiness to return to Geneva.

The peoples of Europe, said Izvestia, must "collect their senses" and get together for collective security before the Germans "start throwing bombs from airplanes."

Hackensack Rabbi Asks 'Merchant of Venice' Bar

Hackensack, N. J., March 11 (AP). A move to strike William Shakespeare's classic drama, "The Merchant of Venice," from the curriculum of Hackensack High School developed today under the leadership of Rabbi Irving Silman.

An English class dramatization of the play was discontinued pending a board of education ruling after Rabbi Silman protested Shylock was "the foulest slander ever penned by the hand of genius."

Rabbi Silman said he would carry the issue to the meeting of the community council tomorrow night.

5 Nations Seek Unarmed Rhine Prior to Parleys

Balkan, Little Ententes Join Russia, France in Ultimatum.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Geneva, March 11.—Five countries, members of the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente, today told the League of Nations and France that negotiations with Germany are impossible until German troops are withdrawn from the Rhineland.

Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia announced they will battle for their contention when the League Council meets Saturday in London. Soviet Russia has taken the same position.

The Little Entente and Balkan Entente agreed to support France's demand for full observation of Germany's Locarno Treaty obligations. They announced their police and military forces are ready to support full application of the League Covenant.

To all intents and purposes the League moved to London today to cope with the Rhineland crisis.

The secretariat sent a large staff of political, economic and financial experts, executives, translators, interpreters and stenographers to London.

A number of permanent delegations in Geneva also proceeded to London.

League circles were hopeful the London meetings will lead to a series of European conferences which eventually will mean a rebuilding of the European peace structure.

The task of packing up the League secretariat and moving it to London on two day's notice proved to be a man's size job. Officials estimated it would cost the British government at least 800,000 francs ($55,000) to hold the council session in London.

Rain to End Today; Cooler, Forecast

Incessant rain drummed on Washington's streets, windowpanes and rooftops yesterday.

District residents got out their raincoats and overshoes, and sloshed to work, and repeated the performance in going home. The temperature rose to a maximum of 59 at 4 p. m., adding oppressive sultriness to the discomforts of the rain.

Today will bring clearing skies and slightly cooler weather, the forecaster said last night.

Farm Group Requests Sound Land Program

New York, March 11 (AP).—Farmers and farm representatives of 12 Northeastern States concluded a three-day conference on a new agricultural program today with a specific recommendation that no benefit payments be made which would keep or place land in a different land use classification from what would be dictated by a sound, long-time utilization program.

Their recommendations for a program to be developed under the provisions of the soil conservation and domestic allotment act applicable to the Northeastern territory will be consolidated with recommendations made by similar conference in the West, Midwest and South.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace addressed the meeting yesterday.

Martinelli Charges Ad Injured Character

New York, March 11 (AP).—Giovanni Martinelli, describing himself as "a prominent operatic tenor, widely known as such throughout the United States and the world," today sued Wil-low Cafeterias, Inc., for $20,000, charging "a slur and a blemish upon the public character and reputation of the plaintiff."

The opera tenor alleged the cafeteria corporation, in an advertisement last January 16, claimed he recommended a certain food.

The advertisement, Martinelli's suit contends, represented him "to be a person who would seek notoriety by such means."

Berlin Claims Proof in Paris' League Threat

France Won't Let Geneva 'Work Against Her,' Nazis Contend.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 11.—A French threat to leave the League of Nations because of the Locarno situation was seized upon by German officials tonight as proof of Nazi charges France would not let the League "work against her."

"Now it is clear," a foreign office spokesman said. "Germany's contention was correct. Furthermore, the Franco-Russian pact is gradually being smoked out.

"Russia's eagerness to back France against Germany justifies our fears the pact had more behind it than was admitted."

League Invitation Awaited.

Germany, a spokesman announced, will not be represented at the opening session of the League Council in London Saturday to consider a French appeal against Germany's violation of the treaty.

There were strong indications, however, that if the council formally invites the Reich to attend she will do so.

Rumors circulated tonight that France is contemplating backing a boycott upon the Olympic games to be held in Germany this summer. They fell upon unwilling ears, for one argument understood to have been used against violating Locarno was fear of reprisals against the Olympics, for which much money has been laid out.

"Defendant's Bench" Avoided.

Discussing participation in the Council session, high quarters intimated that Germany sees no reason to rush "to the defendant's bench in court" merely on an intimation by the secretary general of the League of Nations, Dr. Joseph A. C. Avenol, that he would be glad to be informed if the Nazis decide to attend.

Since Germany is no longer a League member, she is not anxious to attend a meeting without a specific invitation.

Tactically, Germany hopes to gain by not appearing on the first day. In proportion as she remains aloof, Wilhelmstrasse officials appeared to think, so will the tone of Germany's "adversaries" become more polite and more objective.

New Isolation Feared.

There was little doubt Germany would like, in the last analysis, to be present in London, for absence of its representatives might lead to a new isolation, besides subjecting the Reich to the charge of being afraid to "face the music."

What German diplomacy therefore hopes and expects is that the Council members, soon after assembling Saturday, will decide it is useless to discuss the Franco-Belgian complaint about a unilateral breach of the Locarno pact without hearing the other side. Thereupon Germany could, by special invitation, make a dramatic entry.

Omar, the Tent Maker, Paged in Pattern Muddle

Lincoln, Neb., March 11 (AP).—Workers at the Gordon, Neb., WPA sewing project are conducting a search in which Omar, the maker of tents, may have an interest.

They want a pattern for a pair of bloomers, size 58, and they can't find one. Mark Werner, District WPA director, reported: "The supervisor has been unable to locate a pattern to enable making the ponderous garment."

Hiranuma Will Head Tokyo Privy Council

Tokyo, March 11 (AP).—Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma was appointed president of the privy council tonight to succeed Baron Kitokuro Ikki, liberal, who resigned on grounds of ill health.

Militarists had long opposed Ikki. Hiranuma has been vice president of the council. Kentaro Arai was named to that post. Investitures will be held tomorrow.

A Significant Dedication.

Dedication of the Woodrow Wilson High School is a significant event in the annals of education in Washington. The new modern structure will notably relieve the acute congestion of high schools in the Northwest section. School building has lagged so far behind the city's rapid growth in population in recent years that every additional structure opened to use is rightly regarded as a major achievement.

If the pupils and teachers of Washington schools, to say nothing of parents, citizens and officials, appear to be overly exuberant in their praise of mere brick and concrete molded into educational structures, that materialistic enthusiasm may be easily condoned. For the District school system is still using some buildings erected before the Civil War and some temporary shacks that are wholly out of keeping with modern educational standards.

It is pleasing to note, however, that the dedication exercises at Wilson High School emphasized an even more important theme than adequate physical facilities. Education is always handicapped by a lack of equipment, overcrowding of pupils or overworking of teachers. But the correction of these conditions is not the first essential to real cultivation of human intelligence. The most important aspect of education is the unbiased presentation of facts and ideas as aids in the unhampered pursuit of truth. As Superintendent Ballou so fittingly declared at the dedicatory services:

> Neither ignorance, nor visionary schemes, nor suppression of truth will ever bring order out of the present chaos; only intelligence and high purpose among our citizens can.

The reiteration of this ideal is especially significant because of the current attempts of a few fanatical individuals to restrict the curriculum of the District schools by law. Even more important than the dedication of a new "temple of education," as Commissioner Hazen called it, is the rededication of school officials to that cause of intelligent and undistorted instruction from which "red riders" would divert it.

Not A Hopeful Quest.

Investigation of agricultural markets abroad has been a popular pastime for the Administration's farm experts. Two years ago Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell spent some time in Europe, attending conferences and surveying the prospects for exporting a larger volume of American farm products. About a year ago Oscar G. Johnston was sent abroad primarily to investigate the outlook for Dixie cotton in world markets. Now the President has designated Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA, "to survey conditions in Europe at first hand" from the American farmers' viewpoint.

It cannot be said, therefore, that the Administration has overlooked effects of its farm policies upon the exportation of agricultural commodities. Aside from these individual investigations, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics gathers extensive data on agricultural trends throughout the world. There seems to be no lack of information on what foreign countries are doing or may be expected to do. The trouble is that these data have been for the most part ignored in carrying forward the domestic policy.

Price-raising policies have unquestionably increased the difficulties of marketing American crops abroad. Cotton is now moving to foreign markets much more freely than it did a year ago. But the Department of Agriculture estimates an increase of 2,400,000 bales in the world cotton crop this year, most of the increase being in foreign planting. Apparently restrictions upon the domestic crop through the soil-conservation program will not be as drastic as they were under the Bankhead act. Even so, the steadily expanding output in other countries continues to weaken the American hold upon cotton markets which we have supplied for many years.

So the European trip of Mr. Davis is not likely to arouse any enthusiasm among cotton producers or other farmers dependent upon a recapture of foreign markets for permanent prosperity. At the present moment he will probably find the harassed statesmen of Europe more interested in stimulating basic crops in their own countries than ever before. And since it cannot be assumed that he is carrying any bargaining proposals in his pocket, Mr. Davis' jaunt may turn out to be little more than a much-needed vacation for a conscientious and overworked official.

France Keeps Cool.

Premier Sarraut's well-balanced speech to the French Chamber of Deputies helps to clear the lurid European atmosphere. Without minimizing any of the implications of Germany's "sudden and brutal re-occupation of the demilitarized zone" he has made it plain that France will not reply by an act of aggression against Germany. Instead she will rest her case first with the meeting of the Locarno signatories, less Germany, in London today, and then with the session of the League Council which has also been summoned to meet in London on Saturday.

Capitalization of her diplomatic advantage obviously prompts France to be as scrupulous in observance of Locarno obligations as Germany has been reckless. But it is not punctilious regard for the proprieties, nor even natural hesitation to take any irreparable action, which most assists a circumspect attitude on the part of the French government at the present juncture. An even greater influence is to be found in the existence of a well-established international machinery to which France can refer her case with confidence.

Under the terms of the Locarno Treaty, France would probably be justified in regarding Hitler's latest step as "an unprovoked act of aggression" calling for military reprisals. And, regardless of the British and Italian attitude, France could at this moment probably beat Germany to her knees. Without allies, and opposed by Belgium, the Little Entente, and Russia as well as France, the chances of Germany to defend herself successfully would be slim. But such a war would go far to wreck what is left of domestic stability in France as well as other countries. So that reference of the problem to the League's Council is highly practical as well as idealistic statesmanship on the part of Paris.

The Council is so constituted that its findings will prove, in effect, an incontestable judgment on the justifiability of the German action. The present representatives of Latin America—Argentina, Chile and Ecuador—can be counted upon to take an absolutely impartial position. Turkey, another Council member, used forceful action to overthrow the treaty of Sevres and is therefore likely to play the role of advocate for Germany. Rumania, with an eye on Hungary, will certainly support France. The strength of Great Britain, Australia, Denmark and Spain will undoubtedly be utilized in favor of a constructive outcome from the present tangle. In short, the likelihood of some solution far more promising than the dubious arbitrament of force may reasonably be expected.

In the acid test, moreover, France is remaining true to the League idea. Premier Sarraut speaks with the utmost sincerity when he says that his government "will struggle to defend the new order in international relations." And the strength of the French case is emphasized by his willingness to submit it to a cool juridical review. Only if this course should be altered, in favor of a "preventive war" against Germany, would France forfeit the diplomatic advantage which Hitler's blundering impetuosity has given her.

In The Florida Mud.

As an example of dubious administrative policy the Florida Ship Canal is outstanding. It was indorsed by the President in a moment of idealistic exuberance after a steamer had grounded in the Florida Keys, endangering the lives of its passengers. Apparently, Mr. Roosevelt had forgotten the numerous adverse reports on the proposed canal by Army engineers and other competent authorities. At any rate he ignored the best judgment of his public works administrator, Secretary Ickes, and launched a $138,000,000 project with an allocation of $5,000,000 from the work relief fund.

Action in haste is excusable, especially when prompted by humanitarian motives. Since the original $5,000,000 allotted to the Florida Ship Canal was spent, however, the President has had ample opportunity to reflect upon the desirability of the undertaking. Groups of Florida citizens, with the support of some geological experts, have expressed fears that the canal may drain the underground water from large areas of fertile land and thus impair its value. Investigators have concluded that revenue from the canal will never repay the investment. Of more fundamental importance, the House of Representatives recently refused to appropriate money for continuation of the work on the ground that this immense project had never been approved by Congress.

In spite of these numerous indications that a mistake has been made, work on the canal is still going forward. Three days after the House Appropriations Committee had eliminated funds for this and other questionable undertakings from the War Department supply bill, the Chief Executive added $200,000 to the canal fund from the work-relief appropriation. Even if Congress finally refuses to make any specific appropriation to build a canal which some shipping companies regard as useless, the Administration may seemingly go ahead, pouring work-relief funds into the Florida mud.

This is the very antithesis of responsible administrative procedure. Unless Congress is ready to abdicate its authority over the national purse strings, it should take the moral to heart. The next relief appropriation must be drawn in such terms that the Administration cannot, at discretion, proceed with undertakings which inquiry by the legislative arm may prove to be undesirable.

Inadequate Defense.

Senator Robinson makes an inevitably inadequate reply to critics of the Administration's relief policies when he undertakes to defend the WPA against charges that money is being wasted on useless projects.

The Senator discoursed at length upon the $19,000 Memphis pound—the butt of sarcastic jibes—emphasizing its protective value to the city's residents against assaults of mad dogs. He also insisted, with reason, that it is a "task requiring almost superhuman ability" to find the right kind of projects for "white collar workers." But after offering a detailed defense of a long list of WPA projects that have attracted unfavorable notice, the Senator apparently concluded that he had spiked the guns of the enemy.

He made a fatal admission, however, in saying that: "The theory underlying the system of unemployment aid embraced in the Works Progress Administration is unavoidably affected with limitations as to time and location of projects, and skill or lack of skill of workers." In plain language that means that WPA expenditures are made under conditions that inevitably entail waste, preclude long-time systematized planning of a public works program, and increase the per capita cost of relief. The cumbrous Federal bureaucracy established to administer local relief also adds to the cost of the undertaking and emphasizes the necessity of a radical reform of the present system.

Charges of graft and political favoritism, which Senator Robinson studiously ignored, should be thoroughly probed and uprooted when discovered. But such abuses, after all, would be found under any system calling for the disbursement of huge relief funds. It is the waste inherent in the present method of administering relief, even under the most honest and capable supervision, that condemns the WPA.

It stands condemned because it is based upon a fundamentally wrong relief system—wrong in conception and faulty in execution. The cost of relief is raised, and the value of the services performed is lowered, by creating jobs instead of confining outlays to useful public works and direct relief benefits to the unemployed.

The wasteful character of the system is further emphasized by shifting responsibility for administration of relief to the Federal Government instead of localizing it. Senator Robinson is certainly wrong when he asserts that this kind of program is necessary to relieve the hunger, misery and poverty of the unemployed.

Another Folger Bequest.

Once again Washingtonians in particular, and lovers of Shakespeare in general, are benefited by a handsome bequest from the Folger family. It was Henry C. Folger who conceived and made possible the unique library on Capitol Hill which bears his name. And now it is the will of his widow, who died last month, which makes a further contribution toward the upkeep of one of this city's most dignified, beautiful and interesting memorials.

It would be hard to imagine two men more totally different in most respects than William Shakespeare and Henry C. Folger. One was a strolling player, an ale-house habitue, a temperamental artist. The other was listed in Who's Who as a "capitalist and chairman of the board of Standard Oil of New York." Yet the genius which the one possessed, enabling him to write "not of an age, but for all time," and the appreciation of ability which made the other a figure as well known to the arts as to commerce, have combined to form a shrine of which the fame has spread to the far ends of the earth.

With reference to the Shakespeare Library, Mrs. Folger's will reads simply: "I was associated for many years with my husband in this work and desire that the bulk of my property be, as was his, dedicated to its continuance." This is a fine testimonial to the fact that Mr. Folger's ceaseless quest for valuable Shakespeareana was not that of a calculating and selfish collector. Next to the rare gift of unusual creation comes that cultured appreciation which seeks to preserve and diffuse for civilization the artistic heritage of the human race.

Another Transatlantic Air Project

From the Hartford Courant.

Some months ago, the United States made arrangements with a British commission under which the preliminary work necessary to establish regular air service between the two countries will be undertaken this summer. Now another arrangement has been made with German representatives looking to the establishment of another transatlantic air line, presumably at about the same time the British schedule is started.

As yet there is small probability that a transatlantic air service can be self-supporting. Mail subsidies on the part of the United States and direct subsidies on the part of the foreign countries will probably be necessary for many years to come. But, given the financial support and the co-operation of the countries directly and indirectly concerned, there is nothing to prevent reasonably safe regular transatlantic operation. For some time the equipment and the instruments needed have been available. Now it appears that they will be put to use.

Red Rider Implications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of the District of Columbia are not the only ones concerned with the red rider legislation affecting the public schools of the National Capital. Nor are the rights of the children and youth in the schools to learn the important facts of the current human scene the only elements involved.

There are something like a million teachers in our country, and thirty-three million learners. Let the authority of Congress to prohibit any reference whatever to the red menace be established in the District, and the influence may spread everywhere, which is precisely what the agitators propose. Were it possible in America to enforce the red rider legislation, the result might be, but for one other set of factors, the making of Americans into ignoramuses.

The other set of factors includes the obligations of teachers to impart knowledge and to train in wisdom. Men and women who are set up by their profession as competent to teach and who are commonly accepted and recognized as competent and worthy will proceed to exercise their prerogatives, no matter what legislatures enact. These obligations are inherent in their status and function, just as the obligations of lawyers to represent their clients and of doctors to prescribe for their patients and of clergymen to instruct their parishioners are inherent in their several professions.

The persons who are talking too much and out of turn are not the teachers of America but the red baiters.

Three Cheers For Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers, no, a hundred, for Pegler, the man who sees things as they are, is not "taken in" by propaganda and glamor, and reports fearlessly on what he sees. His language is not the language of the diplomats—he does not manipulate words to disguise, distort or gloss over their meaning. His is a healthy language, refreshing in its outspokenness.

I, for one, am grateful to The Post for the opportunity it is extending to this champion of truth. I have seen many of the things and conditions of which he tells and know that they are facts. We need men like him, men who see straight, with their eyes wide open, with their minds unbiased, free from prejudice, and possessing the courage to say things out loud. I enjoy his "wise cracks." A. U. S. Not Involved.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again the territorial integrity of a nation is endangered. Once more a nation assumes the role of aggressor in this controversial world of international entanglements.

Alliances, treaties, ententes, proposals of peace and plans of international justice go on trying in vain to make men realize the futility of war. I cannot believe the peoples of the world want war, and yet leaders throughout these so-called civilized nations are instigating friction. We have aggression in Africa; we have it in Outer Mongolia and now, through the repudiation of the Locarno pact, we have it threatened, at least, on the continent of Europe.

Hitler has offered, he says, a program that would bring a real lasting peace and friendship to all of Germany's neighbors. How can proposals of peace be accepted conscientiously when in every nation there are huge war machines being perfected constantly because of fear from other nations?

If the people of the world are desirous of peace, then it must be true that underlying interests instrumental in negotiating war are ultimately receiving profits from these inhuman conflicts engaged in by humans. The quicker they are weeded out the better for society, but until such is done let us remain free from entanglements. The United States, in its treaty with Germany, did not ascribe to the sections of the Versailles treaty affecting political arrangements in Europe. Thus, it is not legally involved in Germany's present action.

Woman's Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Hope Ridings Miller's entertaining interview with Dorothy Thompson recently published in The Post, the latter is quoted as saying, in reference to an invitation to speak over the radio on "Is Woman's Place in the Home?" "Five years ago no one would have thought of such a question. No one in America then wondered about woman's place. It was wherever she chose to make it. Today men are digging up queries they put to us back in the pre-suffrage days."

I can only guess what the home folks elsewhere think about it. But I am pretty familiar with the populous Mount Pleasant section where I live. It seems quite certain that most of its women as well as most of its men now give the question of woman's place in the home the same safe and sane consideration that they did before women were permitted to vote. As far as undue worry over it is concerned they are quite willing to let the feminists enjoy the worrying, if any. And that, if you care to guess, is probably the case in all parts of the country.

My guess is that when female members of the intelligentsia worry about the static, bourgeois persistence of "the home," they are under the spell of a something which they call a "career." It would be a good thing if they could understand that the average man has as much right to kick because he has to roll up his sleeves or wear his white collar as a wage-earning automaton as the congenital household drudge has to complain because she can't be a career woman. There are careers and careers, and not as many as one in a million of the earth's inhabitants comes within anything nearer than moon-high reach of the dream-tinted feministic "career."

The dictionary definition of "career" is: "General course of action or conduct, as in a calling or in some undertaking, especially when notable; as, Washington's career as a soldier."

Soberly speaking, I presume that in their talk about following a career, what the feminists have in mind is, more or less, "a notable career." If they would only tell us so without belittling "the home"—without high-hatting the woman who is satisfied with the ordinary career of a wife and mother—I guess horse-and-buggy citizens might stop digging up the same old queries.

Whether as men or as women most of us must at most be satisfied with the short and simple annals of circumscribed careers. But even in the before-woman-suffrage days, few men of culture and common sense expressed invidious disapproval of women whose careers were notable. Today there is no common-sense American whose pride would suffer to a very great extent if a woman were elected President of the United States in, say, 1940. TIPTON TALBOTT.

A Personnel Secretary?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have lost our Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The secretary, because of his infirmities, has been almost continuously unable to shoulder the duties of his office. Neither has made the slightest emotional appeal to the service man. And the War Department is similarly handicapped.

Of subversive teachings, Mr. McSwain says, "Generally . . . officers do not know about these things, any more than they know about the private lives of their men." For safety and efficiency, officers should take an interest in both.

It is a mystery why there is no man at the head of the department, or a secretary for personnel, chosen for his magnetism and his knowledge of and sympathy for the enlisted man—a former enlisted man would not be bad.

An officer or department secretary is not a factory foreman. He controls men's lives when off duty, not merely when on a detail. Their possibility of outside friendly contacts is limited by the nature of the services. Officers should do what they can to modify adverse conditions, not leave it entirely to foreigners and communists.

Give us one man, knowing and liking the service men, interested in their welfare, able to fire their imagination and loyalty; one man, not a college professor, but a man neither patronizing nor ignoring the enlisted man, believing in discipline and obedience but knowing a commission neither adds to nor takes from inherent qualities. The rank is still the guinea's stamp—and the man's the gold, for all that—unless character too, under the present dispensation, is trying experiments with depreciated values.

EX-SERVICE.
Philadelphia, Pa., March 8.

Injustice To Mr. Blanton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On March 7, in an article in connection with the "D. C. Bill," statement is made by Congressman Blanton that the reason for taking $1,000 from the salary of Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, is that he "paid no taxes, and was given quarters and board free"; that "he's better off than we members of Congress" . . . "It costs us $2,500 to get elected to come here. I'm so poor now that I have to sell a piece of property every two years to live here."

Probably Mr. Blanton does not take into consideration that he, too, is furnished "quarters" free, and rather good quarters, if one takes the trouble to go to the House Office Building and inspect. In addition, he possibly overlooks the fact that a salary of $7,500 is poor compensation when one takes into account the amount of money a physician has to expend on his medical education and experience before he can reach the place in his profession where he is entrusted with the responsibility of an institution such as Gallinger. Also, in this position there is little or no opportunity to add to that $7,500 from any outside source.

However, apparently, Mr. Blanton has not had that opportunty either—judging from his statement that he is getting poorer and poorer each year and in order to remain here must sell property every two years.

It would seem that the people of Texas are doing Mr. Blanton a great injustice by continuing his services in Washington, much as he desires to stay, because—accepting his own statement—in so doing they are perhaps reducing his finances to such an extent that eventually he must be cared for at the expense of some organization or institution; and the people of his State ought to know about this condition.

He has succeeded so admirably in misrepresenting his State that it would seem only right and proper that his constituents in Texas—as a tribute to their Congressman for his vociferous outbursts, "damning" some, threatening to "knock hell" out of others—supposedly in the interest of those he represents, should reward their dignified (?) statesman by the purchase, perhaps, of a 100-acre pasture in Texas, erecting in the middle of it a tin barn, place Mr. Blanton inside and lock the door.

Until some such steps are taken, Texas will be sadly remiss in its gratitude to Mr. Blanton, and in bad odor with the District of Columbia. Since Mr. Blanton is seeking re-election this year, the information must be conveyed to his constituents in order that they may have an opportunity to do the right thing both by Mr. Blanton and the City of Washington while time permits.

White Elephant!

Post Office, Thursday.

WE met him at a White House reception, watching arriving diplomats all aglitter with orders. Both his dress-coat and the sallow skin of his face were too large for him—and his lack-luster eyes betrayed a shrunken spirit.

"You look almost sane," said he. "Why're you here? I'm after a job and my wife still thinks the way to get one's to show yourself. But I wouldn't wear my decoration. Foreign decorations are a racket.

* * *

"I'm a butcher," he finally continued. "Martha calls me a packer, but a butcher's what I was brought up—butcher for 25 years, packer only toward the end of the boom. We'd hived a little pile and Martha kept talking about making ladders of our dead selves: that was why.

"We had to catch up with the Joneses and then keep up with them. Nothing would suit Martha but I must get a decoration. She hauled me here to Washington and we entertained.

"Entertained? You could hardly get to the frigidaire, there were so many diplomats and diplomatesses around. Then, one 6 a. m., when we were getting into bed, she said:

"'Philander, the most wonderful thing's happened! There's an earthquake or something in Siam, and thousands are starving.'

"So I gave an unsolicited subscription and got the Order of the White Elephant, Second Class.

"Martha was some set back when she heard the diamonds in the big elephant were just brilliants and that decorated people always supply their own jewels—if they want real ones. Then she said we'd do it, so I had to: the cost was a knockout, but the depression was just starting, and Martha said diamonds were a stable investment . . .

"I got kind of proud of that gaudy gadget, myself, only the depression got worse. We beat it home, mortgaged the house and were thankful I could butcher. Right through it all, though, Martha hung on to my diamond elephant—said what, if I couldn't wear it over my apron? Once or twice I most begged her on my knees to sell it: nothing doing—it was 'an investment in morale.' Otherwise, she was more like the Martha I used to know, and last November, when I was lower'n ever, she said we'd got to drop everything and take one of those Christmas cruises to the Orient.

"I'll never forget the day we reached Bangkock. The Siamese King was giving a reception, and the cruise-managers got the whole passenger-list invited. Martha laid out my old dress-suit, put the studs in my shirt and plunked down our diamond Elephant—which I'd clean forgotten I had . . .

"'Not wear your Siamese order at the Siamese Court?' says she.

"So I had to.

* * *

"Well, in the bare-chested jam in the big hall, it did make me feel I still was somebody, and I could see she felt that way, too, 'Was I right?' she asks, kind of nudging me. 'Look at the King.' He had a blazing White Elephant, too—only his was a sight bigger'n mine was. 'Bigger,' says Martha, 'only because he is the King. And that Court Chamberlain, or whatever he is, who's doing the introducing, why, if his elephant's bigger than ours, anybody can see it's nothing but brilliants.—Now, Philander!'

* * *

"It was our turn to get introduced. That Chamberlain with the Elephant of the First Class—in paste—asked our names and passed 'em on to the King. You didn't have to kiss his hand: he shook yours, quick, the King did.

"'Mr. and Mrs. Larkins,' says he, 'I hope you'll enjoy your too brief visit to Siam.'

"I didn't know what to answer, but Martha cut in: 'We feel quite at home, Your Majesty,' she told him, 'because, you see, my husband has the honor of belonging to the Order of the White Elephant.' And she let out all about the earthquake-subscription.

* * *

"I'm bound to say she did it well—but there's something, you can do too well. The King was tickled to death. Then he gave a look at my decoration.

"'Only the Second Class?' he asked. 'Why, there must have been some mistake. It had ought to have been the First Class—and it will be.' And he turns toward the Chamberlain and calls out: 'Bhadravadi!'

"Bhadravadi — that was the Chamberlain's name, I guess—bows up to us. And the King whips Bhadravadi's ribbon and its paste elephant over Bhadravadi's head, and my ribbon and its diamond elephant over my head and gives Bhadravadi mine and puts Bhadravadi's around my neck.

* * *

"'Philander M. Larkins,' says the King, 'we take pleasure in repairing an error; we take pleasure in recognizing adequately your generosity to our country; we take pleasure in investing you with the Order of the White Elephant of the First Class.'"

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Of Thee I Sing.

Vienna, March 11.

YOU must come over to Europe this year. Try to come for the Olympic Games in Berlin and take a little swing through Switzerland, Italy, Austria, the Balkans, Russia and Czechoslovakia. Then go home and fall on your face and kiss the granite blocks on West street, where the steamboats are tied up.

Have a good look at the customs inspectors over here, who flop into the trains every few hours wanting to see your passport and count your money and go through your baggage for letters, banknotes and pamphlets, cigarets, matches and souvenirs.

Try to realize that in each case a race of people boasting of their ancient civilization and their modern education are required to accept the belief and may be thrown into prison for open defiance.

List to the strange jabber of many languages that strike the ear in a short journey.

• • • •

COME over to Europe and learn to appreciate your own country, where you may drive through 48 States with one license plate on your car, using one kind of money, speaking one language and without permitting anyone to open your baggage or look at your private papers.

Austria and Hungary used to be one country, but today you are stopped at the border and put through the mill. Coming out of Italy, a treasury man will fumble through your letters from home searching for smuggled lire. The lira is only imaginary money, with a value established by an old-timer named Benito Mussolini, who was a notorious thinker in his day. There's no reason on earth why you should want to keep any of his money, because it will buy much less outside Italy than on its own home grounds. Nevertheless, Mussolini doesn't want it to escape. So his men frisk your possessions at the border and Hitler's men when you are leaving Germany if they think you have a certain look.

In Czechoslovakia you will draw a breath of fresh air. The Czechs are a more or less liberally sane island in a sea of madness. You can buy papers and books in Prague for and against communism, for and against Fascism, Nazism and Christianity. They don't like to let too much of their money leak out, but they aren't very particular.

IF you live in Austria and you're coming home with a 50-cent toy the Austrian customs collector wants his 2 cents duty. Going into Russia, you had better declare every thread and shred of clothing and every gilt collar button and get a registered inventory or they'll hold you up on the way out and give you trouble.

I've driven across many State boundaries at home, and sometimes I've been guilty of very strong opinions regarding the reigning politicians thereof. But even on entering Louisiana at the height of his power I didn't find it necessary to declare an admiration for Huey P. Long, the dictator for the moment, and I doubt that Americans entering Georgia or Kansas today are made uncomfortable should they express doubt regarding Eugene Talmadge or Alfred Landon.

It appears that Los Angeles—which is not a State but a condition, and a clear one at that—has recently made another attempt to impose immigration restrictions upon the poor. But in that case a formality which is perfectly normal in Europe has been denounced as a conspicuous outrage against ordinary liberty in the United States.

• • • •

TRY to imagine the troops and customs stations and currency and passport inspectors of 48 States holding up traffic, going through the little possessions of the travelers and jawing away at them in 48 languages at hundreds of thousands of points of entry and exit along the State boundaries and you may get a glimpse of an idea.

Consider the condition of the people in our so-called backward States, where superstition still prevails, doctors are miles apart and movie programs are changed only once a week, and then compare it with the Balkan backwaters, which have been swept by several tides of civilization but remain today primitive, savage, aboriginal and lousy.

By all means come over to Europe this year, and don't miss Germany. If you never appreciated your own country before you will then.

Hearts Aflutter

King Edward's Hint He May Yet Choose A Bride To Share England's Throne Stirs Femininity From Mayfair to Manhattan.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

FROM Mayfair to Manhattan hearts fluttered yesterday, I am sure, when the news flashed forth that he who used to be the Prince of Wales asked what passes for the appropriations committee of Great Britain for an earmarked fund which would make it possible for him to get married if he should so make up his mind.

Immediately the gossips' tongues began wagging and names of members of Europe's remaining royalty were mentioned as possible brides of Edward VIII, King of England. Headlines, which had been treating of a possible war in Europe, were hastily rewritten in Fleet street and throughout the Newspaper Rows of democratic America, screaming of the possibility of wedlock in Buckingham Palace.

And a lot of gals who are now not as young as they once were must have heaved romantic sighs for the good old days when they, too, were emblazoned in 48-point type as those who had attained the height of feminine achievement when, for one brief, breathless moment, they had Danced With The Prince Of Wales. I, for one, wondered what Imogene Stanley or Gracie Davidson, those two famed female reporters who had crashed the gates of society a decade or so ago, were thinking when they read the news.

• • • •

TIME was when any gal with a pencil and notebook could be assured of a by-line, and perhaps a raise in pay, if she could slip beyond the armed guards and, for one brief moment, swoon in princely arms. Throughout the length and breadth of the land there were a number of debs who looked down their snobbish noses because they, and they alone, had upon occasion been singled out by the slim man with the blue shirt for a fox trot at the dansant.

Where are they now, these debs of yesteryear? Married, I suppose, to stock salesmen and breeders of wire-haired fox terriers. Living in the suburbs and laying in canned goods against the coming revolution! Wasting away in Chevy Chase and worrying about the milk bill. And sighing as they read the evening paper while their husbands, grown stout and stuffy, grunt at ease on the living room divan.

"Darling," I can hear hubby say, "Air Reduction went up 7¼ today. Looks like we can get that new car if this keeps up."

"I don't think she's the least bit good-looking no, I don't."

"What ever are you talking about, Who isn't good-looking?"

"Princess Juliana, that Dutch girl they say may be going to marry Eddy."

"Eddy who? What in the dickens are you talking about?"

"Why, Eddy, you know, the King of England. Remember when I danced with him? Gee, he was divine! And didn't you look jealous that night! You never do look jealous any more."

"Eddy! Eddy! Still thinking about Eddy! You danced with him, by my watch, for exactly 3¼ minutes ten whole years ago up on the North Shore and you're still thinking about him! If you'd think about . . ."

"You just don't understand. You have no feeling. No romance. Oh, I knew I should never have married you. Perhaps I might . . ."

"Dinner is served, Madame."

"Dinner for one, please, James. I'm going down to the club, where I can talk sense. Looks like they might be having trouble in Europe any day now, and I want to know how to act if they do. Says here Stocks Move up on Broad Front . . ."

"Gee, he was divine . . ."

• • • •

THAT, I imagine, was the scene in dozens of households last night. Abroad Hitler was putting cartridges into his guns, Sir Anthony Eden was brushing off his best dress suit, Benito Mussolini was smiling in anticipation, and Britain's cabinet, summoned because of The Crisis, was meeting in an extraordinary session.

But Edward had hinted he might want to get married soon and make a new Queen of England—somebody else to set the style of British hats. Three girls from Greece, a Russian grand duchess, a Dutch princess were named in the dispatches as his possible choice. And while hearts fluttered from Mayfair to Manhattan because the aging salesman of the British Empire might some day take bride and wanted the British government to provide for her, all else faded into insignificance.

Back in August, 1914, kings and queens were talking of marriages, princesses were being named, dowries were being arranged, too. And hearts that fluttered then soon were to stand still when shrill bugles blew . . .

Edward May Wed Eugenie

European royalty, however, and many Britons believed the King would choose a British girl—a commoner. There is precedent for that. The Duke of York, now heir to the throne, married Elizabeth Howes-Lyon.

Many Britons were cautious in predicting the King was planning marriage, insisting he merely was getting his financial house in order for any eventuality. They recalled court gossip has been marching Edward down the marriage aisle since he was 17—always without basis of fact.

In 1911 he was supposed to be ready to marry Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia, daughter of the Kaiser. Subsequent gossip had him engaged to all the daughters of the late Czar of Russia; to three Italian princesses and to Princess Astrid of Sweden who married King Leopold of Belgium.

By 1930 the favorite candidate was Lady May Cambridge, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Athlone. The next year she married Capt. Abel Smith, son of a banker.

Baltimore Girl Favorite.

None of these girls, however, was chosen by the King in his care-free days as the Prince of Wales for dancing and swimming partners. Instead, he was found most often in the company of a beautiful American—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, of Baltimore.

In the excitement of all the romantic gossip today, the question of the King's salary and expense account was lost.

It was pointed out that the King had given thought to children that might be born of his marriage. A phrase in his message, "as long as the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall are vested in himself," was significant. Should a son be born to Edward and his Queen, the child would become the Duke of Cornwall and would receive the Cornwall revenues. Later in his life there would be a special ceremony creating him Prince of Wales.

While it is impossible to figure the exact income of the King of England, every one agrees it is more than $1,000,000 annually.

The late King George in 1934 received $425,000 of the Duchy of Lancaster and $400,890 of the civil list. In addition, King Edward will receive $333,900 of the Duchy of Cornwall. That would bring his total income to around $2,347,000 a year.

Chamberlain said he would move for appointment of a select committee to consider the civil list.

Eugenie Plans Visit.

Athens, March 11 (U.P.).—Princess Eugenie, mentioned prominently as possible Queen of England now that King Edward VIII has indicated he may marry, may soon visit London, it was reported tonight.

The British throne has never been prejudiced against tall queens. Queen Mary was taller than the late King George V, as was another Mary, Queen of William III.

Channel Work To Begin Soon, Says Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 11.—President Roosevelt predicted the "early undertaking" of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep-channel project in a message read tonight to the Detroit seaway conference by Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada.

Pointing out that neither the United States nor Canada has ratified the 1932 treaty which would permit work on the vast project to go forward, the Chief Executive declared that "something further than mere resubmission of a treaty is called for."

"We are seeking a new approach to the problems involved," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, expressing confidence that in view of the policy of co-operation between the two countries, agreement on the terms for completing the 2,000-mile channel for ocean-going vessels "should present no insuperable difficulties."

Ratification Studied.

Senator Pittman, who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted that Senate ratification of a St. Lawrence waterway, treaty, which failed by 13 votes in 1934, will be accomplished at the next session of Congress.

The treaty was not brought up for action at the present session, he said, "first, because he did not have the votes, and second, because Congress is determined to adjourn as soon as the vital domestic legislation is disposed of."

Delay has sprung, President Roosevelt said, "from fears of economic harm to special localities or to special interests, which I have always believed are grossly exaggerated, and especially from opposition based upon the fact that the power available in these boundary waters is publicly owned and will be generated and distributed, under existing laws, by public agencies in both Canada and the United States."

Describing the St. Lawrence navigation and power improvement as "an important part of the program of the present Administration," the President declared, "it will enable us to take the next step to extend to the Northeast benefits already assured from works completed or under construction in the Tennessee Valley in the Southeast, at Boulder Dam in the Southwest, and on the Columbia River in the Northwest."

He expressed a "strong conviction that recent events have helped to clear the way for action, upon the broadest lines of public benefits."

Asserting that "railroads will not be injured," Senator Pittman said, "80 per cent of the traffic that moves through the deep seaway will reach its destination along our coastline. This freight will be moved westward from the Atlantic and eastward from the Pacific to the interior * * * with rail traffic."

Loss of traffic in port cities "would be largely offset by the interior haul from such points and * * * entirely compensated for by the increased prosperity of a large section of our country," he said.

Fears of Mississippi Valley States that the seaway would interfere with construction and maintenance of the 9-foot lakes-to-gulf waterway, the Senator added, are contradicted by "all of the engineering data and all of the expert testimony."

Senator Pittman said the seaway "will add 3,576 iles to our present 11,936 miles of coastline. * * * It will bring the ocean to the interior of our great continent; it will permit this great interior country to export and import by water at a saving in transportation costs from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. This great benefit will inure to 21 States, containing 34 per cent of all our population, and 39 per cent of its manufactures."

Aid of Douglas, McCarl Sought On Economies

By the Associated Press.

Authoritative sources disclosed last night that engagement of Lewis Douglas, former Budget Director, and Comptroller General J. R. McCarl will be proposed to aid a Senate committee's investigation of Government agencies.

The committee will meet today to organize and possibly outline the course by which it will seek consolidations and elimination of "useless" agencies. It was created under a resolution by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, who probably will be named chairman.

Committee members, it was learned coincidentally, are determined to keep the committee's findings out of this year's political campaign. The Byrd resolution calls for a report at the next session of Congress.

Because of possible political repercussions, committee members plan no disclosures until after next January. It was reported also that it would be impossible for the committee to finish its work before then.

If either Douglas or McCarl, or both, should be engaged by the committee, they would be called upon to serve as "efficiency experts." Another mentioned in the same connection is Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, Treasury purchasing chief.

Douglas already is, and McCarl soon will be, in the category of "experts outside the Goverment," whom Byrd said some weeks ago he hoped to enlist for the inquiry.

Douglas resigned as President Roosevelt's budget director in September, 1934, after disagreeing with the Administration's financial policy. Since that time, he frequently has made speeches criticizing Government spending and has been mentioned as a possible Republican Vice Presidential candidate.

McCarl, who has clashed with the Administration at times over interpretations of laws, will retire July 1 after 15 years as Comptroller General.

In charting its course, the committee is expected to discuss today the employment of some such agency as the Brookings Institution of Washington or the Institute of Public Administration of New York to do the bulk of its investigating. Under tentative plans discussed by committee members, an agency of that type would be used in addition to experts like Douglas and McCarl.

The committee, besides Byrd, includes the Senate leaders, Robinson, Democrat, and McNary, Republican, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Townsend (Republican), Delaware. There have been indications McNary might decline to serve and that he would be succeeded by his colleague, Steiwer (Republican), Oregon.

Steiwer has on his desk a resolution to investigate spending of the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund. He said he would hold up its introduction until the course of the Byrd committee's inquiry was determined.

Knox Laughs at Own Paper's Prediction That He Can't Win

Columnist Was "All Burned Up" by Reader's Letter, Publisher Chuckled Over Refusal to Allot Him "Chinaman's Chance."

By the Associated Press.

Houston, March 11.—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, laughed heartily today when interviewers recalled a columnist of his paper had written that his boss did not have a "Chinaman's chance" to receive the Republican Presidential nomination.

The columnist was Howard Vincent O'Brien.

"The other day Howard got all burned up," Col. Knox explained. "A woman wrote him: 'How in the world can you pretend to be free and independent when you work for a man like Col. Knox—an avowed candidate for President?'

Boy, Howard got mad at that! He took his whole column that day to answer her. He wound it up by saying, 'The boss don't like this but he hasn't a Chinaman's chance to be nominated for President!'

"Later that day, one of our editors who handles our features rushed into me, gave me the copy Howard had just turned in and exclaimed: 'What do you think of all this, anyway?'

"I began reading it and smiling and chuckling and then roaring with laughter at the wallop in the last line. I told the editor: 'Don't dot an I or cross a T—let her go!'"

Senate Reports Bill to Expand F.T.C. Powers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday voted to report to the Senate the Wheeler bill to expand powers of the Federal Trade Commission over industrial practices.

Under the measure the commission would have power on its own motion to investigate and eradicate "deceptive acts and practices in commerce" in addition to its present authority to attack "unfair methods of competition."

Moreover, its authority could be directed against "persons and partnerships" as well as corporations. It was the contention of the committee that "it is manifest that unfair, detrimental or illegal practices affecting or interfering with commerce may be carried on as well by persons and partnerships as by corporations."

The bill drew protests from Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and other trade bodies which objected to expansion of the police power of the commission.

The bill had been described by the American Newspaper Publishers Associaiton as giving the commission powers equivalent to those of the OGPU, Russian secret police. The National Association of Manufacturers also opposed it on similar ground.

The commission contended the amendment making "deceptive acts and practices" unlawful was necessary in cases where it developed that the offender had a monopoly. In such cases, the commission argued, it could not now proceed because injury to competition has to be proved.

It also held the broadened language was essential to cover cases where all competitors in an industry were "equally guilty" of unfair practices.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who had an amendment pending to grant the commission authority to summon business and industry to formulate binding agreements at fair trade practice conferences, withdrew it and said he would propose it in different form on the floor.

Complete U. S. Arms Control, Nye Group Aim

Committee to Urge Federal Ownership, Control of Munitions Plants.

By the Associated Press.

Government ownership and operation of munitions plants and naval shipbuilding yards will be recommended by the Senate Munitions committee in one of four reports it is now preparing on its two-year inquiry into the causes of war.

A majority of the committee members said yesterday they would vote for a recommendation to nationalize the industries which produce the primary supplies for the Army and Navy.

There is some difference of opinion among them about how far the nationalization should extend, but the majority will favor government construction of naval vessels, and Federal operation of plants manufacturing guns and ammunition.

The four committee members ready to go this far are Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota; and Senators Clarke (Democrat), Missouri; Pope (Democrat), Idaho, and Bone (Democrat), Washington. The latter wants to go further than some others.

Nye said the report would be designed to "destroy the motives for profit in the preparation for war." He forecast that the committee, besides its nationalization proposals, would urge strict regulation of the production of all other war materials.

This regulation, he said, should include the makng of airplanes, trucks and machines, armor plate, uniforms, shoes and other essential military supplies.

"We should regulate the profits in this traffic in an effort to break down this game that makes larger defenses of our own necessary because of what we are selling to other lands," Nye said.

Mrs. Cooper Hewitt Sued By French Hotel Group

Jersey City, N. J., March 11 (U.P.).—A suit for $2,554.24 was filed against Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt McCarter today by the Societe des Hotels et Casino, Deauville, France. Mrs. McCarter is in Medical Center, said to be in a critical condition. She is under indictment in an alleged plot involving sterilization of her daughter.

The complaint charges Mrs. McCarter cashed checks totaling $8,284.24 at a Deauville hotel in 1927, which were returned marked "protested."

Quebec Priests Told To Shun All Politics

Quebec, Que., March 11 (A.P.).—Clergy of the Roman Catholic Ecclesiastical Province of Quebec today were forbidden to discuss politics under penalty of disciplinary measures "which could go so far as prohibition to say mass."

The ban came in a letter signed by Cardinal Villeneuve, archbishop of Quebec, and bishops of six dioceses.

Franco Sets Up Fascist Regime For Paraguay

By the Associated Press.

Asecuncion, Paraguay, March 11.—The provisional government of Paraguay, headed by Col. Rafael Franco, today published a decree setting up the nation as a totalitarian state modeled after German National Socialism and Italian Fascism.

The decree declared the state and the "liberating revolution" of February 17 as indivisible and banned for one year political, labor or other unions or activities which "do not emanate explicitly from the state."

Paraguay, the government asserted, will be purged of "endemic, demagogic, industrial and sectarian evils."

The official statement places in the "liberating army" the principal source of authority and declares the successful revolution implies the "same social totalitarian transformations as in contemporary Europe in the sense the liberating revolution and the state are already one and identical."

The aims of the new government, the decree said, will be the construction of a new, strong Paraguay and constitutional reorganization for a future republic.

The decree placed under jurisdiction of the minister of the interior "all questions of politics or society of the state as identified with the liberating revolution, comprehending relations or conflicts between labor and capital, and necessities of workers and laborers as equally with those of employers."

A committee of civil mobilization and a national labor department were created.

Boy, 15, Kills Brother, Wounds Young Sister

Independence, Iowa, March 11 (A.P.).—Fifteen-year-old Rodney Pace was held tonight after confessing, police said to the fatal shooting of his brother, Ogden, 18, and the wounding of his sister, Thyrza, 11, in a "sex motivated crime."

Physicians said the girl's condition was critical.

Hopkins Denies Holt Charges

fended by Harry Hopkins. What could you expect?

"To find Mr. McCullough guilty through their own investigation is to indict Hopkins himself. While they were investigating my records in Charleston, someone broke in and investigated what was in my desk in Washington.

"I have charged and put into the Record the actual letters and statements that were made. None of them have ever been denied. I charged that the projects were loaded with political favoritism, brass hats and ward heelers and that cannot be denied.

Calls Investigation "Farce."

"The investigation was a sham and a fraud and as I said to the newspapers in West Virginia, it was a farce, and 'they may give Administrator McCullough a clean bill of health in the official records, but there is not enough whitewash in the world to conceal his maladministration from the eyes of the people.' I will have a further statement to make when I read the complete report sent me by 'Cocky Harry.'

"I intend to take this to the people."

Hopkins had said:

"As the report indicates, the charge that relief clients were forced to get their jobs through political sources proved to be totally unfounded. There is no evidence of a single case out of the thousands employed from the relief rolls having secured their work through political influence."

Detailed analysis of the report and the enclosures of letters shows that Investigator Johnstone and three associates devoted 10 days to the investigation, eight of which were spent in the State.

The first charge, that the WPA in West Virginia had been subjected to political exploitation and domination, was answered by records showing that from the beginning of the program to December 10, 1935, all assignments from relief rolls were made "without question" in accordance with regulations and without political consideration.

Holt Accused McCullough.

Senator Holt had charged that job-seekers were forced to get letters from political bosses to secure WPA work. He had also charged McCullough with "using the office he holds for nothing more than to try to carry himself to the office of Governor, not for the administration of the work relief act itself." Johnstone's report held, in answer, that:

The WPA in West Virginia has a State office in Charleston and six district offices in Charleston, Lewisburg, Huntington, Elkins, Fairmont and Parkersburg. In the State office is a deputy administrator and five division directors. The report shows that the deputy administrator, E. C. Smith, jr., had no political indorsement and was a graduate engineer of 27 years' experience, including work on the Panama Canal and a distinguished war record.

Of the five division directors, two had no political indorsements, two had recommendations from both Senator Holt and Senator Neely, and one was recommended by Senator Neely.

Of 583 employes whose records were studied, 114 were appointed by their superiors without recommendation from anyone else. Similar statistics were available and were commented on concerning the entire organization.

In the files was found "no proof, letter or memorandum," relating to McCullough's supposed campaign for Governor, the report stated. Only two administrative employes, it said, under careful questioning said they had received any instructions or suggestions on the subject, and these two were the Senator's brother, M. S. Holt, and Dorr Tucker, a former secretary of Senator Holt.

The second group of Holt's charges, that the administrative and supervisory cost is unduly absorbing the work relief funds, was disposed of briefly with the statement that the cost during the entire period for administration of relief on that State has averaged 4 per cent and is 2.6 per cent during March.

The third charges, that McCullough is unfit for office, were dismissed as largely matters of opinion, and that "records show * * * no impropriety on the part of Mr. McCullough."

Funds for Projects Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Upholding Republican protests that the projects had not been specifically authorized by Congress, a Senate appropriations committee yesterday rejected a $29,000,000 proposal for continuing work on the Florida Ship Canal, the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine and three others.

The vote was 8 to 5 against an amendment to the $545,000,000 War Department appropriation bill offered by Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida.

Fletcher said he would go before the full committee today to continue his fight. The House refused to include the $29,000,000 in passing the bill.

The $29,000,000 would have been divided as follows: $12,000,000 for the Florida Canal; $9,000,000 for Passamaquoddy, $3,500,000 for the Conchas Dam in New Mexico, $2,500,000 for the Sardis Reservoir in Mississippi and $2,000,000 for the Bluestone Reservoir in West Virginia.

All these projects were begun by Executive order with allocations from WPA funds.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and others have contended on and off the Senate floor that the Florida and Maine projects were not specifically authorized by Congress in the works relief law and were "economically unsound."

Mormons Ready To Leave Mexico

Juarez, Mexico, March 11 (A.P.).—Another exodus of a religious group from the State of Chihuahua was foreseen here tonight as agrarians retained control of fertile Juarez Valley, including the wealthy Mormon settlement of Colonia Juarez.

In the face of a statement from Raul Dominguez, chief of the Chihuahua Agrarian Commission, that he had been empowered by Gov. Rodrigo M. Quevado to purchase the land seized yesterday, A. L. Pierce, bishop of the church, said he was willing to sell his holdings. Immigrants from Utah established the Mormon settlement more than 30 years ago.

Only a few weeks ago leaders of a Mennonite colony passed through here en route from Chihuahua City to Canada, announcing they were preparing to move a colony of 7,000 from Mexico because of religious repression.

Juarez Valley holdings were seized yesterday by an armed band of 50 agrarians, including Dominguez, following an allotment by the State government.

Kugel Sworn Into Office.

M. Kenneth Kugel, of Cleveland, was sworn into office yesterday as the new District smoke administrator. The oath of office was administered by Roland M. Brennan, secretary to the Board of Commissioners.

A Significant Dedication.

Dedication of the Woodrow Wilson High School is a significant event in the annals of education in Washington. The new modern structure will notably relieve the acute congestion of high schools in the Northwest section. School building has lagged so far behind the city's rapid growth in population in recent years that every additional structure opened to use is rightly regarded as a major achievement.

If the pupils and teachers of Washington schools, to say nothing of parents, citizens and officials, appear to be overly exuberant in their praise of mere brick and concrete molded into educational structures, that materialistic enthusiasm may be easily condoned. For the District school system is still using some buildings erected before the Civil War and some temporary shacks that are wholly out of keeping with modern educational standards.

It is pleasing to note, however, that the dedication exercises at Wilson High School emphasized an even more important theme than adequate physical facilities. Education is always handicapped by a lack of equipment, overcrowding of pupils or overworking of teachers. But the correction of these conditions is not the first essential to real cultivation of human intelligence. The most important aspect of education is the unbiased presentation of facts and ideas as aids in the unhampered pursuit of truth. As Superintendent Ballou so fittingly declared at the dedicatory services:

> Neither ignorance, nor visionary schemes, nor suppression of truth will ever bring order out of the present chaos; only intelligence and high purpose among our citizens can.

The reiteration of this ideal is especially significant because of the current attempts of a few fanatical individuals to restrict the curriculum of the District schools by law. Even more important than the dedication of a new "temple of education," as Commissioner Hazen called it, is the rededication of school officials to that cause of intelligent and undistorted instruction from which "red riders" would divert it.

Not A Hopeful Quest.

Investigation of agricultural markets abroad has been a popular pastime for the Administration's farm experts. Two years ago Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell spent some time in Europe, attending conferences and surveying the prospects for exporting a larger volume of American farm products. About a year ago Oscar G. Johnston was sent abroad primarily to investigate the outlook for Dixie cotton in world markets. Now the President has designated Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA, "to survey conditions in Europe at first hand" from the American farmers' viewpoint.

It cannot be said, therefore, that the Administration has overlooked effects of its farm policies upon the exportation of agricultural commodities. Aside from these individual investigations, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics gathers extensive data on agricultural trends throughout the world. There seems to be no lack of information on what foreign countries are doing or may be expected to do. The trouble is that these data have been for the most part ignored in carrying forward the domestic policy.

Price-raising policies have unquestionably increased the difficulties of marketing American crops abroad. Cotton is now moving to foreign markets much more freely than it did a year ago. But the Department of Agriculture estimates an increase of 2,400,000 bales in the world cotton crop this year, most of the increase being in foreign planting. Apparently restrictions upon the domestic crop through the soil-conservation program will not be as drastic as they were under the Bankhead act. Even so, the steadily expanding output in other countries continues to weaken the American hold upon cotton markets which we have supplied for many years.

So the European trip of Mr. Davis is not likely to arouse any enthusiasm among cotton producers or other farmers dependent upon a recapture of foreign markets for permanent prosperity. At the present moment he will probably find the harassed statesmen of Europe more interested in stimulating basic crops in their own countries than ever before. And since it cannot be assumed that he is carrying any bargaining proposals in his pocket, Mr. Davis' jaunt may turn out to be little more than a much-needed vacation for a conscientious and overworked official.

France Keeps Cool.

Premier Sarraut's well-balanced speech to the French Chamber of Deputies helps to clear the lurid European atmosphere. Without minimizing any of the implications of Germany's "sudden and brutal re-occupation of the demilitarized zone" he has made it plain that France will not reply by an act of aggression against Germany. Instead she will rest her case first with the meeting of the Locarno signatories, less Germany, in London today, and then with the session of the League Council which has also been summoned to meet in London on Saturday.

Capitalization of her diplomatic advantage obviously prompts France to be as scrupulous in observance of Locarno obligations as Germany has been reckless. But it is not punctilious regard for the proprieties, nor even natural hesitation to take any irreparable action, which most assists a circumspect attitude on the part of the French government at the present juncture. An even greater influence is to be found in the existence of a well-established international machinery to which France can refer her case with confidence.

Under the terms of the Locarno Treaty, France would probably be justified in regarding Hitler's latest step as "an unprovoked act of aggression" calling for military reprisals. And, regardless of the British and Italian attitude, France could at this moment probably beat Germany to her knees. Without allies, and opposed by Belgium, the Little Entente, and Russia as well as France, the chances of Germany to defend herself successfully would be slim. But such a war would go far to wreck what is left of domestic stability in France as well as other countries. So that reference of the problem to the League's Council is highly practical as well as idealistic statesmanship on the part of Paris.

The Council is so constituted that its findings will prove, in effect, an incontestable judgment on the justifiability of the German action. The present representatives of Latin America—Argentina, Chile and Ecuador—can be counted upon to take an absolutely impartial position. Turkey, another Council member, used forceful action to overthrow the treaty of Sevres and is therefore likely to play the role of advocate for Germany. Rumania, with an eye on Hungary, will certainly support France. The strength of Great Britain, Australia, Denmark and Spain will undoubtedly be utilized in favor of a constructive outcome from the present tangle. In short, the likelihood of some solution far more promising than the dubious arbitrament of force may reasonably be expected.

In the acid test, moreover, France is remaining true to the League idea. Premier Sarraut speaks with the utmost sincerity when he says that his government "will struggle to defend the new order in international relations." And the strength of the French case is emphasized by his willingness to submit it to a cool juridical review. Only if this course should be altered, in favor of a "preventive war" against Germany, would France forfeit the diplomatic advantage which Hitler's blundering impetuosity has given her.

In The Florida Mud.

As an example of dubious administrative policy the Florida Ship Canal is outstanding. It was indorsed by the President in a moment of idealistic exuberance after a steamer had grounded in the Florida Keys, endangering the lives of its passengers. Apparently, Mr. Roosevelt had forgotten the numerous adverse reports on the proposed canal by Army engineers and other competent authorities. At any rate he ignored the best judgment of his public works administrator, Secretary Ickes, and launched a $138,000,000 project with an allocation of $5,000,000 from the work relief fund.

Action in haste is excusable, especially when prompted by humanitarian motives. Since the original $5,000,000 allotted to the Florida Ship Canal was spent, however, the President has had ample opportunity to reflect upon the desirability of the undertaking. Groups of Florida citizens, with the support of some geological experts, have expressed fears that the canal may drain the underground water from large areas of fertile land and thus impair its value. Investigators have concluded that revenue from the canal will never repay the investment. Of more fundamental importance, the House of Representatives recently refused to appropriate money for continuation of the work on the ground that this immense project had never been approved by Congress.

In spite of these numerous indications that a mistake has been made, work on the canal is still going forward. Three days after the House Appropriations Committee had eliminated funds for this and other questionable undertakings from the War Department supply bill, the Chief Executive added $200,000 to the canal fund from the work-relief appropriation. Even if Congress finally refuses to make any specific appropriation to build a canal which some shipping companies regard as useless, the Administration may seemingly go ahead, pouring work-relief funds into the Florida mud.

This is the very antithesis of responsible administrative procedure. Unless Congress is ready to abdicate its authority over the national purse strings, it should take the moral to heart. The next relief appropriation must be drawn in such terms that the Administration cannot, at discretion, proceed with undertakings which inquiry by the legislative arm may prove to be undesirable.

Inadequate Defense.

Senator Robinson makes an inevitably inadequate reply to critics of the Administration's relief policies when he undertakes to defend the WPA against charges that money is being wasted on useless projects.

The Senator discoursed at length upon the $19,000 Memphis pound—the butt of sarcastic jibes—emphasizing its protective value to the city's residents against assaults of mad dogs. He also insisted, with reason, that it is a "task requiring almost superhuman ability" to find the right kind of projects for "white collar workers." But after offering a detailed defense of a long list of WPA projects that have attracted unfavorable notice, the Senator apparently concluded that he had spiked the guns of the enemy.

He made a fatal admission, however, in saying that: "The theory underlying the system of unemployment aid embraced in the Works Progress Administration is unavoidably affected with limitations as to time and location of projects, and skill or lack of skill of workers." In plain language that means that WPA expenditures are made under conditions that inevitably entail waste, preclude long-time systematized planning of a public works program, and increase the per capita cost of relief. The cumbrous Federal bureaucracy established to administer local relief also adds to the cost of the undertaking and emphasizes the necessity of a radical reform of the present system.

Charges of graft and political favoritism, which Senator Robinson studiously ignored, should be thoroughly probed and uprooted when discovered. But such abuses, after all, would be found under any system calling for the disbursement of huge relief funds. It is the waste inherent in the present method of administering relief, even under the most honest and capable supervision, that condemns the WPA.

It stands condemned because it is based upon a fundamentally wrong relief system—wrong in conception and faulty in execution. The cost of relief is raised, and the value of the services performed is lowered, by creating jobs instead of confining outlays to useful public works and direct relief benefits to the unemployed.

The wasteful character of the system is further emphasized by shifting responsibility for administration of relief to the Federal Government instead of localizing it. Senator Robinson is certainly wrong when he asserts that this kind of program is necessary to relieve the hunger, misery and poverty of the unemployed.

Another Folger Bequest.

Once again Washingtonians in particular, and lovers of Shakespeare in general, are benefited by a handsome bequest from the Folger family. It was Henry C. Folger who conceived and made possible the unique library on Capitol Hill which bears his name. And now it is the will of his widow, who died last month, which makes a further contribution toward the upkeep of one of this city's most dignified, beautiful and interesting memorials.

It would be hard to imagine two men more totally different in most respects than William Shakespeare and Henry C. Folger. One was a strolling player, an ale-house habitue, a temperamental artist. The other was listed in Who's Who as a "capitalist and chairman of the board of Standard Oil of New York." Yet the genius which the one possessed, enabling him to write "not of an age, but for all time," and the appreciation of ability which made the other a figure as well known to the arts as to commerce, have combined to form a shrine of which the fame has spread to the far ends of the earth.

With reference to the Shakespeare Library, Mrs. Folger's will reads simply: "I was associated for many years with my husband in this work and desire that the bulk of my property be, as was his, dedicated to its continuance." This is a fine testimonial to the fact that Mr. Folger's ceaseless quest for valuable Shakespeareana was not that of a calculating and selfish collector. Next to the rare gift of unusual creation comes that cultured appreciation which seeks to preserve and diffuse for civilization the artistic heritage of the human race.

Another Transatlantic Air Project

From the Hartford Courant.

Some months ago, the United States made arrangements with a British commission under which the preliminary work necessary to establish regular air service between the two countries will be undertaken this summer. Now another arrangement has been made with German representatives looking to the establishment of another transatlantic air line, presumably at about the same time the British schedule is started.

As yet there is small probability that a transatlantic air service can be self-supporting. Mail subsidies on the part of the United States and direct subsidies on the part of the foreign countries will probably be necessary for many years to come. But, given the financial support and the co-operation of the countries directly and indirectly concerned, there is nothing to prevent reasonably safe regular transatlantic operation. For some time the equipment and the instruments needed have been available. Now it appears that they will be put to use.

Red Rider Implications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of the District of Columbia are not the only ones concerned with the red rider legislation affecting the public schools of the National Capital. Nor are the rights of the children and youth in the schools to learn the important facts of the current human scene the only elements involved.

There are something like a million teachers in our country, and thirty-three million learners. Let the authority of Congress to prohibit any reference whatever to the red menace be established in the District, and the influence may spread everywhere, which is precisely what the agitators propose. Were it possible in America to enforce the red rider legislation, the result might be, but for one other set of factors, the making of Americans into ignoramuses.

The other set of factors includes the obligations of teachers to impart knowledge and to train in wisdom. Men and women who are set up by their profession as competent to teach and who are commonly accepted and recognized as competent and worthy will proceed to exercise their prerogatives, no matter what legislatures enact. These obligations are inherent in their status and function, just as the obligations of lawyers to represent their clients and of doctors to prescribe for their patients and of clergymen to instruct their parishioners are inherent in their several professions.

The persons who are talking too much and out of turn are not the teachers of America but the red baiters.

Three Cheers For Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers, no, a hundred, for Pegler, the man who sees things as they are, is not "taken in" by propaganda and glamor, and reports fearlessly on what he sees. His language is not the language of the diplomats—he does not manipulate words to disguise, distort or gloss over their meaning. His is a healthy language, refreshing in its outspokenness.

I, for one, am grateful to The Post for the opportunity it is extending to this champion of truth. I have seen many of the things and conditions of which he tells and know that they are facts. We need men like him, men who see straight, with their eyes wide open, with their minds unbiased, free from prejudice, and possessing the courage to say things out loud. I enjoy his "wise cracks." A. U. S. Not Involved.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again the territorial integrity of a nation is endangered. Once more a nation assumes the role of aggressor in this controversial world of international entanglements.

Alliances, treaties, ententes, proposals of peace and plans of international justice go on trying in vain to make men realize the futility of war. I cannot believe the peoples of the world want war, and yet leaders throughout these so-called civilized nations are instigating friction. We have aggression in Africa; we have it in Outer Mongolia and now, through the repudiation of the Locarno pact, we have it threatened, at least, on the continent of Europe.

Hitler has offered, he says, a program that would bring a real lasting peace and friendship to all of Germany's neighbors. How can proposals of peace be accepted conscientiously when in every nation there are huge war machines being perfected constantly because of fear from other nations?

If the people of the world are desirous of peace, then it must be true that underlying interests instrumental in negotiating war are ultimately receiving profits from these inhuman conflicts engaged in by humans. The quicker they are weeded out the better for society, but until such is done let us remain free from entanglements. The United States, in its treaty with Germany, did not ascribe to the sections of the Versailles treaty affecting political arrangements in Europe. Thus, it is not legally involved in Germany's present action.

Woman's Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Hope Ridings Miller's entertaining interview with Dorothy Thompson recently published in The Post, the latter is quoted as saying, in reference to an invitation to speak over the radio on "Is Woman's Place in the Home?" "Five years ago no one would have thought of such a question. No one in America then wondered about woman's place. It was wherever she chose to make it. Today men are digging up queries they put to us back in the pre-suffrage days."

I can only guess what the home folks elsewhere think about it. But I am pretty familiar with the populous Mount Pleasant section where I live. It seems quite certain that most of its women as well as most of its men now give the question of woman's place in the home the same safe and sane consideration that they did before women were permitted to vote. As far as undue worry over it is concerned they are quite willing to let the feminists enjoy the worrying, if any. And that, if you care to guess, is probably the case in all parts of the country.

My guess is that when female members of the intelligentsia worry about the static, bourgeois persistence of "the home," they are under the spell of a something which they call a "career." It would be a good thing if they could understand that the average man has as much right to kick because he has to roll up his sleeves or wear his white collar as a wage-earning automaton as the congenital household drudge has to complain because she can't be a career woman. There are careers and careers, and not as many as one in a million of the earth's inhabitants comes within anything nearer than moon-high reach of the dream-tinted feministic "career."

The dictionary definition of "career" is: "General course of action or conduct, as in a calling or in some undertaking, especially when notable; as, Washington's career as a soldier."

Soberly speaking, I presume that in their talk about following a career, what the feminists have in mind is, more or less, "a notable career." If they would only tell us so without belittling "the home"—without high-hatting the woman who is satisfied with the ordinary career of a wife and mother—I guess horse-and-buggy citizens might stop digging up the same old queries.

Whether as men or as women most of us must at most be satisfied with the short and simple annals of circumscribed careers. But even in the before-woman-suffrage days, few men of culture and common sense expressed invidious disapproval of women whose careers were notable. Today there is no common-sense American whose pride would suffer to a very great extent if a woman were elected President of the United States in, say, 1940. TIPTON TALBOTT.

A Personnel Secretary?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have lost our Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The secretary, because of his infirmities, has been almost continuously unable to shoulder the duties of his office. Neither has made the slightest emotional appeal to the service man. And the War Department is similarly handicapped.

Of subversive teachings, Mr. McSwain says, "Generally . . . officers do not know about these things, any more than they know about the private lives of their men." For safety and efficiency, officers should take an interest in both.

It is a mystery why there is no man at the head of the department, or a secretary for personnel, chosen for his magnetism and his knowledge of and sympathy for the enlisted man—a former enlisted man would not be bad.

An officer or department secretary is not a factory foreman. He controls men's lives when off duty, not merely when on a detail. Their possibility of outside friendly contacts is limited by the nature of the services. Officers should do what they can to modify adverse conditions, not leave it entirely to foreigners and communists.

Give us one man, knowing and liking the service men, interested in their welfare, able to fire their imagination and loyalty; one man, not a college professor, but a man neither patronizing nor ignoring the enlisted man, believing in discipline and obedience but knowing a commission neither adds to nor takes from inherent qualities. The rank is still the guinea's stamp—and the man's the gold, for all that—unless character too, under the present dispensation, is trying experiments with depreciated values.

EX-SERVICE.
Philadelphia, Pa., March 8.

Injustice To Mr. Blanton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On March 7, in an article in connection with the "D. C. Bill," statement is made by Congressman Blanton that the reason for taking $1,000 from the salary of Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, is that he "paid no taxes, and was given quarters and board free"; that "he's better off than we members of Congress" . . . "It costs us $2,500 to get elected to come here. I'm so poor now that I have to sell a piece of property every two years to live here."

Probably Mr. Blanton does not take into consideration that he, too, is furnished "quarters" free, and rather good quarters, if one takes the trouble to go to the House Office Building and inspect. In addition, he possibly overlooks the fact that a salary of $7,500 is poor compensation when one takes into account the amount of money a physician has to expend on his medical education and experience before he can reach the place in his profession where he is entrusted with the responsibility of an institution such as Gallinger. Also, in this position there is little or no opportunity to add to that $7,500 from any outside source.

However, apparently, Mr. Blanton has not had that opportunty either—judging from his statement that he is getting poorer and poorer each year and in order to remain here must sell property every two years.

It would seem that the people of Texas are doing Mr. Blanton a great injustice by continuing his services in Washington, much as he desires to stay, because—accepting his own statement—in so doing they are perhaps reducing his finances to such an extent that eventually he must be cared for at the expense of some organization or institution; and the people of his State ought to know about this condition.

He has succeeded so admirably in misrepresenting his State that it would seem only right and proper that his constituents in Texas—as a tribute to their Congressman for his vociferous outbursts, "damning" some, threatening to "knock hell" out of others—supposedly in the interest of those he represents, should reward their dignified (?) statesman by the purchase, perhaps, of a 100-acre pasture in Texas, erecting in the middle of it a tin barn, place Mr. Blanton inside and lock the door.

Until some such steps are taken, Texas will be sadly remiss in its gratitude to Mr. Blanton, and in bad odor with the District of Columbia. Since Mr. Blanton is seeking re-election this year, the information must be conveyed to his constituents in order that they may have an opportunity to do the right thing both by Mr. Blanton and the City of Washington while time permits.

White Elephant!

Post Office, Thursday.

WE met him at a White House reception, watching arriving diplomats all aglitter with orders. Both his dress-coat and the sallow skin of his face were too large for him—and his lack-luster eyes betrayed a shrunken spirit.

"You look almost sane," said he. "Why're you here? I'm after a job and my wife still thinks the way to get one's to show yourself. But I wouldn't wear my decoration. Foreign decorations are a racket.

* * *

"I'm a butcher," he finally continued. "Martha calls me a packer, but a butcher's what I was brought up—butcher for 25 years, packer only toward the end of the boom. We'd hived a little pile and Martha kept talking about making ladders of our dead selves: that was why.

"We had to catch up with the Joneses and then keep up with them. Nothing would suit Martha but I must get a decoration. She hauled me here to Washington and we entertained.

"Entertained? You could hardly get to the frigidaire, there were so many diplomats and diplomatesses around. Then, one 6 a. m., when we were getting into bed, she said:

"'Philander, the most wonderful thing's happened! There's an earthquake or something in Siam, and thousands are starving.'

"So I gave an unsolicited subscription and got the Order of the White Elephant, Second Class.

"Martha was some set back when she heard the diamonds in the big elephant were just brilliants and that decorated people always supply their own jewels—if they want real ones. Then she said we'd do it, so I had to: the cost was a knockout, but the depression was just starting, and Martha said diamonds were a stable investment . . .

"I got kind of proud of that gaudy gadget, myself, only the depression got worse. We beat it home, mortgaged the house and were thankful I could butcher. Right through it all, though, Martha hung on to my diamond elephant—said what, if I couldn't wear it over my apron? Once or twice I most begged her on my knees to sell it: nothing doing—it was 'an investment in morale.' Otherwise, she was more like the Martha I used to know, and last November, when I was lower'n ever, she said we'd got to drop everything and take one of those Christmas cruises to the Orient.

"I'll never forget the day we reached Bangkock. The Siamese King was giving a reception, and the cruise-managers got the whole passenger-list invited. Martha laid out my old dress-suit, put the studs in my shirt and plunked down our diamond Elephant—which I'd clean forgotten I had . . .

"'Not wear your Siamese order at the Siamese Court?' says she.

"So I had to.

* * *

"Well, in the bare-chested jam in the big hall, it did make me feel I still was somebody, and I could see she felt that way, too, 'Was I right?' she asks, kind of nudging me. 'Look at the King.' He had a blazing White Elephant, too—only his was a sight bigger'n mine was. 'Bigger,' says Martha, 'only because he is the King. And that Court Chamberlain, or whatever he is, who's doing the introducing, why, if his elephant's bigger than ours, anybody can see it's nothing but brilliants.—Now, Philander!'

* * *

"It was our turn to get introduced. That Chamberlain with the Elephant of the First Class—in paste—asked our names and passed 'em on to the King. You didn't have to kiss his hand: he shook yours, quick, the King did.

"'Mr. and Mrs. Larkins,' says he, 'I hope you'll enjoy your too brief visit to Siam.'

"I didn't know what to answer, but Martha cut in: 'We feel quite at home, Your Majesty,' she told him, 'because, you see, my husband has the honor of belonging to the Order of the White Elephant.' And she let out all about the earthquake-subscription.

* * *

"I'm bound to say she did it well—but there's something you can do too well. The King was tickled to death. Then he gave a look at my decoration.

"'Only the Second Class?' he asked. 'Why, there must have been some mistake. It had ought to have been the First Class—and it will be.' And he turns toward the Chamberlain and calls out: 'Bhadravadi!'

"Bhadravadi — that was the Chamberlain's name, I guess—bows up to us. And the King whips Bhadravadi's ribbon and its paste elephant over Bhadravadi's head, and my ribbon and its diamond elephant over my head and gives Bhadravadi mine and puts Bhadravadi's around my neck.

* * *

"'Philander M. Larkins,' says the King, 'we take pleasure in repairing an error; we take pleasure in recognizing adequately your generosity to our country; we take pleasure in investing you with the Order of the White Elephant of the First Class.'"

Fair Enough

Vienna, March 11.

YOU must come over to Europe this year. Try to come for the Olympic Games in Berlin and take a little swing through Switzerland, Italy, Austria, the Balkans, Russia and Czechoslovakia. Then go home and fall on your face and kiss the granite blocks on West street, where the steamboats are tied up.

Have a good look at the customs inspectors over here, who flop into the trains every few hours wanting to see your passport and count your money and go through your baggage for letters, banknotes and pamphlets, cigarets, matches and souvenirs.

Try to realize that in each case a race of people boasting of their ancient civilization and their modern education are required to accept the belief and may be thrown into prison for open defiance.

List to the strange jabber of many languages that strike the ear in a short journey.

• • • •

COME over to Europe and learn to appreciate your own country, where you may drive through 48 States with one license plate on your car, using one kind of money, speaking one language and without permitting anyone to open your baggage or look at your private papers.

Austria and Hungary used to be one country, but today you are stopped at the border and put through the mill. Coming out of Italy, a treasury man will fumble through your letters from home searching for smuggled lire. The lira is only imaginary money, with a value established by an old-timer named Benito Mussolini, who was a notorious thinker in his day. There's no reason on earth why you should want to keep any of his money, because it will buy much less outside Italy than on its own home grounds. Nevertheless, Mussolini doesn't want it to escape. So his men frisk your possessions at the border and Hitler's men when you are leaving Germany if they think you have a certain look.

In Czechoslovakia you will draw a breath of fresh air. The Czechs are a more or less liberally sane island in a sea of madness. You can buy papers and books in Prague for and against communism, for and against Fascism, Nazism and Christianity. They don't like to let too much of their money leak out, but they aren't very particular.

• • • •

IF you live in Austria and you're coming home with a 50-cent toy the Austrian customs collector wants his 2 cents duty. Going into Russia, you had better declare every thread and shred of clothing and every gilt collar button and get a registered inventory or they'll hold you up on the way out and give you trouble.

I've driven across many State boundaries at home, and sometimes I've been guilty of very strong opinions regarding the reigning politicians thereof. But even on entering Louisiana at the height of his power I didn't find it necessary to declare an admiration for Huey P. Long, the dictator for the moment, and I doubt that Americans entering Georgia or Kansas today are made uncomfortable should they express doubt regarding Eugene Talmadge or Alfred Landon.

It appears that Los Angeles—which is not a State but a condition, and a clear one at that—has recently made another attempt to impose immigration restrictions upon the poor. But in that case a formality which is perfectly normal in Europe has been denounced as a conspicuous outrage against ordinary liberty in the United States.

• • • •

TRY to imagine the troops and customs stations and currency and passport inspectors of 48 States holding up traffic, going through the little possessions of the travelers and jawing away at them in 48 languages at hundreds of thousands of points of entry and exit along the State boundaries and you may get a glimpse of an idea.

Consider the condition of the people in our so-called backward States, where superstition still prevails, doctors are miles apart and movie programs are changed only once a week, and then compare it with the Balkan backwaters, which have been swept by several tides of civilization but remain today primitive, savage, aboriginal and lousy.

By all means come over to Europe this year, and don't miss Germany. If you never appreciated your own country before you will then.

Hearts Aflutter

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

FROM Mayfair to Manhattan hearts fluttered yesterday. I am sure, when the news flashed forth that he who used to be the Prince of Wales asked what passes for the appropriations committee of Great Britain for an earmarked fund which would make it possible for him to get married if he should so make up his mind.

Immediately the gossips' tongues began wagging and names of members of Europe's remaining royalty were mentioned as possible brides of Edward VIII, King of England. Headlines, which had been treating of a possible war in Europe, were hastily rewritten in Fleet street and throughout the Newspaper Rows of democratic America, screaming of the possibility of wedlock in Buckingham Palace.

And a lot of gals who are now not as young as they once were must have heaved romantic sighs for the good old days when they, too, were emblazoned in 48-point type as those who had attained the height of feminine achievement when, for one brief, breathless moment, they had Danced With The Prince Of Wales. I, for one, wondered what Imogene Stanley or Gracie Davidson, those two famed female reporters who had crashed the gates of society a decade or so ago, were thinking when they read the news.

• • • •

TIME was when any gal with a pencil and notebook could be assured of a by-line, and perhaps a raise in pay, if she could slip beyond the armed guards and, for one brief moment, swoon in princely arms. Throughout the length and breadth of the land there were a number of debs who looked down their snobbish noses because they, and they alone, had upon occasion been singled out by the slim man with the blue shirt for a fox trot at the dansant.

Where are they now, these debs of yesteryear? Married, I suppose, to stock salesmen and breeders of wire-haired fox terriers. Living in the suburbs and laying in canned goods against the coming revolution! Wasting away in Chevy Chase and worrying about the milk bill. And sighing as they read the evening paper while their husbands, grown stout and stuffy, grunt at ease on the living room divan.

"Darling," I can hear hubby say, "Air Reduction went up 7¼ today. Looks like we can get that new car if this keeps up."

"I don't think she's the least bit good-looking no, I don't."

"What ever are you talking about. Who isn't good-looking?"

"Princess Juliana, that Dutch girl they say may be going to marry Eddy."

"Eddy who? What in the dickens are you talking about?"

"Why, Eddy, you know, the King of England. Remember when I danced with him? Gee, he was divine! And didn't you look jealous that night! You never do look jealous any more."

"Eddy! Eddy! Still thinking about Eddy! You danced with him, by my watch, for exactly 3¼ minutes ten whole years ago up on the North Shore and you're still thinking about him! If you'd think about . . ."

"You just don't understand. You have no feeling. No romance. Oh. I knew I should never have married you. Perhaps I might . . ."

"Dinner is served, Madame."

"Dinner for one, please, James. I'm going down to the club, where I can talk sense. Looks like they might be having trouble in Europe any day now, and I want to know how to act if they do. Says here Stocks Move up on Broad Front . . ."

"Gee, he was divine . . ."

• • • •

THAT, I imagine, was the scene in dozens of households last night. Abroad Hitler was putting cartridges into his guns, Sir Anthony Eden was brushing off his best dress suit, Benito Mussolini was smiling in anticipation, and Britain's cabinet, summoned because of The Crisis, was meeting in an extraordinary session.

But Edward had hinted he might want to get married soon and make a new Queen of England—somebody else to set the style of British hats. Three girls from Greece, a Russian grand duchess, a Dutch princess were named in the dispatches as his possible choice. And while hearts fluttered from Mayfair to Manhattan because the aging salesman of the British Empire might some day take bride and wanted the British government to provide for her, all else faded into insignificance.

Back in August, 1914, kings and queens were talking of marriages, princesses were being named, dowries were being arranged, too. And hearts that fluttered then soon were to stand still when shrill bugles blew . . .

European royalty, however, and many Britons believed the King would choose a British girl—a commoner. There is precedent for that. The Duke of York, now heir to the throne, married Elizabeth Howes-Lyon.

Many Britons were cautious in predicting the King was planning marriage, insisting he merely was getting his financial house in order for any eventuality. They recalled court gossip has been marching Edward down the marriage aisle since he was 17—always without basis of fact.

In 1911 he was supposed to be ready to marry Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia, daughter of the Kaiser. Subsequent gossip had him engaged to all the daughters of the late Czar of Russia; to three Italian princesses and to Princess Astrid of Sweden who married King Leopold of Belgium.

By 1930 the favorite candidate was Lady May Cambridge, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Athlone. The next year she married Capt. Abel Smith, son of a banker.

Baltimore Girl Favorite.

None of these girls, however, was chosen by the King in his care-free days as the Prince of Wales for dancing and swimming partners. Instead, he was found most often in the company of a beautiful American—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, of Baltimore.

In the excitement of all the romantic gossip today, the question of the King's salary and expense account was lost.

It was pointed out that the King had given thought to children that might be born of his marriage. A phrase in his message, "as long as the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall are vested in himself," was significant. Should a son be born to Edward and his Queen, the child would become the Duke of Cornwall and would receive the Cornwall revenues. Later in his life there would be a special ceremony creating him Prince of Wales.

While it is impossible to figure the exact income of the King of England, every one agrees it is more than $1,000,000 annually.

The late King George in 1934 received $426,000 of the Duchy of Lancaster and $400,890 of the civil list. In addition, King Edward will receive $333,900 of the Duchy of Cornwall. That would bring his total income to around $2,347,000 a year.

Chamberlain said he would move for appointment of a select committee to consider the civil list.

Eugenie Plans Visit.

Athens, March 11 (U.P.).—Princess Eugenie, mentioned prominently as possible Queen of England now that King Edward VIII has indicated he may marry, may soon visit London, it was reported tonight.

The British throne has never been prejudiced against tall queens. Queen Mary was taller than the late King George V, as was another Mary, Queen of William III.

Channel Work To Begin Soon, Says Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 11.—President Roosevelt predicted the "early undertaking" of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep-channel project in a message read tonight to the Detroit seaway conference by Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada.

Pointing out that neither the United States nor Canada has ratified the 1932 treaty which would permit work on the vast project to go forward, the Chief Executive declared that "something further than mere resubmission of a treaty is called for."

"We are seeking a new approach to the problems involved," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, expressing confidence that in view of the policy of co-operation between the two countries, agreement on the terms for completing the 2,000-mile channel for ocean-going vessels "should present no insuperable difficulties."

Ratification Studied.

Senator Pittman, who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted that Senate ratification of a St. Lawrence waterway treaty, which failed by 13 votes in 1934, will be accomplished at the next session of Congress.

The treaty was not brought up for action at the present session, he said, "first, because he did not have the votes, and second, because Congress is determined to adjourn as soon as the vital domestic legislation is disposed of."

Delay has sprung, President Roosevelt said, "from fears of economic harm to special localities or to special interests, which I have always believed are grossly exaggerated, and especially from opposition based upon the fact that the power available in these boundary waters is publicly owned and will be generated and distributed, under existing laws, by public agencies in both Canada and the United States."

Describing the St. Lawrence navigation and power improvement as "an important part of the program of the present Administration," the President declared, "it will enable us to take the next step to extend to the Northeast benefits already assured from works completed or under construction in the Tennessee Valley in the Southeast, at Boulder Dam in the Southwest, and on the Columbia River in the Northwest."

He expressed a "strong conviction that recent events have helped to clear the way for action, upon the broadest lines of public benefits."

Asserting that "railroads will not be injured," Senator Pittman said, "80 per cent of the traffic that moves through the deep seaway will reach its destination along our coastline. This freight will be moved westward from the Atlantic and eastward from the Pacific to the interior * * * with rail traffic."

Loss of traffic in port cities "would be largely offset by the interior haul from such points and * * * entirely compensated for by the increased prosperity of a large section of our country," he said.

Fears of Mississippi Valley States that the seaway would interfere with construction and maintenance of the 9-foot lakes-to-gulf waterway, the Senator added, are contradicted by "all of the engineering data and all of the expert testimony."

Senator Pittman said the seaway "will add 3,576 iles to our present 11,936 miles of coastline. * * * It will bring the ocean to the interior of our great continent; it will permit this great interior country to export and import by water at a saving in transportation costs from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. This great benefit will inure to 21 States, containing 34 per cent of all our population, and 39 per cent of its manufactures."

Aid of Douglas, McCarl Sought On Economies

By the Associated Press.

Authoritative sources disclosed last night that engagement of Lewis Douglas, former Budget Director, and Comptroller General J. R. McCarl will be proposed to aid a Senate committee's investigation of Government agencies.

The committee will meet today to organize and possibly outline the course by which it will seek consolidations and elimination of "useless" agencies. It was created under a resolution by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, who probably will be named chairman.

Committee members, it was learned coincidentally, are determined to keep the committee's findings out of this year's political campaign. The Byrd resolution calls for a report at the next session of Congress.

Because of possible political repercussions, committee members plan no disclosures until after next January. It was reported also that it would be impossible for the committee to finish its work before then.

If either Douglas or McCarl, or both, should be engaged by the committee, they would be called upon to serve as "efficiency experts." Another mentioned in the same connection is Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, Treasury purchasing chief.

Douglas already is, and McCarl soon will be, in the category of "experts outside the Goverment," whom Byrd said some weeks ago he hoped to enlist for the inquiry.

Douglas resigned as President Roosevelt's budget director in September, 1934, after disagreeing with the Administration's financial policy. Since that time, he frequently has made speeches criticizing Government spending and has been mentioned as a possible Republican Vice Presidential candidate.

McCarl, who has clashed with the Administration at times over interpretations of laws, will retire July 1 after 15 years as Comptroller General.

In charting its course, the committee is expected to discuss today the employment of some such agency as the Brookings Institution of Washington or the Institute of Public Administration of New York to do the bulk of its investigating. Under tentative plans discussed by committee members, an agency of that type would be used in addition to experts like Douglas and McCarl.

The committee, besides Byrd, includes the Senate leaders, Robinson, Democrat, and McNary, Republican, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Townsend (Republican), Delaware. There have been indications McNary might decline to serve and that he would be succeeded by his colleague, Steiwer (Republican), Oregon.

Steiwer has on his desk a resolution to investigate spending of the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund. He said he would hold up its introduction until the course of the Byrd committee's inquiry was determined.

Knox Laughs at Own Paper's Prediction That He Can't Win

By the Associated Press.

Houston, March 11.—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, laughed heartily today when interviewers recalled a columnist of his paper had written that his boss did not have a "Chinaman's chance" to receive the Republican Presidential nomination.

The columnist was Howard Vincent O'Brien.

"The other day Howard got all burned up," Col. Knox explained. "A woman wrote him: 'How in the world can you pretend to be free and independent when you work for a man like Col. Knox—an avowed candidate for President?' Boy, Howard got mad at that! He took his whole column that day to answer her. He wound it up by saying, 'The boss don't like this but he hasn't a Chinaman's chance to be nominated for President!'

"Later that day, one of our editors who handles our features rushed into me, gave me the copy Howard had just turned in and exclaimed: 'What do you think of all this, anyway?'

"I began reading it and smiling and chuckling and then roaring with laughter at the wallop in the last line. I told the editor: 'Don't dot an I or cross a T—let her go!'"

Senate Reports Bill to Expand F.T.C. Powers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday voted to report to the Senate the Wheeler bill to expand powers of the Federal Trade Commission over industrial practices.

Under the measure the commission would have power on its own motion to investigate and eradicate "deceptive acts and practices in commerce" in addition to its present authority to attack "unfair methods of competition."

Moreover, its authority could be directed against "persons and partnerships" as well as corporations. It was the contention of the committee that "it is manifest that unfair, detrimental or illegal practices affecting or interfering with commerce may be carried on as well by persons and partnerships as by corporations."

The bill drew protests from Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and other trade bodies which objected to expansion of the police power of the commission.

The bill had been described by the American Newspaper Publishers Associaiton as giving the commission powers equivalent to those of the OGPU, Russian secret police. The National Association of Manufacturers also opposed it on similar ground.

The commission contended the amendment making "deceptive acts and practices" unlawful was necessary in cases where it developed that the offender had a monopoly. In such cases, the commission argued, it could not now proceed because injury to competition has to be proved.

It also held the broadened language was essential to cover cases where all competitors in an industry were "equally guilty" of unfair practices.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who had an amendment pending to grant the commission authority to summon business and industry to formulate binding agreements at fair trade practice conferences, withdrew it and said he would propose it in different form on the floor.

Complete U. S. Arms Control, Nye Group Aim

By the Associated Press.

Government ownership and operation of munitions plants and naval shipbuilding yards will be recommended by the Senate Munitions committee in one of four reports it is now preparing on its two-year inquiry into the causes of war.

A majority of the committee members said yesterday they would vote for a recommendation to nationalize the industries which produce the primary supplies for the Army and Navy.

There is some difference of opinion among them about how far the nationalization should extend, but the majority will favor government construction of naval vessels, and Federal operation of plants manufacturing guns and ammunition.

The four committee members ready to go this far are Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota; and Senators Clarke (Democrat), Missouri; Pope (Democrat), Idaho, and Bone (Democrat), Washington. The latter wants to go further than some others.

Nye said the report would be designed to "destroy the motives for profit in the preparation for war." He forecast that the committee, besides its nationalization proposals, would urge strict regulation of the production of all other war materials.

This regulation, he said, should include the makng of airplanes, trucks and machines, armor plate, uniforms, shoes and other essential military supplies.

"We should regulate the profits in this traffic in an effort to break down this game that makes larger defenses of our own necessary because of what we are selling to other lands," Nye said.

Franco Sets Up Fascist Regime For Paraguay

By the Associated Press.

Ascuncion, Paraguay, March 11.—The provisional government of Paraguay, headed by Col. Rafael Franco, today published a decree setting up the nation as a totalitarian state modeled after German National Socialism and Italian Fascism.

The decree declared the state and the "liberating revolution" of February 17 as indivisible and banned for one year political, labor or other unions or activities which "do not emanate explicitly from the state."

Paraguay, the government asserted, will be purged of "endemic, demagogic, industrial and sectarian evils."

The official statement places in the "liberating army" the principal source of authority and declares the successful revolution implies the "same social totalitarian transformations as in contemporary Europe in the sense the liberating revolution and the state are already one and identical."

The aims of the new government, the decree said, will be the construction of a new, strong Paraguay and constitutional reorganization for a future republic.

The decree placed under jurisdiction of the minister of the interior "all questions of politics or society of the state as identified with the liberating revolution, comprehending relations or conflicts between labor and capital, and necessities of workers and laborers as equally with those of employers."

A committee of civil mobilization and a national labor department were created.

Boy, 15, Kills Brother, Wounds Young Sister

Independence, Iowa, March 11 (A.P.).—Fifteen-year-old Rodney Pace was held tonight after confessing, police said to the fatal shooting of his brother, Ogden, 18, and the wounding of his sister, Thyrza, 11, in a "sex motivated crime."

Physicians said the girl's condition was critical.

Mrs. Cooper Hewitt Sued By French Hotel Group

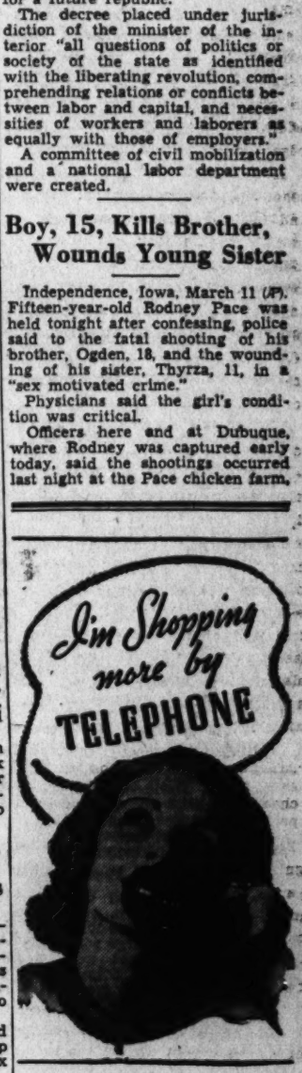
Jersey City, N. J., March 11 (U.P.).—A suit for $2,554.24 was filed against Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt McCarter today by the Societe des Hotels et Casino, Deauville, France. Mrs. McCarter is in Medical Center, said to be in a critical condition. She is under indictment in an alleged plot involving sterilization of her daughter.

The complaint charges Mrs. McCarter cashed checks totaling $8,284.24 at a Deauville hotel in 1927, which were returned marked "protested."

Quebec Priests Told To Shun All Politics

Quebec, Que., March 11 (A.P.).—Clergy of the Roman Catholic Ecclesiastical Province of Quebec today were forbidden to discuss politics under penalty of disciplinary measures "which could go so far as prohibition to say mass."

The ban came in a letter signed by Cardinal Villeneuve, archbishop of Quebec, and bishops of six dioceses.



Hopkins Denies Holt Charges

fended by Harry Hopkins. What could you expect?

"To find Mr. McCullough guilty through their own investigation is to indict Hopkins himself. While they were investigating my records in Charleston, someone broke in and investigated what was in my desk in Washington.

"I have charged and put into the Record the actual letters and statements that were made. None of them have ever been denied. I charged that the projects were loaded with political favoritism, brass hats and ward heelers and that cannot be denied.

Calls Investigation "Farce."

"The investigation was a sham and a fraud and as I said to the newspapers in West Virginia, it was a farce, and 'they may give Administrator McCullough a clean bill of health in the official records, but there is not enough whitewash in the world to conceal his maladministration from the eyes of the people.' I will have a further statement to make when I read the complete report sent me by 'Cocky Harry.'

"I intend to take this to the people."

Hopkins had said:

"As the report indicates, the charge that relief clients were forced to get their jobs through political sources proved to be totally unfounded. There is no evidence of a single case out of the thousands employed from the relief rolls having secured their work through political influence."

Detailed analysis of the report and the enclosures of letters shows that Investigator Johnstone and three associates devoted 10 days to the investigation, eight of which were spent in the State.

The first charge, that the WPA in West Virginia had been subjected to political exploitation and domination, was answered by records showing that from the beginning of the program to December 10, 1935, all assignments from relief rolls were made "without question" in accordance with regulations and without political consideration.

Holt Accused McCullough.

Senator Holt had charged that job-seekers were forced to get letters from political bosses to secure WPA work. He had also charged McCullough with "using the office he holds for nothing more than to try to carry himself to the office of Governor, not for the administration of the work relief act itself." Johnstone's report held, in answer, that:

The WPA in West Virginia has a State office in Charleston and six district offices in Charleston, Lewisburg, Huntington, Elkins, Fairmont and Parkersburg. In the State office is a deputy administrator and five division directors. The report shows that the deputy administrator, E. C. Smith, jr., had no political indorsement and was a graduate engineer of 27 years' experience, including work on the Panama Canal and a distinguished war record.

Of the five division directors, two had no political indorsements, two had recommendations from both Senator Holt and Senator Neely, and one was recommended by Senator Neely.

Of 583 employes whose records were studied, 114 were appointed by their superiors without recommendation from anyone else. Similar statistics were available and were commented on concerning the entire organization.

In the files was found "no proof, letter or memorandum," relating to McCullough's supposed campaign for Governor, the report stated. Only two administrative employes, it said, under careful questioning said they had received any instructions or suggestions on the subject, and these two were the Senator's brother, M. S. Holt, and Dorr Tucker, a former secretary of Senator Holt.

The second group of Holt's charges, that the administrative and supervisory cost is unduly absorbing the work relief funds, was disposed of briefly with the statement that the cost during the entire period for administration of relief on that State has averaged 4 per cent and is 2.6 per cent during March.

The third charges, that McCullough is unfit for office, were dismissed as largely matters of opinion, and that "records show * * * no impropriety on the part of Mr. McCullough."

Funds for Projects Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Upholding Republican protests that the projects had not been specifically authorized by Congress, a Senate appropriations committee yesterday rejected a $29,000,000 proposal for continuing work on the Florida Ship Canal, the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine and three others.

The vote was 6 to 5 against an amendment to the $545,000,000 War Department appropriation bill offered by Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida.

Fletcher said he would go before the full committee today to continue his fight. The House refused to include the $29,000,000 in passing the bill.

The $29,000,000 would have been divided as follows: $12,000,000 for the Florida Canal; $9,000,000 for Passamaquoddy, $3,500,000 for the Conchas Dam in New Mexico, $2,500,000 for the Sardis Reservoir in Mississippi and $2,000,000 for the Bluestone Reservoir in West Virginia.

All these projects were begun by Executive order with allocations from WPA funds.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and others have contended on and off the Senate floor that the Florida and Maine projects were not specifically authorized by Congress in the works relief law and were "economically unsound."

Mormons Ready To Leave Mexico

Juarez, Mexico, March 11 (A.P.).—Another exodus of a religious group from the State of Chihuahua was foreseen here tonight as agrarians retained control of fertile Juarez Valley, including the wealthy Mormon settlement of Colonia Juarez.

In the face of a statement from Raul Dominguez, chief of the Chihuahua Agrarian Commission, that he had been empowered by Gov. Rodrigo M. Quevado to purchase the land seized yesterday, A. L. Pierce, bishop of the church, said he was willing to sell his holdings. Immigrants from Utah established the Mormon settlement more than 30 years ago.

Only a few weeks ago leaders of a Mennonite colony passed through here en route from Chihuahua City to Canada, announcing they were preparing to move a colony of 7,000 from Mexico because of religious repression.

Juarez Valley holdings were seized yesterday by an armed band of 50 agrarians, including Dominguez, following an allotment by the State government.

Two Fashion Shows Are Held, Instead of One, to Aid Blind

Mrs. James Roosevelt and Mrs. Elihu Root, Jr., Are Late, So Show Is Repeated; Mr. Tito Guizar Gives Recital Between Displays.

By Francesca McKenney.

Two fashion shows instead of one were presented yesterday afternoon at the Willard Hotel for the benefit of the National Library for the Blind. Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, and Mrs. Elihu Root, jr., of New York, who came to Washington especially for the fashion show and tea, held under the auspices of the Friends of the Moment, both arrived late, due to their many important engagements, and the second showing of fashions was given after their arrival.

Between the two displays there was a short recital by the famous Mexican tenor, Mr. Tito Guizar.

The Rev. Paul Sperry, director of the National Library of the Blind, gave a short address and Miss Louise Moore demonstrated the talking book. Josephine Cole, violinist, and Gustav Heintze, pianist, played a few short selections.

The fashion show, arranged by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, was entitled "Around the Clock in Washington." All the gowns were imported or designed by Mme. Yovin, of New York, founder of the "Friends of the Moment."

Among the members of society who modeled in the show were Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye, daughter of the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye; Mrs. Morris Clark, Mrs. Charles Bohlen, Miss Betsy Rowan, Miss Florence Harris, Miss Cornelia Johnson, Mrs. George Howe, Mrs. George Burgess, Mrs. Chester Boynton, of New York; Miss Elsie Quinby, Mrs. Vinton Chapin, Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips; Mrs. Herbert Stratford and Miss Carlina Sheridan.

Other Participants.

Others who took part in the fashion show were Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Walter White, Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mrs. Reginald Carey, Miss Frances Andrews, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Hebe Reynolds, Miss Marguerite Hagner, Miss Alice Tuckerman, Mrs. James M. Gibson, Miss Anne Perin, Miss Yolande de Mauduit, Miss Eleanor Flood and Miss Miriam Scott.

Among those attending the show to gather new ideas for their spring wardrobes were Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, who wore for the occasion an ensemble of dark brown trimmed with mink; Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, sisters of Senator Joseph Guffey, both wore black with small hats to match; Senorita Graciela Trucco and Senorita Rebecca Trucco, daughters of the Ambassador of Chile, were both gowned in dark brown.

Also Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, who is always busy and had to leave early to attend another function. Mrs. Taliaferro, who wore a black suit trimmed with touches of bright red and a small black hat, was accompanied by Mrs. Walter Distler, wearing a black suit and hat to match. Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, who arranged the fashion show, wore a wine-colored crepe frock with a black hat and black accessories. Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney wore a beige crepe gown with a dark brown hat trimmed with a small dark brown feather, a sable scarf and brown accessories.

Mrs. Roosevelt Pours.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, another guest at the tea, was wearing a white pebble crepe tunic over a black skirt and a large white hat; Mrs. Hamilton Wright wore all black, and Mrs. Ross McIntire was in a gown of emerald green with a large-brimmed felt hat with touches of green.

Also, there was Princess Ourusoff, Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy; Miss Olivia Stokes, who wore a beige tweed suit with a brown hat and brown accessories; Mrs. Bradish J. Carroll, jr., in a rust-colored frock with a brown hat and a mink coat. Mrs. Carroll has visiting her, her mother, Mrs. Chester Boyton, of New York, who took part in the fashion show.

Among those who arrived late in the afternoon and were able to witness the second showing of the New York frocks were Miss Caroline Thompson, who wore a soft green tweed suit trimmed with a large beaver collar; Miss Anne Carter Greene, president of the Junior League of Washington, wore a natural tweed coat with a dark brown ascot, brown hat and accessories, and Miss Cecil Lester Jones, who wore a brown suit with an emerald green ascot, a brown hat and accessories.

Paintings to Be Shown Here By Anne and Alitha Harcourt

By Dudley Harmon.

Washington is gay, but there is a place gayer still—Shanghai. There are twice as many parties there, say Anne and Alitha Harcourt, two young English artists, who have been to most of the capitals of the world. Visitors in Washington since last fall, they will hold a week's exhibition of their paintings beginning March 21 at the headquarters of the Newspaper Women's Club, 1640 Rhode Island avenue.

Despite a round of gayety which more jaded Washingtonians complain is hectic, Anne and Alitha have had time to paint several persons during their stay here.

Among their sitters were two considered among the most beautiful women in Washington — Frau Herbert Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, and Mme. Kulikowska-Higersberger, sister of the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy. Alitha likes to do "quick impressions" of people and will exhibit one next week of Mrs. Winston Etting, done in two sittings. The Attache of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Edward Weintal, also sat for his portrait.

Both Work on Same Portrait.

Occasionally Anne and Alitha both work on the same portrait, which, we learned yesterday, few artists can do successfully. One frequently adds touches to a portrait begun by the other, and though each has her own style when painting individually, their styles merge when they work together.

Anne and Alitha are daughters of Gerald Harcourt, well-known English painter and member of the Royal Academy. As children they covered the pages of their school books with drawings, Anne running to pictures of animals and Alitha to likenesses of their friends. It was not until they finished school, however, that they took up painting seriously. They studied art at the University of London, and supplemented their lessons with criticism from their father.

Alitha used to play the cello, and Anne the violin, before they became so busy with their painting. However, they are by no means single minded, for in addition to painting, they swim, ride, play tennis, and like to read.

Royal Academy Exhibitions.

Several times they exhibited at the Royal Academy in London at the annual showing which is the outstanding social and artistic event of the year. A portrait of their father was one of the pictures they showed there.

This year is the first time they have been to Washington, although they have visited in Lake Forest, N. Y., and Cleveland, Ohio.

The two sisters have traveled all over the world, painting as they went. Last year they spent in China, and discovered they would rather paint the Chinese than any other race because "they are so decorative."

Anne and Alitha will leave Washington to return to England toward the end of the month.

Mrs. McCammon Back From Visit In South Carolina

Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, has returned to Washington from Aiken, S. C., where she was the guest of Mrs. Joseph Leiter who is occupying the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Rawls.

Miss Nancy Leiter will have as her guest for several days the latter part of this month, Miss Virginia Rogers, and her mother, Mrs. Phillip Owen Coffin, who will stop in Aiken en route to Washington from Palm Beach.

Mrs. Archibald Davis and her daughter, Miss Emily Davis, who left the Capital several days ago, arrived in Aiken yesterday to be the guest of Mrs. Leiter and Miss Leiter for a few days before going on to Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Leiter and her daughter will leave Aiken April 3 for Hot Springs, Va., where they will spend several weeks at the Homestead Hotel. They will be joined by the former's mother, Mrs. John R. Williams. Mrs. William Mason Wright, wife of Maj. Gen. Wright, also expects to go to Hot Springs the early part of April for a short stay.

Club President Gives Luncheon For Governors

Women's Democratic Group to Hear Maj. Berry, Wayne Williams.

Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, recently elected president of the Women's National Democratic Club, entertained members of the board of governors of the club at a luncheon yesterday.

The guests, who sat at one large table, were Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Frank S. Bright, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Claude R. Porter, Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Mrs. William Beverly Mason, Mrs. David Tucker Brown, Mrs. Philip W. Chappell, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Miss Ruth Oberly, Miss Portia Oberly, Miss Ellis Meredith and Miss Eleanor Connolly.

Mr. Wayne Williams, special assistant to the Attorney General, will talk to the study group at the club this morning on the subject, "When Government Gets Out of Business." In the evening Maj. George L. Berry will talk to the business and professional woman's group on "Labor Under the New Deal."

Marshall Talk Set Tomorrow

League of Republican Women to Hear Lecture on "Two Presidents."

Mr. John Marshall will speak before the League of Republican Women tomorrow morning at 11:30 at the league's headquarters, Sixteenth and Scott Circle. Mr. Marshall, who was sent as a delegate to the convention when the late President Coolidge was nominated for Vice President, cast the one vote for Mr. Coolidge for President of the United States. His subject tomorrow will be "Two Presidents, Coolidge and Roosevelt."

Born in Parkersburg, W. Va., Mr. Marshall received his B. A. at Yale in 1903 and was admitted to the West Virginia Bar in 1904, practicing law in his native State until called by the late President Harding in 1921, to accept the appointment as Special Assistant Attorney General, in which capacity he went to Europe to handle important matters abroad. In 1925 he was made Assistant Attorney General in Washington, D. C., and has since pursued his legal profession here.

Mr. Marshall is recognized for his broad vision and political acumen. Mrs. Frank Shortall is sponsor for the meeting and the luncheon which follows will be in charge of Miss Roberta Tull.

Washingtonians Still in Florida

Ross Andrews Is Host at Luncheon Party.

Among those who are entertaining extensively at Miami Beach this month is Mrs. Leigh Palmer, Mrs. J. V. Moorehead, also of Washington, was a guest at a dinner given recently by Mrs. Palmer in the palm garden of the Roney Plaza.

Mr. Ross Andrews was host at a recent luncheon party in honor of friends from New York and Baltimore. Mrs. Jacob Faye and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Faye, jr., were guests at a dinner party given during the week by Mr. and Mrs. H. Harry Lippe, of Trenton, N. J.

Other Washington visitors recently at Miami Beach included Mrs. Kathryn Fuqua, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Summerville and Miss Marion Summerville.

"Romeo and Juliet" To Be Given March 25

Mrs. Mabel Owens Wilcox and Mr. Kent Dyer, of the Shakespeare Society of Washington, and Miss Joanne Adams, of the West Philadelphia Shakespeare Society, will be among the guest players appearing in "Romeo and Juliet" when it is presented by the Bartfield Players in the Roosevelt High School auditorium March 25.

The production in which Mr. Howard Whitfield and Mrs. Edythe Lazaroff Goldman will take the title roles, is being sponsored by the Shakespeare Society in co-operation with the Community Center Department. It will be staged in the manner of the Elizabethan theater, using the fore-stage and inner-stage, with costumes designed to present a tapestry of sixteenth century Italy against a background of subordinated scenery.

Mrs. Robert L. Bacon Returns to Capital

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, of New York, has returned to her home at 1801 F street from New York.

Mrs. Bacon is one of the group of smart young Washington matrons who take a real interest in Government affairs and can be seen often in the first row of seats at a committee meeting, or in the galleries of the Senate and House.

The Bacon house on F street is one of the few houses still standing which are identified with the early history of the Capital. In this house have lived many distinguished statesmen, including Chief Justice John Marshall and the late Chief Justice of the United States, Melville H. Fuller.

March 28 Set For Tewksbury Wedding Rites

Miss Helen Tewksbury, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Davis Tewksbury, of Chevy Chase, Md., has selected March 28 as the day of her marriage to Lieut. John Harry King, jr. Lieut. King is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Harry King, of Washington.

The ceremony will be attended only by members of the two families and a few close friends. Miss Tewksbury's sister, Mrs. Merrill Clementson, will be her only attendant. Mrs. Clementson is coming from her home in Long Beach, Calif., for the occasion.

Dr. Dan Landley, of New York, a former classmate of Lieut. King, will be best man.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Honorable Laurence Morland, who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic young Britisher, who calmly announces she is going with him. He tries to prevent her, their wills clash, she outwits him and at last he agrees. At a hotel in Lourenco Marques she receives a cable that distresses her. They go aboard a ketch and arrive at Machiche. Mallory tells friends that he goes into the veldt at once. They start on safari. In the shop of Ibn-ben-Dur, the name "Laurence Morland" causes her momentarily to lose her poise.

Chapter XX.

Puzzled.

IBN read the list with pursed lips, again shrugged his shoulder and then permitted his eyes to return to Josephine who, by now, was also standing. He began to twiddle a pearl on his jacket, not a very large one, twisting it until it came free. Placing it in Josephine's palm, he closed her fingers over it with both his hands. Their texture, no less than his action, startled her. Though alive, they were cold as stone is cold; though strong, no blood seemed to stir within their veins. A feeling of powerlessness came over her as though, should he fail to unclasp them, she could never stir from where she stood. But abruptly she found herself released; she looked down at the pearl, then questioningly at Ballard.

"Is it real?" she asked.

"Yes," he said shortly, none too pleased.

"What shall I do?"

"Take it and thank him; there's nothing else you can do."

Ibn tapped his jacket from the bottom up. "The further you go, the bigger they get," he murmured with a beatific smile which belied the enigmatic words.

A moment later she and Ballard issued to the dark street and the bar clanged on the shut door behind them. She had dreaded this first moment of being alone with him, but a sudden gust of wind, snatching off her helmet, caused an instantaneous diversion. Even when he had recovered the fugitive headgear, the wind continued its distraction. He hurried her to the landing place where they had left the boat and promptly plunged into violent argument with its crew. Persuaded against their judgment, they launched the boat and set sail, but the next instant the canvas was blown to shreds and before they could bend another sail the shallow craft was carried down upon the long finger of the concrete wharf.

Wreck Is Averted.

Josephine was sure it would crash like an eggshell, but the four boys, uttering shrieks of admonition, warded the blow with their eight hands. Crouching on the lee gunwale, they began to claw, foot by foot, yard by yard, along the interminable length of the pier. Drenched with spray, she cowered on a thwart, her hands locked to it in a deathlike grip.

An hour later Josephine, soaked, almost comatose, was being lifted into the saddle. She was scarcely aware of reaching camp or of carrying out Ballard's emphatic command to strip and take a rub, nor could she remember being handed his camel's-hair dressing-gown. Her first consciousness of all these facts came only in the morning with the slanting sun beating into her newly opened eyes. The stillness amazed her. Glancing about, she perceived everything was gone out of the tent except her bed and a fresh outfit of clothing laid on the canvas floor. She dressed hurriedly and stepped out to a scene of desolation; the safari had departed. Ballard called to her.

"Come have a wash and get your breakfast."

When Swayback was brought around the last of the loads had already disappeared up the trail and she found herself alone with Ballard. She stole a glance at him as they rode at a shambling trot through the steadily deepening sand. He seemed oblivious of her and her mood, intent on some goal beyond her vision. Determined not to be the first to speak, she sat in silence, but gradually she perceived that what held his attention was some test of endurance which loomed high avove any trifling contest between his will and hers. She sank into an apathy which was soon to develop into the cumulative agony of a treadmill. All that day and the next she suffered as she had not known body and mind could suffer and still keep going.

Sand and more sand, interminable sand, fine as flour, seizing upon the sun's rays, intensifying them and flinging them back like the blast from a monster oven at eyes and face. No shade; only the wire-like branches of wait-a-bit thorn trees, dark in the distance, cruelly disappointing upon approach, violently tenacious once they had set their claws. Her eyes sank deeper and deeper into her aching head; she drank greedily whenever water was offered but could not eat.

Hatred for Ballard.

Ballard appeared merciless; she hated him with a burning hatred so intense it took the place of courage. But such courage, good for a burst of speed, has no staying quality. On the second afternoon, reeling, she deliberately let herself go, taking a long header into the sand as joyfully as if she were plunging into water. The helmet, having saved her face from a scratching, rolled off into the bush. Ballard did not dismount, he merely shouted an order.

Ali and the capataz came at a run; they stooped, seized her by waist and ankles and swung her over the drooping head of the gray to a seat on the pommel. Ballard held her in his arms, the left across her back, the right under her knees. Her head sunk against his shoulder. From far away, from the outermost edge of consciousness, she heard him say: "It's a dirty deal, Jo; but we've simply got to get through."

But his thoughts were scarcely with her; they were anchored in the visit to Ibn-ben-Dur. That interview stood for a wall, a division between the prosaic world of the stolid Britishers at Machiche and Delagoa Bay and the spider's web of the world of intrigue. Somehow Ibn had promptly brought to mind certain denizens of Red Lion Square. Not that there was any alliance between them—far from it. But their brains worked along similar lines. Race hadn't anything to do with it. Say you divided humanity into two picture puzzles; Kennicott, MacIntosh and their ilk would fit into one frame, while Ibn, Grast, Menck and Furman, along with Andy Fox for good measure, would take their place in the other.

Then what about himself? For the time being he was outside both pictures, self-charged with fitting the pieces together.

Ibn had not given him all he needed in the way of information and yet had been able to cast a broad light over recent events, deep in the hinterland, of great specific interest. True, not once could he be brought to focus the beam and say with certainty, "This is your man," but that was only natural. Since no order had ever come to the banian in writing, only by word of mouth, how could he recognize the name of Morland, or as his ears would hear it, Molande? If Ibn had painted anything approaching a true picture, no Englishman could be expected to identify it, give it an English name.

A weight, quite independent of the fatigue of the journey and the burden in his arms, began to drag down Ballard's shoulders as he felt driven to accept the fact that the Honorable Laurence Morland must be of the scum of the earth. There are a very few things a white man provided with funds and the leader of his own safari, cannot do in Africa.

Code of the Jungle.

With Morland it seemed to have taken the form of establishing him as a scourge second only to the fabled bandits of the Drakensberg passes. Though at first he had stolen no goods he had been shrewd enough to steal an idea from some book he had read which wiped out for the time being all need for stealing anything else. What could be easier than buying a dozen wives at two pounds ten apiece?

This simple maneuver amounted to a stroke of genius, for immediately he must have become enlarged in the native mind as a man of great wealth, paramount head of a family and presumptive founder of a new tribe. The prerogatives were endless, but overshadowing all others was the immediate accretion of labor and followers in abundance. Marriage wiped out pay; his women must engage in every form of basic labor for him for nothing. By ritual their relatives became his retainers. Out of them he could pick his retinue at random—porters, guides, gun-bearers, trackers and couriers—in exchange for the casual game that fell to his gun. What need he buy? Cartridges and the renewal of his shooting license—nothing else.

Out of the meager entries in Ibn's ledger a strange hegira had taken form. The renegade Englishman had not entered through Inhambane after all; he had come in by way of Bazaruto Island, crossed to the headwaters of the Shanghai and thence downstream to its junction with the Limpopo.

There something crucial must have happened; either some disappointment had unseated his remaining reason, or the last vestige of inherited decency had crumbled under half a dozen varieties of pressure. Rotted by native drink and native women, perhaps led on by an illusion of omnipotence coupled with the urge of a drained purse, he had crossed the fatal line between debauch and banditry.

Such was the picture that had risen like a wall in Ballard's path. It forced him to scrap everything that had gone before and make a new start. It explained why he, no less than Josephine, had been grateful for the strain of action which had prevented their coming to grips over her reaction to Laurence Morland's name. As far as he was concerned it had postponed the moment of decision.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WHY DO KITCHENS always have to look so kitchen-y?" asked a friend of ours who can bake and broil and fry and roast the best of anybody—even if she is as pretty and slimsy as a schoolgirl. "I may sound silly, but I want a sophisticated-looking kitchen—nothing gingham or oilcloth for me, if you please."

We sympathize! When a lady is talented in cookery, she ought to be allowed to have a setting that's becoming . . . she shouldn't be sentenced to gingham and oilcloth when cellophane is more her style. So we suggest for this kitchen walls of emerald green with white cellophane curtains finished with white pleated ruffles. Then pots and pans all in white—or all in aluminum—and a floor covering in black and white marble-blocked linoleum. Or have the walls painted navy blue, then have pale jonquil yellow curtains and bright-red pots and pans—and a gray linoleum. Or have the walls in yellow, the linoleum in cobalt blue, the curtains in cobalt blue hooked back with glass tiebacks . . . then rows of cobalt blue glassware on the shelves.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Things to Know About Glass."

Floral Scents Are Favorites In Springtime

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WITH FLOWERS pushing up their pretty heads in great profusion over the fashion landscape, it was only to be expected that floral perfumes would be in the front ranks of favorites.

That is particularly true of the daintily scented fragrances made by a well-known perfume house. Such a variety you have to choose from. There's lily-of-the-valley, rose, Jasmin, lilac and violet—each one hauntingly sweet and refreshing as a spring zephyr.

They come in attractive white pebbly surfaced boxes with a dais base on which rests the flacon. The bottles themselves are triple-fluted with frosted stoppers.

By the bottle or dram the perfumes are astonishingly reasonable for their superb quality.

Make-up Capes.

A NEW MOTTO in the beauty mart is "cape up for make-up."

An excellent idea, too! Lots of women wait until they're completely dressed before they make up their faces. Almost inevitably flecks of powder and rouge, and often drops of foundation lotion mar the neatness of their frock. To avoid this they could drape one of the little waterproof capelets around their shoulders. It's also an excellent thing to wear when you shampoo your hair.

Superb Mineral Water.

ALL THE WAY from Hot Springs, Ark., comes that superb mineral water sold in Washington by a local grocery concern.

Say those who've sipped this clear and sparkling liquid, "It's good for whatever ails you." It's especially recommended, too, for Grandpop's "rheumaticks."

Powder-Cream Box.

THERE'S one bargain on the counter of a downtown store it would be a shame to pass by. It consists of two things—an extra large box of especially fine powder and a jar of "contour cream." Ordinarily the two sell together for $3. This week they're yours for $2.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

FAVORITE FOODS of famous folk

MISS MABEL BOARDMAN.

Miss Boardman's Recipe Offers Satisfying Oatmeal Gruel.

By Pattie Ellicott.

THE HUMANITARIAN efforts of Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross, are well known to all. One of the outstanding features of Miss Boardman's work has been the organization of its women's volunteer corps in which thousands of women have been enrolled and trained to render the types of service women must do in times of war.

In doing this organization Miss Boardman went thoroughly into the subject of food for the sick and studied many recipes. She is a great advocate of the virtues of gruels for the ill and even has professed a fondness for them for persons not ill, but who desire to be on a light diet for a meal or two.

Among the gruels, in which Miss Boardman has taken a special interest and which she has declared to be appetizing and satisfying is oatmeal gruel.

Oatmeal Gruel.

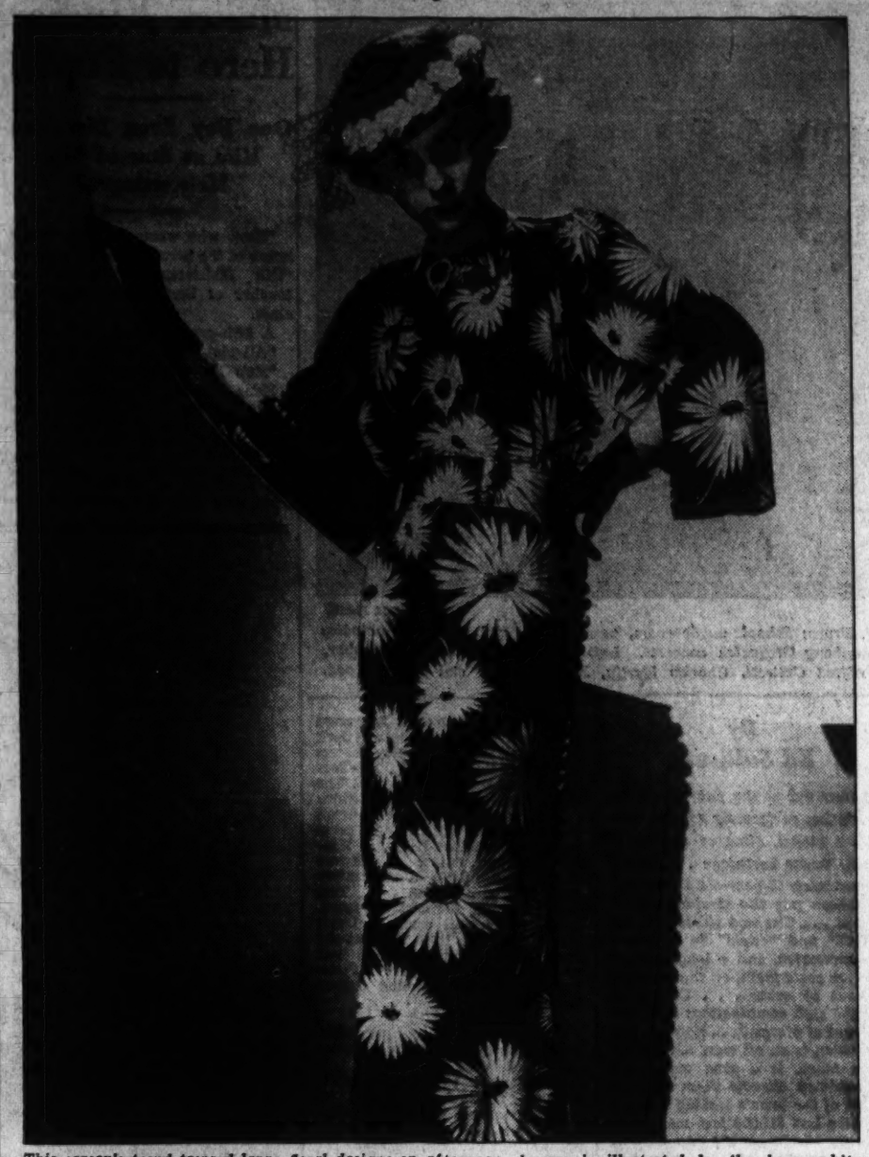
4 cupfuls boiling water
½ teaspoonful salt

Into a double boiler put the oatmeal; pour boiling water into which the salt has been added over it, stir for three minutes. This should be cooked from four to six hours, stirring occasionally. Strain; if too thick, then add soup stock, milk or even water to it.

It can be served hot or cold.

Flowers Go Flamboyant on New Prints



This season's trend toward large floral designs on afternoon dresses is illustrated by the huge white daisies against a black background on the silk print frock shown in the above picture.

Ex-Film Magazine Writer Knows All the Answers

Mrs. Dorothy Calhoun, Interviewer of Movie Stars for 25 Years, Is Walking Encyclopedia of Changing Scenes, Sirens and Traditions of Hollywood.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF THERE'S ANYTHING you want to know about Hollywood, Dorothy Donnell Calhoun, who has interviewed all the screen stars from Bayne and Bushman to Garbo and Gable, can answer your question.

Connected with a pioneer motion-picture magazine for a quarter of a century, and for the last 12 years Western editor of that periodical, Mrs. Calhoun has wide knowledge of the celebrities, foibles and fads of filmland. She recently came to Washington to be with her husband, Dr. Harold Calhoun, a specialist in adult education with the United States Department of Education.

Mrs. Calhoun's experiences with movie celebrities go back to the days of such half-forgotten figures as Frances X. Bushman, Anita Stewart and Wallace Reid. She can remember when most of the current "big names" first landed in Hollywood and started working up. She can remember when executives begged every available magazine writer to "get a story from Garbo."

Hepburn Is Facetious.

Mrs. Calhoun had the first interview with Katherine Hepburn in Hollywood. "She had just arrived, but her publicity plan was already mapped out. I recall she sprawled in a chair as I talked with her, turned her head to the ceiling and treated the whole thing as a huge joke. To my question, 'Are you married,' she replied, 'Am I married? Let's see . . . I should be able to answer that . . . but, somehow, I can't remember!'"

John Gilbert gave Mrs. Calhoun the first "candid interview" that ever appeared in a film magazine. "That was about ten years ago," she said. "He promised to talk and tell all if I would write exactly what he told me, without any of the extra frills generally written into movie interviews at that time. After that, all the stars, sheep-like started being 'candid' about themselves."

"Good Copy" Celebrities.

Of the celebrities she considers particularly "good copy" Mrs. Calhoun mentioned Bette Davis, Norma Shearer, Clark Gable and Leslie Howard. She admires Claudette Colbert ("She's an unaffected, highly talented woman who realizes the camera is most kind to her"); she is very fond of Louise Fazenda ("an expensive personality, a natural clown and as lovable as any woman in the film colony") and of Norma Shearer, "who has kept her feet firmly on the ground despite her success."

"I have known Norma 11 years," she went on, "and I am convinced she is one of the sanest, most sensible women in motion pictures. She has planned ahead, has never rested on her laurels nor begun to believe what the press agents say about her. She lives conservatively, works hard, dresses smartly, has never been the subject of gossip and takes her responsibilities as a wife and mother seriously."

Having observed the short course of most marriages in Hollywood, Mrs. Calhoun believes "they don't last, because it's not the fashion in filmland to work at marriage, at all. Yet nothing really requires more work."

She pointed out that the average husband and wife in that mad, whirl of living have "virtually no mutual interests, no common tastes (if they have any at all) and no plans for a future together. As a rule they marry after they have 'arrived,' which means they never make any sacrifices together to achieve success," she went on. "They have very few children; they are extremely jealous of each other; they are pampered and petted by the public until they generally believe they are geniuses. They work all day in a world of make-believe, until reality itself becomes make-believe."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Athlete's Foot.

MOST of us are familiar with the greenish-white, fuzzy molds which are sometimes found growing on bread that has been kept for some days in a moist, warm place. Molds are tiny, threadlike plants which produce spores (seeds) but which cannot manufacture their own food; that is, they contain no chlorophyl (green coloring matter) and hence must derive their nourishment from other sources.

Molds can grow on the human skin, particularly where it is moist and warm, and one of the most common manifestations is known as athletic's foot or ringworm, which we know is not a worm at all but a plant fungus.

If there is the slightest evidence of infection, all types of shoes not in use should be kept in an airy, light place and given an occasional sun bath. If an infection is known to exist, formaldehyde may be employed for the purpose of disinfection.

It is easy to understand how infection occurs. Feet perspire more readily than other parts of the body, and the amount of ventilation which they receive during the hours of activity is minimal. Under heat and moisture, therefore, the outer layers of the skin between the toes degenerate and provide an ideal culture bed for fungi.

Despite what we have hitherto considered scrupulous cleanliness, if we would avoid mold infections, the feet and all skin folds of the body should be bathed frequently and then dried thoroughly. In this way conditions which will not permit fungi to grow are maintained. We can not kill off all molds around a swimming pool, as one infected individual may liberate millions of spores at a single visit. We can, however, expose the feet to air and sunlight. During most seasons of the year we can wear medium to lightweight footgear and during the winter time good foot hygiene should be a matter of special concern.

I have a leaflet on the prevention and management of athlete's foot, which can be obtained by sending a stamped and addressed envelope with request.

Newest Spring Prints Feature Huge Flowers

Flamboyant Floral Designs Leap to Foreground in Fashion Parade.

By Frances Mangum.

IN DIRECT CONTRAST to the modest violets that are hanging their pretty heads on tailored lapels this season are the huge daisies, sunflowers and chrysanthemums blossoming forth on prints.

Almost inevitably spring is a season for floral prints but when, oh when, have they been so frankly flamboyant? Unabashed, these flowers have sprung into the fashion foreground in twice, thrice and four times their usual sizes. Gay colored blooms are scattered willy-nilly over dark backgrounds in such a manner that you can't miss seeing them and can fairly hear them. Daisies are telling at last!

The exotic quality of the print bespeaks the Chinese influence as well as the style of the gown itself.

Note the buttons down the side extending from armhole to knee.

And true to the emphasis on shoulders this season, note these shirred to give width.

When floral prints first appeared this season the large, spectacular flowers were for the most part confined to evening frocks. But as their popularity increased—as it was sure to—they took their stand on afternoon gowns as well. There's nothing conservative about them. They simply flaunt themselves in the face of convention. But what they lack in conservatisim they make up for in chic.

However, one thing should be borne in mind by all those who have succumbed to the charm of the huge florals. Accessories must be simple. The flowers must be allowed to speak for themselves without spectacular hats, gloves or bags to interfere.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Stiff Course of Study, Including Some First-Class Instruction in Mental Hygiene, May Solve Problem of Girl Who Dramatically Calls Self "Rotten Clear Through."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Reading your column every day, I have not read of anyone's having a problem—or should I say affliction?—like mine. I am 17 and much too old for my age. My father, mother, younger brother and I have lived in Washington two years and I am supposed to be living up to a wonderful name by being all that is decent. Yet I know I am rotten clear through. I graduated from high school two years ago and it was then I began to realize boys held only physical attraction for me. I know it is wrong and I have been fighting against it ever since.

Mary Haworth.

Now, being two years older, naturally I have developed even more and people tell me so many times what a gorgeous figure I have that I am becoming self-conscious about it. I cannot fall in love with anyone and when a boy tells me he loves me and I do not say, "I love you, too, darling," he becomes angry and accuses me of making just another conquest. It hurts terribly, but I know it is the truth. When I can make them say that, I am through with them.

* * * *

I can easily talk to anyone intelligently and I have had occasion to do so with many celebrities, but underneath it all, I know what the real attraction is. Will I ever love anyone? My affliction has done one good thing, but I am about to undo that. A very well known man whom I thought I loved has asked me to marry him. Before I met him he was a dope addict. When I found out about it I foolishly told him he would have to choose between dope and me. He took my word and for four months has not touched the stuff. However, he has warned me that the minute I drop him he will begin it again. I know that is very weak and that the first thing you will say is that if he is so lacking in character he is not worth worrying about. But he is so fine about everything else. Don't think I am taken in because of the glamor of his fame.

* * * *

I have met every kind of person in the theatrical business and other professions, and glamor has become old stuff to me. The famous and well known are just as human as all the others. This man I speak of is the third person I have ever given a second thought to, yet I don't love him either. I am sick of men and sometimes think I would like to go out in the woods alone for about a month just roughing it and forgetting everything. What's the matter with me besides being a self-centered egotistical young brat who grew up too soon? V. G.

Belligerent Urge to Attract Shows Fear of Opposite Sex.

DEAR V. G.: Before telling you what, in my opinion, is "wrong" with you, let me first quote from Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human.' He writes, "What we call 'masculine' really signifies 'belonging to the dominant sex,' and what we term 'feminine' means 'belonging to the submerged sex' . . . We must content ourselves with the bald statement that the unnatural imposition of masculine dominance on the life patterns of women has given rise to two distinct types of feminine psychology—slave psychology, and protest, or rebel psychology . . . Where we find slaves, we find masters, and where we find successful revolt we may look for defeated overlords."

* * * *

"One of the most common manifestations of the competitive spirit . . . is that phenomenon called 'sex appeal' or 'it' . . . In our civilization of sexual competition it is apparent that any man or woman who can heighten his sexual attractiveness by an intuitive exaggeration of all sex-stimulating behavior is better armed for the . . . fray and enjoys a certain prestige because members of the opposite sex 'fall' for these charms. The very words we employ . . . clearly indicate the power motive behind much of our . . . behavior. Men 'fall' (that is, they tumble from the heights of their masculine prestige) for a woman's charms. Women 'succumb' to a man's 'line' (that is, their natural cunning is overcome) . . . Women boast of their ability to arouse a man's . . . passion without gratifying it. The woman with the most provocative 'it' is usually envied by her sisters. This belligerent 'it' is no more than an attempt to batter the male out of the stronghold of his domination by the use of sex as a weapon of offense and defense.

* * * *

Now, do you begin to get the drift of what may be wrong with you? This writer "reiterates that fear of the opposite sex" plus reluctance to assume the normal social responsibilities engendered by a normal love relationship is the keynote of every aberration from a normal emotional life.

* * * *

Far from being a person who has grown up too soon, you are a youngster who is failing to keep pace with what should be normally progressive psychological development. Nor are you "rotten clear through." That statement is an effort on your part to make a dramatic picture of your simple failure to measure up to standards which all of us must meet if we are to achieve real happiness in our social relationships. Your desire to "go out in the woods alone for about a month just roughing it and forgetting everything"—if it is a genuine wish and not more posing—is another way of confessing your wish to run away from reality; to turn your back on a rapidly approaching necessity for making a more wholesome adjustment to life.

* * * *

If it can be arranged—and from what you say of your background, I'm sure it can—why don't you enroll in a good co-educational college for a stiff course of study which includes some first-class instruction in mental hygiene? You need to lift yourself out of this dangerous rut of preoccupation with men and emotions and your reactions to the same; and to find the way toward a more healthful concept of life and of social relationships between the sexes. Don't waste time or thought on your drug-addict friend. His problem is his own to solve. You have more than enough to do in solving your own. M. H.

$1,200 Donated For Orchestra; Totals $27,000

Solicitation Groups Press Drive for $100,000 Goal Set for Sunday.

New contributions amounting to $1,200, reported at yesterday's campaign luncheon, have raised the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund to $27,000. With four more days to go before the drive closes, workers pledged campaign chairmen they will renew their efforts to reach the $100,000 goal by Sunday.

Pointing out the necessity of obtaining the full amount of the goal, Harold N. Marsh, general chairman, urged full support of the campaign.

"There are many friends of the Symphony who do not realize the tremendous cost of supporting a symphony orchestra," he declared. "It will be utterly impossible to present the sunset symphony concerts again next summer unless the amount of subscriptions is materially increased. Even though the Federal Government assisted with funds last summer the delightful concerts at the Watergate could not have been given without the assistance of the Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund.

Contributions from two Supreme Court justices were reported by the judicial committee yesterday.

Yesterday's Army committee report showed $32.64 in new contributions. The Navy committee brought in $104.50 in new donations.

Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of the fine arts college at George Washington University, who heads the campaign educational committee, reported a gift from Catholic University, the first of the colleges to make a contribution to this year's fund.

Among the other committees whose chairmen reported were the women's division of the business committee, $75.50; national committee, $10; the "sporting chance" committee, $21; suburban committee, $138; metropolitan committee, $496.50.

A gift of $31 was received from the Twentieth Century Club, and another of $25 came from the Arts Club.

March Borrowing Reaches 1.9 Billion

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury announced last night it had borrowed a total of $1,900,206,950 in its mid-March financing program.

Of this amount, $1,355,653,550 consisted of cash subscriptions and the remainder represented securities issued in exchange for Treasury 2¾ per cent notes which mature next April.

Out of the proceeds, $450,000,000 of bills which mature March 16 will be retired with cash, leaving the "new borrowing" of the operation at $905,653,550.

The Treasury said prospective purchasers offered to subscribe $8,005,931,550, representing $5,603,388,750 for bonds, and the remainder in notes.

The financing offering consisted of about $650,000,000 in 12 to 15 year 2¾ per cent bonds and $600,000,000 in 1½ per cent five-year notes.

Cash subscriptions for those amounts were invited.

In addition, the department offered holders of the $559,000,000 in 2⅞ per cent notes, maturing April 15, the option of exchanging their holdings into either of the new issues.

Youthful Patricide Enters Guilty Plea

Reading, Pa., March 11 (AP).—Louis Toontas, disheveled 14-year-old junior high school pupil charged with slaying his father, abruptly pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter today, ending his trial on a charge of murder.

Toontas' counsel decided on the surprise move while the boy was on the stand, describing a home life of terror. Louis said he shot his father, James, 45-year-old automobile mechanic, because he feared his father would "fix" him.

Judge Paul N. Shaeffer turned the trial records over to juvenile court for final disposition. Louis is liable to 6 to 12 years' imprisonment. Court officials said he will be sent to a reformatory or other house of correction, or committed to the custody of some resonsible person.

And They Learn About Music From It!

School Music Makes Kindler Hero to Pupils

One Boy Even Identifies Him as Star of 'Die Meistersinger.'

"Now, who wants to give me the name of the hero of Wagner's opera, "Die Meistersinger?" asked the teacher of her music appreciation class.

"All right, John, you tell me."

"He's Hans Kindler," said John.

Hans Kindler, of course, is conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, which plays music from "Die Meistersinger." But John's reply shows how the tall, athletic Kindler rates with the youngsters—the hundreds of school boys and girls who pack the school auditoriums for the students' concerts. He's a hero to them.

At E. V. Brown School, where 60 grade school children ride to Western High School on concert days, it wasn't so easy to get one boy to join the group. He didn't like music, but once he bought a 35-cent ticket and went anyway.

Next day in class he reported the concert "wasn't so bad."

"What did you like most?" his teacher asked.

"I liked Mr. Kindler," he said. "I liked the way he looked. I liked the way he acted.

"Is that all?" he was asked.

"Well, I liked the way he talked. He used plain words, and he told some good stories, too."

"Symphony concert days" are real events at E. V. Brown school as they are in nearly every school in the District. This year Dr. Kindler and the orchestra played 10 times for student audiences. Although this is more school concerts than have been played in any previous season, even more are needed if all the youngsters who want to hear the music are to have the opportunity. A series of these student concerts next year, however, depends on the success of the Orchestra Association's present drive for a $100,000 sustaining fund.

Surcharge Extension Protest Move Fails

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday denied a motion by shipping groups to dismiss an application of class 1 railroads for indefinite extension of emergency freight surcharges, scheduled to expire July 1.

The action will necessitate further hearings here and at other points throughout the country. They will begin late this month, the commission said.

PROPER AGING

Tobacco in its natural state is harsh and strong. Though "cured" by the grower before sale, it is unsuited for use without further aging. During this aging period (which ranges in the case of Lucky Strike from 1½ to 3 years) important changes occur. These "Nature" changes result in the partial "smoothing out" of the original harsh qualities of the leaf. Our process of manufacture carries these improvements many steps further—as every Lucky Strike Cigarette exemplifies: A Light Smoke of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco.

D. C.-Capitol Peace Plan Is Proposed

Ramspeck Suggests Both Groups Negotiate for 'Understanding'.

Sees Congress Irked by Newspapers, Citizens Associations.

Appointment of a "representative group of Washington citizens" to negotiate a "mutual understanding agreement" with a committee from Congress was proposed last night by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia.

He advanced the suggestion in an interview after telling the District Firemen's Association he hoped "the very bad feeling of antagonism existing between the people here and Congress" would not react unfavorably against legislation in which they may be interested.

"Newspapers and citizens' associations," he argued, "have adopted the wrong attitude if they want to get results on the Hill. They have been riding Congress and attempting to intimidate members of the House.

"Take this propaganda about members of Congress and parking tickets. Why, not 10 per cent of the members of Congress abuse traffic regulations."

Take Wrong Attitude.

"Washington newspapers and people generally have a right to give us hell if they want to, but they can't expect to get everything they ask if they take that attitude."

Ramspeck said he had been unable as chairman of the House Civil Service Committee to put through Congress "good bills" desired by Federal employes because of the friction between the people and his associates.

"All this fighting by newspapers and citizens' associations," he added, "is building up more and more antagonism toward Federal employes and toward the people of the District. This is all very unfortunate.

"I'd certainly like personally to see better conditions exist.

"If you firemen feel the papers are making a mistake in their methods you should let them know what you think. Understand, I'm not asking for any fight with the newspapers. I'm only interested in peace."

Responsibility for the situation, Ramspeck said, rests equally with newspapers and citizens' associations.

"Some of these citizens' associations," he said, "are using unfortunate methods in trying to remedy what they regard as wrongs. They heap criticism on Congress.

"They forget you can't get anywhere by cussing. The best way would be to appoint representative committees for the both sides, let them sit down, talk this whole thing out and get a fair decision."

Feeling Growing Worse.

The Georgian pointed to his seven years in Congress and said the feeling between Congress and the people of Washington has continued to get worse.

"Washington's appropriation," he emphasized, "has been going down every year since I came here—either the appropriation or the lump sum voted by the Federal Government.

"One reason for that is it is hard for the members of Congress to understand why people in the District kick so much when they only pay $1.50 a hundred in taxes when many of us pay $3 or $4 at home.

"There is an unusual situation here, of course, and we all know it. The District has to provide police and fire protection and keep the streets clean. There are a lot of Government buildings here and a lot of Government employes, and all that has added to the traffic problem.

"There are two sides to the question. I certainly would like to see it all worked out in spirit of mutual sympathy and understanding."

Volunteers Mark 40th Anniversary

The history and progress of the organization was outlined in an address by Lieut. Maj. H. Mills Eroh, District commander. He pointed out that from a humble beginning in one room in New York in March, 1896, the organization has spread throughout the country, carrying on relief and religious work.

Film Heads Disagree On "7 Wonders"

What constitutes a wonder of the modern world has Hollywood executives scratching their heads. They agree on four: Boulder Dam, Panama Canal, the Empire State Building and the development of the airplane. They haven't agreed on the other three.

One thing Washingtonians agree on is that the way to sell a home is through a Post Want Ad. And no wonder. This Post Want Ad brought more than 16 inquiries within two days after the ad appeared in The Post:

'Republican' Art May Be Long, But Its Time Is Fleeting Here

This silvered panel was removed from above the entrance to Attorney General Cummings' office in the Department of Justice Building yesterday in an apparent clash between New Deal art and that planned by the Hoover Administration. Painting by Paul C. Jannewine will be replaced by gayly colored mural.

Citizens Urge Senate Restore Cuts in Budget

American U. Park Association Acts Unanimously; Lodge Speaks.

A motion urging the Senate subcommittee to restore the Budget Bureau's recommendations and especially the drastically cut lump sum in the District budget was adopted unanimously at the American University Park Citizens Association last night.

Thomas Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said, "I think the appropriations asked for by the District Commissioners and the Budget Bureau should be granted and given some consideration."

A lecture with slides was given by William R. Manning on Mexico and the Inter-America highway.

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, meeting in Woodridge Library, disapproved any merger between the Capital Rapid Transit Co. and the Washington Rapid Transit Co., which would assign to either company a value greater than the actual cost of its equipment.

Disapproval also was a proposed bill to curb reckless driving. The group considered that the maximum penalties provided were too harsh and was opposed to failure of the bill to set a minimum penalty.

The meeting set itself against any change in the zoning law to eliminate the obtaining of "consents," and after bitter debate went on record by a one-vote margin as opposed to the Sisson red-rider repeal bill.

The associaton favored the establishment in the District of a drug bill, patterned after the Harrison narcotic act. William A. Roberts was indorsed as a candidate for corporation counsel.

Yacht Club Holds Dinner Saturday

The Corinthian Yacht Club will hold its annual dinner-dance at the Mayflower Hotel Saturday at 8:30 p. m.

Headed by C. E. Ingling, the entertainment committee has arranged an extensive floor show for the affair. Dancing will continue until after midnight.

The dinner-dance was described yesterday as being but a prelude to an extensive program the club has planned for the season.

Officers of the club for 1936 are Edward C. Baltz, commodore; Carl H. Claudy, jr., vice commodore; Edgar N. Brawner, rear commodore; Lewin W. Walker, secretary-treasurer; Charles S. West, recording secretary; Robert O. Scholz, treasurer, and Clarence E. Ingling, Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton and Joseph H. Gallihер, trustees.

Boys Snatch Purse.

Two white boys snatched a pocketbook containing $8 in bills and a $17.50 check from Mary Goldrick, of the Bellevue Hotel, while she was walking along North Capital street, near G, last night.

Justice Department Panels to Be Replaced by 'New Deal' Murals.

In this case, however, the walkees apparently are headed for certain obscurity to give "Democratic" friezes the coveted spot in the limelight at the entrance of Attorney General Cummings' office.

Whether it is for art's sake or for politics' sake, the fact remains officials of the New Deal division of painting and sculpture yesterday ordered the "Republican" symbolic friezes—notably a semi-nude study—removed from the place of honor.

The panels, the work of Paul C. Jennewine, who was hired to produce them when the C. O. P. flourished in 1930, will take their stroll to more remote corridors of the building.

New Deal Art Only.

And before long the keen eyes of the Attorney General will glimpse only the art produced under the New Deal as he enters his sacred precincts at the Justice Department.

Slabs of sheeting curtained the entrance to his office as workmen removed from above his door the silvered, symbolic panel, "Investigation of Truth."

It will make way for a brilliantly colored mural described as intended to depict the Attorney General's work.

At the nearby office of Solicitor General Stanley Reed, balled-and-chained Greek figures in the mode "September Morn," another creative contribution of the artist Jennewine, known as "Mastery of Crime," will be retired to more cloistered, surroundings to make room for a "before and after" mural of a criminal sadly entering and gayly departing from prison.

Symbolic Frieze to Go.

The third "Republican" symbolic frieze to go, called "Defending the Public Interest," will provide space for a "Democratic" painting concerning public lands.

Jennewine's classical panels adorned the full-length doorways when the department moved into the new building in 1934.

New Deal art powers that be commissioned Henry Varnum Poor to fashion panels to flank the entry ways.

The explanation of officials was that either the work of Jennewine or Poor had to go because they failed to harmonize. They ridiculed suggestions of political preference.

"It's just a matter of putting the various pieces where they're best suited to go," they said.

Youth Gives Up In $1,472 Theft From Theater

Geological Survey Official's Son First Phones Mother in Chevy Chase.

Frederick Birdseye, 22-year-old son of a Government official in Washington, arrived in Cleveland the other day with little money in his pocket and a troubled conscience. He phoned his mother, living in Chevy Chase, Md.

As a result, Detective Sergt. Lambert, of the Washington police department, was on his way to Cleveland last night with a warrant charging Birdseye with embezzlement of $1,472 from the Avalon Theater in Chevy Chase, where the boy was assistant manager.

Birdseye is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude H. Birdseye. The elder Birdseye is a division chief in the Geological Survey.

The Associated Press reported the telephone conversation that led to the son's surrender as it was told [illegible] Cleveland:

"I called my mother by phone Monday night when I got here from Los Angeles. I told her I had spent about all of the money, and I thought I should be arrested. She agreed and said she would call Washington police.

"I told her I'd wait for policemen at the Hippodrome Theater. But when I went there at 1:30 in the afternoon no one was there. I bought a ticket and told the usher someone was coming to get me. After I'd seen the picture twice the detectives came."

Birdseye told reporters he was robbed of $700 in Los Angeles.

"I've done screwy things for a long time, but I'm through now," he concluded.

State Conference Of D. A. R. Opens

The annual District of Columbia State Conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution opened last night with a banquet in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. There were 460 members present.

Wade H. Ellis, Assistant to the Attorney General in the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt, was honor guest and delivered an address on "A Visit to Runnymede." Presiding was Mrs. George Madden Grimes, State regent of the District of Columbia, who said a few words of greeting to the group.

Others at the speakers' table included Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., national treasurer general; Miss Helen Harman, national vice president general; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general, and Mrs. Leu R. Spencer, registrar general.

Marian Grant Gardner, concert and radio soprano of Salt Lake City and Denver, was the guest soloist. The Navy Band accompanied the singer.

Missing D. C. Girls Found in Roanoke

Washington's list of missing persons was diminished by two last night by the finding in Roanoke, Va., of two 13-year-old girls who left their homes Tuesday with $6 in their pocketbooks and intentions of going to Florida for the balance of the winter.

The girls, Ruth Dixon, 728 Upshur street, northwest, and Esther Kishter, 618 Keefer street northwest, went to visit the Dixon girl's grandmother in Roanoke. The grandmother induced them to remain until Esther's brother, Robert, came from Washington to bring them home.

Two Washington girls and a Spencerville, Md., girl remained among the missing. They were Dorothy Anderson, 6, of Spencerville; Mary Evelyn White, 15, of 637 Florence street northeast, and Eleanor Mary Lewis, 14, of 703 Ninth street northeast.

Collector, 64 Aids Kept Busy As 50,000 File Tax Returns

"Do I," she asked naively, "get exemption for Fido, my dog? And what about the cosmetics I use—although, of course, I don't use many? Do I get exemption for them, too?"

And the stout gentleman with the gold watchchain had a question or so.

"About my cane?" he inquired. "Shouldn't that entitle me to something? And the tobacco I smoke in this pipe?"

Into the democracy of room 1002 of the Internal Revenue Bureau Washingtonians of all ages and many stations in life are coming these days, as deadline approaches for the filing of income tax returns.

There are men in overalls, young clerks and typists, men of great wealth, whose limousines wait for them outside.

Washingtonians, as a whole, seem more prosperous this year than last if the number filing for income taxes is any barometer.

With only a few days left until the deadline, which is midnight March 16, this year, almost 50,000 persons have registered either by mail or by visiting the bureau.

Deputy Tax Collector Clarence Keiser and his staff of 64 assistants are busy handling the crowds that stand in long lines outside the office waiting their turn.

Tentative figures this year show gains. For instance, last week a total of 10,225 persons filed their returns. This was a big increase over the corresponding period last year, when the weekly register was 8,305.

And on Monday alone 2,184 persons filed their returns. Tuesday was an even busier day for the men and women who are helping collect the money. On that day 2,350 persons appeared. Yesterday's figures were in complete, but Keiser said they would be somewhat less because of the rain.

Lunacy Board Wins Support Of House Unit

Committee Decides to Report Measure Without Hearings.

Prettyman Is Praised in Resolution for Work on Bill.

The House District Committee, upon recommendation of Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, yesterday voted to report favorably the revised local lunacy commission bill a day after its introduction without hearings.

Accepting the report of its chairman, Representative Norton, and Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, the committee decided that immediate action was desirable. Mrs. Norton and Palmisano made a personal inspection of a trial of lunacy cases in District Supreme Court last week.

The committee decided, upon the suggestion of Representative Nichols, not to include the 268-page testimony on communism before the Blanton sub-committee on appropriations in the printed transcript of hearings before a sub-committee on the Sisson bill.

Representative Jenckes had asked that the entire testimony be incorporated into the record. The committee held, however, that the reprinting is unnecessary, and that the record could merely refer to the Appropriations sub-committee's hearings.

Prettyman Praised.

The committee also adopted a resolution praising Prettyman for his work as corporation counsel and as contact man between the District Commissioners and the committee and wished him success in the private practice of law.

Prettyman will relinquish his post the end of this week. His successor has not been announced.

Chairman W. H. King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday called a meeting for Saturday morning so that Prettyman's recommendations on all pending local legislation may be heard before he quits his office.

The action of the home committee on the lunacy bill was in fact a tribute to Prettyman as he expressed a desire to get the measure on the House calendar before retiring from public office.

"I don't have words to condemn the present system of handling lunacy cases," he said. "It has been left over from the dark ages.

Scores Present System.

"At present a lunacy case is handled like a criminal case. There is a public trial by jury. Every year between 650 and 700 persons have to go through that procedure before a crowd of morbid curiosity seekers."

Chairman Norton concurred in Prettyman's opinion and expressed amazement that something had not been done to remedy the evil years ago.

A. Philip Kane, of the District Bar Association, endorsed the bill. It had been approved previously by the District Medical Society.

The measure sets up a commission composed of eight physicians and one lawyer to hear lunacy cases in private sessions and to make recommendations to the District Supreme Court. Only two of the physicians will act simultaneously and only for three-month periods.

The resolution as to Prettyman pointed out that he has proved himself to be "a man of exceptional ability and integrity" and expressed regret that he would no longer be associated with the committee.

Mrs. Randall Died From Gas, Is Ruling

A temporary certificate of death due to carbon-monoxide gas was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death of Mrs. Charlotte Randall, of 3707 Ingomar street northwest.

Mrs. Randell was discovered lying beside her auto in a garage at the rear of her home late Sunday night by her brother, Bernard Cassell. The ignition of the car was on but the motor was cold and the gas tank nearly half full.

The fire rescue squad made a vain attempt to save the life of the woman who was known as an "angel" to all firemen and police. Several thousand dollars were spent by the woman who gave sandwiches and coffee to tired firemen and policemen at parades, large fires and other disasters.

WPA Job Cut Order to Tax Relief in City

Clients on Projects to Be Reduced to 6,900 by July 1.

District Officials Facing Aid Demands With Depleted Funds.

District relief officials were confronted yesterday with the prospect of a more rapid increase in applications for relief than at any time since public relief reached the peak.

The prospective increase in the relief load was brought about by a recent order from Federal works officials to cut down the number of relief clients on local WPA projects to a maximum of 6,900 by July 1.

This order was in conformity with similar orders sent to State relief and works administrators throughout the country. It apparently put an end to hopes of local relief officials that the number on local relief would be further reduced by assignment of additional eligible employables to such jobs.

There are now 8,587 relief clients on local WPA projects. This number must be cut down to 6,900. Inasmuch as those holding these jobs had formerly been eligible for relief it is assumed a majority, if not all, will again become eligible for relief when they are fired.

At the beginning of March there were 9,102 cases receiving actual relief payments. These cases included 30,262 persons. These are excusive of relief clients assigned to WPA jobs.

Mass System In Relief Work Draws Attack

Mass methods of administering relief were criticized yesterday as "at best temporary and only a palliative" by Dr. Esther L. Richards, psychiatrist at Johns Hopkins University, before the annual meeting of the Travelers Aid Society at the Y. W. C. A.

Emphasizing the need of the trained social workers approach to the problem of relief, Dr. Richards argued that "relief should not be considered as door-to-door distribution of Thanksgiving baskets."

"The real objective of relief should be diagnostic treatment of individuals," she continued. "Relief is no help unless combined with a philosophy emphasizing responsibility as well as rights."

"No law can escape the fate of poor administration somewheres," she added. "It is unsound efficiency to expect other bodies than those specially trained for the service to undertake the task."

Citing that the insanity rate was greatest among youths from 15 to 25 years of age, she emphasized that youth in particular required the individual, not mass approach of relief.

Other speakers were Bertha McCall, of New York, executive secretary of the National Association of Travelers Aid; Mrs. Mary Ford and Mrs. Bernice Manwaring, executive secretary and registrar of the Washington branch. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone was chairman.

Want Husband? Youth on Block For $5,000 Job

WILLIAM L. WOMACH.

Is there any woman in Washington between 18 and 32 who wants a husband badly enough to pay $5,000 a year for him?

If so, she should get in touch immediately with William L. Womach at the District of Columbia Hotel, 816 K street northwest. He may not be living there after tomorrow for his funds are low.

Womach, a ruddy-complexioned product of Des Arc, Ark., who is 22 and jobless, stipulates that he wants no handout. The five grand must be in the form of a job. He really wants work, he says.

The reason for this provision is that he is tired of being on the loose. He wants to settle down.

He is not so particular about the nature of the employment. He is qualified to run an elevator, drive a car, watch a door and hop to a bell, all of which he has done in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Omaha and other places. It would depend on what his future wife needs.

If she happens to have a radio station, he could give his "Hillbilly Philosopher" skit with which he entertained Detroit fans. It was this experience on the air which led him to New York in hope of getting on Maj. Bowes' amateur hour. Failing in this, he came to Washington.

Womach's first bargain was for $10,000 a year. But when the unanimous reaction in The Post city room was "who wouldn't?" he halved his demands.

Congregational Choir To Give Lenten Concert

Under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl, the First Congregational Church Choir A Capella will give its sixth annual Lenten concert Monday night in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. The organization of 60 mixed voices will be heard in a program of religious music appropriate to the season. Solo obbligati will be sung by Mrs. Stahl, Dorothy Wilson Halbach, Don Waite and Dale Hamilton.

Among the compositions listed are Bach's "Jesus, Priceless Treasure;" Palestrina's "Gloria Patri;" Grechaninov's "Nunc Dimittis" and "Gloria;" Holst's "Lullay, My Liking;" Arkhangelski's "Hear My Prayer;" Brahms' "Grant Unto Me the Joy of Thy Salvation;" Mabel Daniels' "Christmas in the Wood" and "The Christ Child;" Nikolski's "The Earth Is the Lord's," and Maud Sewall's "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee."

Tuberculosis 'Cases' Roam D. C. Streets

With public health items sharply reduced in the 1937 District supply bill that has passed the House, the campaign for adequate appropriations now veers to the Senate. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best public health conveniences in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

In an old brick building at 301 C street northwest there is a chest clinic. It is operated and maintained by the Health Department. So far as appropriations will permit, which is not very far, it is a valuable community asset.

Hitherto unpublished statistics obtained yesterday by The Post illustrate the clinic's impotence, due to the lack of personnel and equipment, which, in turn, is due to the denial of ample funds.

Findings of WPA Survey.

Information collected to date by WPA research workers, who have been conducting a tuberculosis case-finding campaign since November, indicates that:

There are approximately 4,000 "wild" cases of pulmonary tuberculosis which the clinic cannot account for.

Two of the clinic's former patients among those whose visits stopped before their cases were arrested have been traced to Chevy Chase homes, where they are employed as maids.

Other such "wild" cases have been located and found to be food handlers or employed in other capacities which make them infecting agents.

Records of 3,227 Checked.

Digging into musty files which go back as far as 1918, when the clinic was established, the researchers have to date examined records of 3,227 individuals who went to the clinic.

Out of this number, 849 who received "positive" diagnoses gave up clinical visits and faded from sight. Because there are only three nurses available for follow-up work, it is physically impossible for the Health Department to keep after every patient dilatory in his attendance.

It should be borne in mind that these nurses—there is a fourth one at the clinic, but she does no follow-up work—are responsible for clerical duties, correspondence, assistance in X-ray development and other tasks besides checkups in sufferers' homes.

4,000 New Patients Due.

This year the clinic will accommodate more than 4,000 new patients, who will make more than 18,000 visits. From 20 to 25 per cent of these individuals will be "positives," if the usual average is maintained.

For those who should be hospitalized, proper arrangements will be made—provided beds can be found for them. The others, those who may safely be taken care of in their homes, will be told how to deport themselves, what to do and what not to do. Clinic nurses are supposed to see that they follow instructions.

But three nurses for 4,000 patients—.

Blanton Defends D. C. Budget Cuts

Representative Thomas L. Blanton yesterday defended the budget slashes of the sub-committee on District appropriations in a 20-minute speech to the House.

He criticized the District Commissioners for reducing realty assessments $130,000,000 in two years and asserted that if they would raise the tax rate from $1.50 to $1.70, the District would have more money than it could spend in the next fiscal year.

To support his charge that realty assessments are not made on full valuation, he quoted at length the prices paid by the Government for various pieces of property in comparison with the realty assessments.

Theater's Most Distinguished Playwrights Now Busy on Motion Picture Scripts

Goldwyn Force Of Writers Is Notable Group

By Nelson B. Bell.

From time to time, we have rather more than hinted in this space that every department of motion picture production is on the upgrade; that there is a constant demand among the leaders in the film capital for better stories, better authorship, better acting and better material investiture. Occasionally—goody, goody!—a little evidence comes to light on our side! The most recent bit is from the United Artists studio, on behalf of Samuel Goldwyn, now whiling away a few vagrant weeks in Europe.

Eight films are to be produced by Goldwyn between May 1 and the close of the coming season, constituting the most ambitious program ever undertaken in the entire span of the producer's career. Four of the scripts are expected to be ready upon his return from abroad next month.

With the production program for the current season completed, the next season's schedule definitely set, the screen writers under contract to Goldwyn are at the peak of their activity. It is interesting to note who some of these screen writers are.

Playwrights All.

Jane Murfin is making the final revisions on her scenario of "Come and Get It," the Edna Ferber saga of the Northwest lumber industry, which will star Edward Arnold, with Virginia Bruce and Francis X. Shields. Miss Murfin you will recall not only as an independent playwright of notable achievement, but also as collaborator with Jane Cowl in several of her most successful works, among them "Smilin' Thru."

W. P. Lipscomb, on loan to Goldwyn from Twentieth Century Century-Fox, is nearing completion of his screen treatment of "Hurricane," the South Seas yarn by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty." It is the expectation to film this subject in color in the South Seas against the actual backgrounds described by the authors. Mr. Lipscomb, you may not need to be reminded, is a distinguished man of letters, who came to this country for specific treatments of certain subjects of which he knew most, and has remained here since, fascinated by the cinema as it manifests itself in the studios of Hollywood.

Howard Adapting Own Play.

Sidney Howard is now in New York at work on the screen version of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Dodsworth," which he dramatized for the stage and in which Walter Huston will play his original role, with Ruth Chatterton in the part of Mrs. Dodsworth. Mr. Howard, a Pulitzer prize-winner, is one of the most prolific and most successful of contemporary playwrights. To list his recent successes, in addition to "Dodsworth," would be to catalogue a considerable proportion of the most worthy dramas of the past few years.

Sam and Bella Spewack, authors of the current Broadway comedy hit, "Boy Meets Girl"—and numerous other plays of earlier seasons—are now working on their screen play of "The Princess and the Pauper," in which Miriam Hopkins is slated to star.

If the new Goldwyn schedule of releases does not meet with the public favor which it would seem, in advance, to deserve, certainly it will not be due to the dramaturgic tinkering of a group of amateur writers unfamiliar with the uses and the requirements of the playhouse. A more distinguished roster than that listed above hardly could be assembled.

June Knight, that radiant young singer and dancer who is booked to headline next week's stage bill at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow, arrived in the Capital late yesterday afternoon and was met at Union Station by a delegation of Warner executives and newspaper representatives. Miss Knight, who has just concluded a successful engagement in "Jubilee," will be feted at the Carlton this afternoon between the hours of 3 and 6 p. m. when those of us who found it impossible to reach the deppo at the appointed hour yesterday will be privileged to make the acquaintance of one of the contemporary stage's most attractive young artistes.

"All marionette groups in the District of Columbia are urged to get in touch immediately with Robert Warfield, supervisor of the District of Columbia Marionette Project of the WPA Federal Theater.

"Workrooms of the local marionette project are in the basement of the Research Building, Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

"All interested persons are urged to contact Mr. Warfield there, or at the Federal Theater Project offices in the McLean Building, Fifteenth and I streets northwest."

Such is the slightly mandatory bulletin that comes to the drama desk with the curt pronouncement that it is for "immediate release." Is this immediate enough, Mr. Warfield?

So the postman rings once and leaves a gaily-hued postage card, depicting the colorful enticements of the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun Club, at Miami Beach, Fla. It is postmarked at Miami Beach, March 9, 6 p. m., and on its face bears this message: "The moon is still over Miami. Regards from the Morgans and the Bergers." That would be Joe and Mary Morgan and Rudy and Grace Berger. Joe was formerly general manager of the Crandall Theaters, now the Warner houses, in Washington, and Rudy is Washington Branch Exchange manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

There is only one thing that worries me a little. As I look at the hand-written greeting, I am not sure that it doesn't say, "The moan is still over Miami." But they may not have received their hotel bills yet, at that!

The Amateurs Are Coming.

A week from tomorrow another of Maj. Bowes' amateur units will occupy the stage of the Earle Theater, making the fourth, I think, that will have played the National Capital since the good major began organizing his Amateur Radio Theater of the Air into traveling vaudeville companies.

An advance emissary of the group coming to town on Friday, March 20, informs me that this is the No. 2 unit, one of the aces in the entire Bowes organization. It has been on tour, intact, since last July; has toured all over the Eastern and Southern United States and the principal cities of Canada, and at every stand has played to capacity business and has been immediately booked back into many for repeat dates.

Like Professionals.

I am told that the ten acts comprising this itinerant vaudeville show have "settled" themselves into a smooth-running and practically professional company that really "puts on a show."

Perhaps more important than the veteran aspects of this troupe is the fact that it omits turns of a nature that might give the impression of being merely imitative of the others that have preceded it to local stages from the same source. There are said to be some fine voices among the principals and several novelties that no others of the major's groups are able to boast.

The only disturbng note is that among those present are another band of those inevitable Jersey cowboy outfits — this time from Passaic!!

In response to numerous inquiries, the management of Loew's Fox Theater announces that Jack Benny, headlining the vaudeville portion of the new week's bill, barring acts of God and the public enemy, positively will appear at every scheduled performance throughout the week beginning tomorrow and ending next Thursday night. This public anxiety evidently is occasioned by the recollection that on his last personal visit to Washington, Benny made no appearances on Sunday, returning to New York on that day for his Sunday night broadcast. On this occasion the broadcast will be made at 6:55 p. m., from the auditorium of the National Press Club and no personal appearance at the Fox will be omitted.

Incidentally, Publicist Raymond Bell—no relation—of the Loew interests in Washington, is up to his old tricks, which, for a time, seemed to have passed into the limbo of negation with his distribution of thermometers prior to the opening of Mae West's "Klondike Annie." When we returned from dinner last evening, a large bundle containing six packages of the six flavors of Jell-o reposed on the drama desk, with a note advising that, for six flavors of entertainment all rolled into one man, we see Jack Benny. One begins to mistrust that Mr. Benny may be on the Jell-o radio hour

Home-Breakers Note.

Boy, my chef's cap and ladle. Let's see what kind of glutinaginous business we can make out of this funny looking stuff!

And if there isn't any such word as "glutinaginous," there probably will be by the time we get through!

Picture Yourself in a Scene Like This

Here is a scene showing actual production of a movie in Hollywood. Basil Rathbone and Aline McMahon are the stars being "shot." Visualize yourself in their places, for that's exactly what will happen to talented young Washingtonians who win places in the all-local production, "It Happened in Washington," soon to be filmed here under the sponsorship of Loew's Fox Theater and The Washington Post.

Young Washingtonians to Act In Movie to Be Produced Here

Full Staff of Hollywood Film Experts Coming Here to Make Picture; Great Opportunity Offered Local Talent Between 16 and 21.

Ever tell your best girl or boy friend that you could show up Clark Gable or Myrna Loy if you had the chance?

The if is out.

The Washington Post and Loew's Fox Theater are going to give you your chance if you are between the ages of 16 and 21. And you don't have to go to Hollywood either.

Hollywood is coming to Washington.

That is, a Hollywood director is coming here and bringing with him a complete staff of technicians, including cameramen, sound experts, lighting engineers, make-up artists and everything that is necessary in the marking of an all-talking motion picture.

Production on this all-local "talkie" is scheduled to start within a week or so. Later, the film will be shown at Loew's Fox Theater for a full week and then will be sent to Hollywood where it will be screened before screen executives who are always in search of new material. This is no invitation to go to Hollywood. No promises are made or implied that any member of the cast selected will be placed under contract. Rather, it is an invitation to get a real taste of movie-making, to see oneself in pictures, to hear one's own voice speaking from the screen, to work under a Hollywood director with a Hollywood production staff in full action.

This local film will be titled "It Happened in Washington" and will have a high school theme. It is a story of average day of high-school life and students of the city schools are especially invited to try out for parts. The scenario will have parts for more than 200 young men and women. Ten will be assigned to leading parts, 15 to "bit" parts and the balance to "extra" roles.

Actual production will not start until a definite cast has been selected and locations, where the film is to be photographed, determined.

And now for the details:

(1) Anyone between the ages of 16 and 21, inclusive, who is a resident of Washington or vicinity, is eligible and may apply for a part.

(2) Casting starts tomorrow at 3 p. m. and will be continued for a full week.

(3) No experience is required to apply.

(4) All persons desiring an opportunity to try-out may do so by applying to Max Allentuck, casting director, in the Franklin room of the Ambassador Hotel between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock Friday afternoon and from 7 to 9 o'clock Friday evening.

A number of actors and actresses who have achieved stardom in the field world began their careers in small parts. Here's your chance of a lifetime. Don't fail to register at the casting director's office tomorrow.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, March 11.

CAROLE LOMBARD calls me into her dressing room and, as I sit on the couch, she says, "I believe I've a movie boner for you." Miss Lombard is wearing a beautiful silk nightgown, for a scene in the flicker she is making, and over the nightgown she has on a mink coat. Carole relates that in "Klondike Annie," the action of this Mae West picture is supposed to take place in the early 1890's. Yet when Victor McLaglen, the captain of the ship, is seen making his entries in the log book, the date line of every page says: "19——." Therefore, Mr. McLaglen, to put it mildly, was ahead of the time. And Carole Lombard is the latest actress to become a member of the Movie Boners' Club.

• • • •

The actor whose cravats O'Brien noticed is Warner Baxter, and the flicker is "The King of Burlesque." The scene is where Baxter is sitting at the bar after his show is a flop. Warner straightens his tie, which is a plain one. He then walks down the street with Jack Oakie, and when Baxter stops to talk confidentially, he is wearing a polka dot tie.

A member of the United States Marine Corps, who signs his letter, Private Duke de Palo, writes: "Throughout the entire picture, 'Professional Soldier,' Victor McLaglen was known as Col. Michael Donovan of the U. S. Marine Corps. Then in the final scene, after all the talk, we finally get to see McLaglen in his Marine uniform. And as he marches forth to be decorated by Freddie Bartholomew, I noticed that McLaglen had two silver bars on each shoulder. And after all that talk about him being Col. Michael Donovan. For he is wearing the insignia of a captain."

In the flicker "Transatlantic Tunnel," insists Winnie Branley, Richard Dix's wife goes for a ride with Dix's friend in an open roadster. Though they speed along the roads, the young lady's hair doesn't seem to be the least disturbed by the breeze, the considerate movies. "A boner occurs in 'It Had to Happen,' and only a taxi driver would see it," writes Raymond Arburzee. "In a sequence, Rosalind Russell gets out of a taxi without paying. That's something no one gets away with."

• • • •

The prisons in the year 1865 were modernly equipped, if we are to believe the flicker "Shark Island," says Pill Morelli. For in that picture, when Warner Baxter is making his escape, the very latest spotlights are used to try to discover Baxter.

While this movie fan complains because the movies are too advanced, Charles Vogt complains because they are not. In "Rose Marie," he writes, "the mounted police are shown dashing around the country on horseback, notwithstanding the fact that they use motorcycles, automobiles and airplanes. But, regardless, a Northwest Mountie always gets his woman.

• • • •

Donald Woods in the flicker "Road Gang" plays the role of James Larrabee, a reporter, and picks up a newspaper containing his expose of a politician. "The top headline on the front page," claims Jean Fulker, "reads, 'Lindstrom Makes Bid for Mat Title' . . . Woods is framed and railroaded, and spends months in a Southern road gang. He is finally released after exposing the horrors of the road gang . . . The main headline then reads, 'Governor Pardons Larrabee' . . . But on the very top of the paper, in the same position as before, the headline reads, 'Lindstrom Makes Bid for Mat Title.'" Well, you can't blame Lindstrom for keeping on trying. Preston Foster in "We're Only Human," is seen entering a gangster's hideout with one gun which can contain only six bullets, writes Vic Caruso. Foster engages in a pistol fight in which he kills two men, using from four to eight bullets. Yet when Foster goes upstairs to get the last gangster, he opens his gun and there are still six bullets in it. In the movies a gun is an arsenal for every hero.

• • • •

Olivia de Haviland is on Errol Flynn's ship, rescued by him after she has been captured by the other pirates in the flicker, "Captain Blood." Miss de Haviland is shown in one sequence on the boat, insists June Radewagen, wearing a beautiful nightgown. Since when, asks June, do pirates carry ladies' clothes on their boats? Ever since censorship, pirates must be prepared to present any cargo that they may pick up, decently.

They tell me that the "quickie" producers now put movie boners in their pictures purposely, hoping to gain attention and publicity.

New Gershwin Folk Opera to Lead New Week

"Porgy and Bess" Comes to National to Compete With Ace Films.

"Porgy and Bess," the folk-opera by DuBose Heyward and George Gershwin, with lyrics by Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin, which comes to the National Theater for a week's engagement beginning next Monday night, follows the pattern of "Porgy," the play by DuBose and Dorothy Heyward, fashioned from the former's novel and produced by the Theater Guild eight years ago. In spite of definite omissions, the most engaging dramatic episodes have been retained in the libretto. These have been intensified, according to all report, by Gershwin's score, the music and songs springing spontaneously from the plot foundation. The principal roles in an all-Negro cast are sung by Todd Duncan, former Howard Univesity professor, and Anne Brown, supported by Buck and Bubbles, Abbie Mitchell, Georgette Harvey and scores more.

Jack Benny, one of the ace comedians of stage, screen and radio, will appear in person on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater as headliner of the vaudeville bill, beginning tomorrow. He will be assisted by Mary Livingstone and other members of his radio broadcast hour. Others on the revue program will be Georges Metaxa, romantic singer; the Llazeed Arabian Troupe and the Stewart Morgan Dancers. The screen feature for the new week will be "The Voice of Bugle Ann," a homely story of the Missouri hill country, in which the principal roles are played by Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Eric Linden and Spring Byington.

Co-starred for the first time since "Morocco," her first American picture, Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper will occupy the screen at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The picture concerns a young American, vacationing in Spain, and a beautiful young woman, also whiling away the time in travel. A distinguished cast supports the co-stars, including John Halliday, Ernest Cossart, Alan Mowbray and William Frawley. The stage portion of the entertainment will be headlined by June Knight, beautiful blonde dancer, direct from her recent engagement in "Jubilee." Others on the bill include the Three Wier Brothers, from the Paris Folies Bergere: Paul Tio, wonder bird, and the Four Antelaks.

• • • •

"The Walking Dead" is the ominous title of the major screen feature of the bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. The stellar, and title, role is played by that master of "horror drama," Boris Karloff, supported by Ricardo Cortez, Marguerite Churchill, Barton MacLane, Edmund Gwenn and Warren Hull.

• • • •

Apparently embarked upon another of their prolonged runs on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will continue a second week in their latest dancing hit, "Follow the Fleet." They are supported by Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard and a long and competent cast.

• • •

Myrna Loy, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow comprise the triumvirate whose presence in the cast has spelled such sure success for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Faith Baldwin's story of "Wife Versus Secretary" that it will be continued on the screen at Loew's Palace through next week. May Robson and George Barbier are among the foremost of the supporting players.

• • •

"Arrowsmith," United Artists' picturization of the Sinclair Lewis novel, with Ronald Colman, Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy in the pivotal roles, opens its regular run, in revival, on the screen at the Belasco Theater today.

• • •

"The Prisoner of Shark Island," that grim biographical drama devoted to the life of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, one of the suspected conspirators in the death of President Abraham Lincoln, will resume its downtown run as chief screen feature at Loew's Columbia, beginning tomorrow. Warner Baxter appears in the title role.

• • • •

That Academy prize-winner, "The Informer," picturizing exciting events in Dublin during 24 hours of the Irish Rebellion, will be presented for a sixth week at the Little Theater.

• • • •

Diamond and Fay, the "kings of Floogle street," will make their reappearance at the Gayety at the usual Sunday matinee performance, and the week thereafter, as comedy stars of a new independent burlesque attraction. The feminine cast will feature Mlle. Renee, an importation from the Paris stage.

Culbertson on Bridge

Close co-operation on defense is an extremely subtle art. Signals are not the blatant devices most players think them. Expertly used, they resemble a polished phrase, a sparkling epigram, conveying a wealth of meaning in a minimum of words.

The great delusion of less-than-expert players is that signals should whenever possible, be of a positive nature, in other words, high cards to command a "come-on." It is quite the opposite.

In the hand shown below, North had no opportunity to signal for the suit he really wanted led. But, nevertheless, he was able to convey that request by implication.

NORTH

♦ A K 8 4
♣ 7 6

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 club	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T (final bid)

South, on lead, decided the best chance to defeat the contract was to avoid the risk of losing a trick by opening away from either of his fairly strong suits. Incidentally, it should be observed that his decision was shrewd, in that a low diamond lead, his orthodox opening, would have made nine tricks a "cinch" for the declarer.

He chose a club as less dangerous than a spade, since his spade ten might well be valuable. The seven of clubs was ducked in dummy and North made a simple but excellent play. He put on the deuce! The soundless of this play requires only a short analysis. South's even could not be a fourth highest, under the "rule of eleven," since three higher cards were in sight in dummy and two in North's hand. If not the fourth highest, it must be "top of nothing." Declarer then was marked with the queen and jack, and nothing could be gained by North's playing the nine. Something could, however, be lost. South might be tempted to think that he, North, had the club suit stopped with J 10 9 x, and continue it when actually a spade shift was urgently desired. And his message was not lost in transit. South, when he won the heart ace, gave no more thought to the club suit but promptly shifted to a spade. Since he held the two diamond controls, and led spades at every opportunity, the declarer was unable to get his ninth trick.

THAT MAN GABLE IS HERE AGAIN, GIRLS!
Dear Irene—
My heart's been beating faster than an Army drum at a parade ever since I saw that man Gable at the Palace in "Wife vs. Secretary." Clark is in the middle this time with Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow battling over his affections. Myrna looks stunning and she has to, being Clark's wife, and with Jean Harlow offering some alluring opposition as Clark's streamlined secretary.
I gulped, sighed, chuckled and simply had a grand time watching this perfectly different story. That man Gable gets me—He'll get you, too!

Revolta and Picard Face Sarazen and Hines in Four-Ball Final

Cruickshank Armour Lose After Fight

MacFarlane, Klein Also Bow in International Golf Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI COUNTRY CLUB, Miami, Fla., March 11.—In another display of masterful golf, Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard, the 1935 winners, today defeated Willie MacFarlane and Willie Klein, 5 and 4, to enter the final in the twelfth annual $4,000 international four-ball matches.

Tomorrow, in 36 holes of play, they will contest for the $2,000 top prize with veteran Gene Sarazen and young Jimmy, Hines, who today rallied in the last three holes to oust Tommy Armour and Bobby Cruickshank, 1 up.

Out over this morning's first nine holes in 31, 5 under par, Revolta, the Milwaukee star who is reigning P. G. A. champion, and his Hersey (Pa.) teammate, went 4 up on MacFarlane, professional at Old Oaks, N. Y., and Klein, who divides his time between Wheatley Hills, Long Island, and Miami Beach.

Finish Safely.

After that, they were content to play it safe, posting conservative 34s for the second and third nines to maintain their margin and picking up one more hole in the last five of the match.

Meanwhile, "Farmer" Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Hines, who hails from Garden City, Long Island, were furnishing fireworks throughout the 36 holes on their ding-dong battle with the veteran Scotchmen, Armour, of Boca Raton, Fla., and Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va.

Turning this morning 3 up as Sarazen's putter clicked and the Scotchmen failed to get their green shots down, the victors saw their margin cut to two holes on the back nine.

Three down after Sarazen's birdie 3 took the twentieth, they got 1 back at the twenty-second when Cruickshank drilled an iron 150 yards dead to the pin for the needed birdie 3.

Armour won the short twenty-fourth by chipping in from 20 feet off the green for a birdie 2 and sticking his tee shot at the 155th yard twenty-sixth 2 feet from the pin for another duce.

Three Holes Halved.

All square, they halved the next three holes in regulation figures. At the thirty-first Cruickshank ran down his six-footer for another winning birdie as Sarazen and Hines both missed green with their seconds and the sons of Scotland were one up.

The next two holes were halved but Sarazen and Hines, fast running out of holes, evened matters at the par five sixteenth, where Gene laid his third up 7 feet from the pin, studied his lie at length and ran it down.

Miller Is Offered $6,000 for D.C. Bout

Pete Reilly, manager of Featherweight Champion Freddy Miller, yesterday was wired an offer of $6,000 for the title holder to defend his crown against Pete Sarron on the police benefit boxing show to be held at Griffith Stadium in May. Reilly, en route by plane from Havana to New York, was expected to accept the offer upon his arrival in the North.

Although the date for the contest has been set for May 25, it is possible that the show will be moved up one week, to be held on May 18 to allow the holding of a milk fund fight a few weeks later and before the Max Schmeling-Joe Louis bout in June. Marty Gallagher and Bob Tow are being sought for the milk fund bout, which probably will be held early in June.

Miss Hemphill Winner Over Mrs. Crews

By the Associated Press.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 11.—Rallying brilliantly on the home nine, Kathryn Hemphill won an upset victory over Medalist Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, 2 up, today in the Belleair Women's Golf tournament.

Mrs. Crews was leading, 3 up, as they reached the twelfth tee, but the Columbia, S. C., girl suddenly came to life to win the twelfth and thirteenth holes. They halved 14 and 15, then a momentary lapse on 16 cost Mrs. Crews the lead.

Following up her comeback, Miss Hemphill laid Mrs. Crews a dead stymie to win 17 and rolled in a 30-foot putt on 18 to complete the conquest.

Smart Golf.

The national champion, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, played smart golf to down Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., 6 and 4.

Other quarter-final matches went 19 holes. Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., defeated Sylvia Annenberg, of Flushing, Long Island, and Mrs. Marian Turpie Lake, of New York, ousted Mrs. Mark McGarry, of St. Petersburg.

Two down and two to play, Mrs. Lake won 17 and 18 with 5s and followed with a winning birdie 4 on the extra hole.

Harris Lays Stress on Defense

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 11.—Their daily workout this morning found the Nats knee-deep in defensive strategy as Manager Bucky Harris sought corrective measures for their slovenly play of last season.

While the regular infielders and outfielders cut them down with rifle throws and sure-handling of the ball on the base lines, Harris' rookies, pressed into service as base runners, ran the bases until their tongues literally dangled from panting throats.

Employing his rookies as base-running guinea pigs while his infielders experimented with run-down plays on runners trapped between bags, Harris saw his rookie third baseman, Buddy Lewis, justify his fondest hopes.

Young Lewis, belying his brief career in organized baseball, showed a deal of native instinct in cutting down the runners with a minimum of handling of the ball. Harris worries on that point were completely eradicated.

Trains Stars.

But the individual feature of the drill was provided by Shortstop Cecil Travis, who entered for the first time upon his new duties as the relay man on all balls thrown from the outfield. Taking up the correct position in short left center or rightfields, as the occasion demanded, Travis intercepted all throws nicely, wheeled neatly and threw to the bases with great dispatch and accuracy.

Owner Clark Griffith, like Harris, was impressed by Travis' performance. "Joe Cronin" has the best relaying arm I ever saw" said Griffith. "It is not only the most powerful, but the most accurate. He can get that ball into a base better than any man I ever saw. And Travis is second best. He's got one of those steel arms like Cronin's and he can move the ball to a spot."

At the end of the workout Travis came in for nly one criticism by Bucky Harris, who in his salad days on the field, was one of the cleverest strategists at handling the ball.

"Cecil needs only to use some deception," said the Nats' Manager. "With a man on first base and a hit into right field by the batter, Travis naturally goes into short right to take the throw from the right fielder. If the right fielder thinks he can hold the man on first to one base advance, he'll throw to third of course. Usually the man on first will try for two bases on that kind of a hit and if the throw is made to third the hitter is likely to try to get to get to second. It's up to Travis in that case to throw up his hands anyway and make it look as if he's going to take the throw. If the hitter rounding first sees him in that position, he will hardly dare to take an extra base."

The veteran Ossie Bleuge was no drawback to Harris in the strategical drill. Bleuge showed Young Lewis more things about tagging runners and taking throws at third than even Harris could have pointed out to the rookie.

W. Va. Blasts Pittsburgh Hopes in Real Thriller

Morgantown, W. Va., March 11 (AP).—West Virginia's Mountaineers blasted Pitt's hopes for an undisputed claim to the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball Conference title, defeating the Panthers, 43 to 42, tonight.

The loss throws Pitt in a tie with Carnegie Tech for the conference leadership, and a play-off will be needed. Pitt beat West Virginia in a title play-off last year.

With 30 seconds to go, Barna sank one from near the center of the floor to tie the count at 42-42. Roderick fouled Phares and the little Mountaineer scored from the free line to win the game three seconds before the gun cracked.

Brown Captains Gallaudet.

Norman Brown, star end of the Gallaudet football team, was unanimously elected captain of the 1936 eleven at a meeting of lettermen. A two-letter winner, Brown, is one of the most popular men on the campus.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.

SIX months hence, maybe sooner, this department may be shopping around for a cast-iron stomach with which to help digest these words, but right now I submit that Washington is going to have a swell ball team when the firing starts in the American League pennant race come April 13.

POVICH.

The crew that Bucky Harris is grooming down here needs but a break in the luck to find itself with both feet in the flag scramble, methinks. For two seasons now the Nats have had a lot of luck—all bad. It set a new record for consecutive injuries in 1934, and in 1935, poor as it pitching was, the luckless Washington hurlers saw much of their work undermined by ragged base running and butter-fingered handling of the ball by their mates. A balancing of the scales is in order.

To mention the Nats, as currently constituted, in the same breath with the Red Sox and Tigers as pennant contenders is overdrawing the idea, I know. But as I perceive it, the Nats of 1936 will bear no more relation or resemblance to those teams of 1934 and 1935 than I do to Gary Cooper, which, I think, is one way of putting it emphatically.

There's going to be fight on the Washington ball club, and speed, and an esprit de corps that would do justice to the king's guards. Fellows like Jesse Hill and Buddy Lewis and Buck Newsom, fire-eating lads who are consumed with the spirit of making good, are going to perk up this ball team which already boasts such willing battlers as Buddy Myer, Jake Powell and Earl Whitehill, who were carrying the load alone last season.

It's not in the books for the Nats' pitching to be as impossible as it was in 1935, when the club's hurlers wasted a grand team batting average of .285. Earl Whitehill, who couldn't beat the Ellipse A. C. in the spring and summer, miraculously recovered his form in the fall and Ed Linke was in the same category. The team will have the benefit of the continued presence of Buck Newsom, who did not join them until late in May and thereafter was out of the box for six weeks with a broken leg, and there are a couple of other encouraging items.

Jimmy DeShong, who was overlooked by the Yankees as a starting pitcher last year, will qualify as a regular performer with the Nats or all signs here are shamefully lying. And if Harris does not salvage one regular from the pair of aged rookies, Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver, he is building himself up here for a terrific letdown. And young Dick Lanahan and the equally youthful Henry Coppola are regarded down here with an admiration that approaches reverence.

I am asking no further questions about Cecil Travis' ability as a shortstop. I'm out on the limb with the idea that he's the slickest guy at the position since Joe Cronin was the sensation of the big leagues. And Travis' replacement at third base, young Buddy Lewis, is meeting every demand of the position. He has to hit but .275 to give the club swell protection at that post.

But it's the speed of this ball club that appeals to me. When Bucky Harris turns loose such guys as Jake Powell, Jesse Hill, Buddy Myer, Dee Miles and Travis and Lewis any lapse by the opposition, in fact, anything but the best kind of a throw is going to cost 'em plenty. I know they can't steal first base, but every other bag on the diamond, is at their mercy.

In Short——

To Trainer Mike Martin goes the credit for the amazing form reversal of young Henry Coppola who a week ago was complaining of a sore arm and merely lobbing the ball to the plate . . . after several ministrations to the arm, Martin found nothing amiss and diagnosed Coppola's trouble as a mental complex . . . "Listen, young fellow," Martin told him, "there's nothing the matter with your arm. If you don't get out there and pitch, you're apt to find yourself working with a pick and shovel instead of in the big leagues" . . . Coppola, thoroughly scared, put everything he had on the ball and is the current sensation among the pitchers here . . . 42-year-old Alec McColl is a salary holdout with the Chattanooga club . . . Joe Engel, Chattanooga president, who offered Dizzy Dean $15,000 to meet him in the prize ring, hopes Dean accepts the match . . . All Chattanooga is peeved at Dean since his runout from a scheduled charity game there last fall, and, Engel, a 6-foot-2-inch 220-pounder, would stage the bout in the Chattanooga ball park at 3 bucks a head . . . Engel, who visited Griffith here today in an effort to wean some of the Nats' rookies away from the club, noted Owner Joe Cambria, of Albany, who is here for the same purpose, and sniffed suspiciously . . . Engel maintains that young Dick Lanahan, the Chattanooga graduate, is among the three best pitchers now with the Nats.

Hitler Plans Best of All Olympics

Takes Great Care to See That Games Surpass All in History.

By Gayle Talbot.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

BERLIN, March 11.—Regardless of the effects of past or present developments on Germany's relations with other countries, the Nazi regime of Adolf Hitler has planned, honestly and meticulously, to present to the world next August the greatest set of Olympic games in history.

The Germans have spared neither ingenuity, expense nor imagination in building an athletic plant eclipsing anything heretofore constructed in any sports capital. The entry list for the summer sports is a record-breaker. Short of another World War, against which all diplomatic fingers are crossed, the world's best athletes will perform here in a domestic atmosphere calculated to spread nothing but sweetness and light.

No Discrimination.

Despite a tendency in some quarters to "rock the boat," official Germany has banned racial or religious discrimination in athletics, at least for the time being. The famous girl fencer of Jewish extraction, Helene Mayer, has been welcomed back home and named to represent Germany in the Olympics. Visiting Jews, whether athletes or spectators, will be safer from indignities here than they would be on any New York subway during rush hour.

Olympic leaders, headed by Dr. Theodor Lewald, aged president of the German Olympic committee, have sought to eliminate any trace of anti-Semitism in Berlin. They accomplished generally the removal from walls and windows of little stickers bearing the fanciful portrait of a Jew, with the legend: "He who buys from a Jew is the enemy of

Sabo, Perryman Let Out by Nats

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.—The ax fell upon the rookie talent in the Washington camp for the first time today and lopped two catchers from the bulky squad.

Alex Sabo, the former Fordham football star who, as the property of the Albany club, was being appraised in the Nats' camp, was found wanting and returned to Manager Al Mamaux at Winter Garden.

Floyd Perryman, the early front-runner in the race for one of the reserve catching posts on the Washington team, also failed to impress Harris. Aggressive and alert, Perryman's unorthodox batting style reacted against his chances and he was sent to the Chattanooga club for further seasoning.

Surviving the first cut in the squad was young Huck Wynne, the prize Washington sandlotter, who has captured the fancy of both Harris and Owner Clark Griffith, eager to observe Wynne behind the bat under fire, Harris is retaining him for work in the exhibition games here.

Lewis, McAvoy Ready For Battle Tomorrow

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The light-heavyweight championship, which has been in a sad state of disrepute since the Jack Delaneys, Paul Berlenbachs and Jimmy Slatterys were plying their trade some years ago—remember how Maxie Rosenbloom and Bob Olin could empty any hall in less than the three minutes required by fire department regulations?—will recapture some of its former prestige when John Henry Lewis and Jock McAvoy meet in Madison Square Garden Friday evening.

Not since the peerless Joe Louis demolished Old Paolino Upside-down with a few well chosen blows just before Christmas has the Eighth avenue abbatoir had a sell-out for a pro fight; and Joe and the Basque were share-croppers, since their performance was Mike Jacobs' promotion and the Garden was merely the landlord upon this occasion. But the Lewis-McAvoy thing is one of Ringmaster James Joy Johnston's productions, and from the looks of the advance sale many of the late-arriving patrons will be turned away.

Both Give Promises.

The champ, Lewis, promises to belt the Britisher silly, while the cocky, hard-hitting McAvoy is equally certain that he'll dump the colored 175-pound king for keeps long before the fifteenth and final round. Pickle-Pussed Jock will be a slight favorite in the betting, but more than a little of the wise money has already been placed on the titlist to retain his honors. All of which is very confusing to an astigmatic expert like ourselves who is trying to pick the readers a winner. However, we'll just shut our eyes, stick a pin in the program and predict without fear or favor that the Limey will hand John Henry a pasting.

Just how Jock is going to do this we wouldn't attempt to explain. Lewis is taller and rangier than the Britisher, he is a stylish boxer and he can punch with the best of 'em. But we still believe in miracles and McAvoy seems to be one of those miracle men. He is a trickster and feats of legerdermain have always awed simple souls like ourselves. A lot of folk didn't believe Jock would beat Babe Risko, the middleweight champion. But he stiffened the Babe with a bit of hokus pokus as old as the hills.

Hoya's Spring Program Is Lengthy

A LENGTHY and diversified spring sports schedule of 42 events will keep Georgetown University's teams busy for the next couple of months. H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager, announced the complete program last night.

The season will open officially April 8 when Western Maryland invades the Hilltop for a ball game. Both baseball and golf teams will invade the South for brief tours this year. Track prospects at the Hilltop are so dismal the thin-clads will run in only the Penn Relays.

Prospects for a winning season in baseball are exceptionally bright, inasmuch as Coach Ralph McCarthy has a large squad of promising sophomores under his wing, but the reverse is true in other sports. Both tennis and golf squads were riddled by graduation, and these teams must be rebuilt from the ground up.

Baseball.

April 8, Western Maryland; 13, at Duke (two games); 14, at North Carolina; 15, at Wake Forest; 16, at Guilford; 17, at Elon; 23, at Maryland; 30, West Virginia. May 2, Maryland; 6, at Navy; 7, Guilford; 8, Wake Forest; 12, Elon; 14, W. and L.; 15, North Carolina.

Golf.

April 11, Florida; 15, at North Carolina State; 16, at Wake Forest; 18, at W. and L.; 25, at Navy.

May 1, Cornell; 2, Penn State and Pittsburgh; 9, Princeton and Pennsylvania (at Princeton); 14, W. and L.; 15 and 16, intrasection play-off at Greenwich, Conn.

Tennis.

April 22, at Maryland; 28, Johns Hopkins.

May 1, New York University; 5, W. and L.; 8, at Bucknell; 9, at Cornell; 12, V. P. I.; 15, West Virginia; 19, Catholic U.; 21, Temple; 29, Pittsburgh.

Missouri Valley Team Beats New York Five

New York, March 11 (AP).—Like true champions, the McPherson (Kans.) Oilers, Missouri Valley A. A. U. basketball title holders, came from behind in the closing minutes to defeat a surprisingly strong New York All-Star college five, 45 to 43, in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Trailing from the time Leo Merson, of Long Island University's unbeaten team dropped in one from far down the court in the first minute, the Oilers dazzled some 7,000 fans with their basketball wizardy in the last eight minutes.

Second Table Tennis Tourney Is Scheduled

The second annual District of Columbia table tennis championships will get under way a week from next Monday in the Continental ballroom of Wardman Park Hotel, it was announced by the D. C. T. T. A. last night. Elias Schuman will defend his title.

Consisting of five events—men's singles, women's singles, veterans' singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles—the tournament is to be conducted in strict conformity with rules laid down by the national body.

Entries will be accepted until next Thursday by Nathan Sameth at 1911 Eye street northwest.

Lane Upset by Lynch In Squash Title Play

In the only upset last night in the first annual District of Columbia A. A. U. squash racquets championships now in progress at the Central "Y" courts, Hugh Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, outlasted C. T. Lane, second seeded player, 3 games to 2.

Entering the semifinal round along with Lynch were Jim Gibson and E. B. Brownell, who scored victories over Farand Flowers and Bud Markey, respectively.

Pete Bostwick Rides Uncanny to Victory

Cheltenham, England, March 11 (AP).—G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, American amateur jockey, rode his own horse, Uncanny II, a 10-to-1 shot, into second place in the Lansdown handicap, a 2-mile hurdle today. Uncanny II finished a length and a half back of H. Hedges' Bulandar.

Engel Has Praise for Lanahan; Wynne Eager for Game Today

(This is another in a series of stories from the Nationals' training camp at Orlando, Fla., written by Huck Wynne, Washington sandlotter whose trial is being financed by The Washington Post.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 11.—I rode back to the hotel from the ball park today with Mr. Griffith and Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga team. When Mr. Griffith told Engel that I used to catch Dick Lanahan on the sandlots in Washington, he appeared interested.

Engel said a lot of nice things about Lanahan. He told me that Dick did a rare thing when he jumped right from the sandlots into the Southern Association and made good in his first season.

"There aren't many young pitchers who could do that," Engel said, "but Lanahan not only made good—he was just about the best young pitcher in the league when we turned him over to Washington last fall."

According to Engel, he never saw a young pitcher who brought such experience and coolness into organized baseball, especially to a Class A league, that Lanahan did. He said Dick acted like a big leaguer from the moment they put him in his first ball game.

I thought that was a pretty good compliment to the Washington sandlots.

All the rookies down here are on edge tonight. Bucky Harris is going to stage that six-inning ball game between the Yannigans and the regulars tomorrow and we'll all find ourselves in the line-up. The word has gone around pretty thoroughly that we'll either make or break our chances in these early exhibition games. Here's one fellow who is going to be in there trying.

News From Major League Training Camps

Dodgers to Try Hitch-Hiker; Bees Seek Dean; Walkers Are Stars for Yanks

By the Associated Press.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 11.—Jim Sullivan, a New York boy who attended Bill Terry's baseball school, but didn't win a minor league diploma won himself a tryout with the Dodgers today after reaching camp by the hitch-hike route.

Casey Stengel put the 19-year-old pitcher to the hill with the bases full and none out. He retired the Yannigans without a hit in that inning, although two runs scored on an error, and gave only one single in three innings.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11 (AP).—President Bob Quinn and Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Boston Bees, let it be known today they were ready to make a serious offer for Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, the Cardinals' eccentric holdout.

Convinced that the Cards would rather send Dean to the Bees than to any of their dangerous National League rivals, Quinn and his manager will go to Bradenton tomorrow to negotiate for the great righthander.

Bradenton, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Four Athletics pitchers gave the Cards only four hits today, but their wildness and three errors enabled the National Leaguers to win an exhibition baseball game, 9 to 8.

All the Cardinal hits came in the sixth inning when five runs were scored.

The American League club started strong and finished with five runs in the last two innings.

Avalon, Calif, March 11 (AP).—The National League Champion Cubs took their final intensive drill today before leaving Catalina Island, with Owner P. K. Wrigley looking on for the first time this season.

Wrigley reached the island last night. The workout included a little of everything and was one of the most satisfying of the training period. The squad will take a light drill tomorrow morning and will leave for the mainland shortly after noon to await the three-game series with the Chicago White Sox, which opens Friday.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11 (AP).—The Yankees' collection of Walkers, Fred (Dixie), his younger brother, Harry, and Leo, who is no relation to them, played some important parts in the camp game today as the regulars defeated the Yannigans in a full nine-inning contest. Dixie brought in the only Yannigan run; then Harry, playing right, had to stand by and watch George Selkirk's home-run clout sail over his head. Leo turned in a snappy fielding performance at third. Pat Malone, Ted Kelinhans and Spurgeon Chandler did the best pitching.

Pasadena, Calif., March 11 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox infield, a makeshift quartet most of the training season, lined up as it probably will at the start of the championship campaign and looked impressive.

Rinaldi Five to Oppose District College All-Stars Tonight

Heurich Gym Is Scene of Struggle

Scharr, C. U., in Action; 130-Pound Finals on Program.

COLLEGE stars will be on parade tonight at Heurich's gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest, where Rinaldi Tailors, challengers for the National A. A. U. basketball championship, will engage an all-star college team selected from George Washington, Maryland, Georgetown and Catholic University.

The game will start at 8:30.

In a preliminary game at 7:30, Northeast Boys Club and MacFarland Young Men's Club will clash in the finals of the 130-pound division of the District A. A. U. tournament.

With the campus talent injected into the proceedings, Rinaldi will consider itself fortunate if it comes out on top, despite the fact that the Tailors have added Hal Kiesel, George Washington's star center; Bernie Lieb, Catholic University captain, and Carroll Shore, well-known independent player, who recently recovered from an appendicitis operation.

Schmarr to See Action.

Hermie Schmarr, all-District selection and leading scorer, will be at one forward position for the Collegians, with Tommy O'Brien, George Washington University's famous "pot shot" artist, at the other.

Other collegians who will play are Ben Goldfaden, G. W.'s elongated forward; Tommy Nolan and Harry Bassin, of Georgetown; Bernie Buscher, all-District choice, and Knocky Thomas, of Maryland.

Rinaldi, which bowed to George Washington Freshmen Monday night in a stirring overtime A. A. U.-Post finals, will throw a new team into action. Kiesel will be at center. Lieb will be at forward with Bobby Lucas, and Shore and Ollie Tipton will start at guard. Sammy Hook, Bill Noonan, Cliff Keyser and Pickles Walker, who will make the trip to Denver, are almost certain to see service during the game.

Immediately after the battle with the Collegians, Rinaldi will leave for Colorado. Coach Davey Keppel also is making the trip.

Tonight's game is being staged to raise money to send a full team away. With the national championship opening Sunday, indications are that the District entry will draw a first round bye.

Denver, March 11 (AP).—Entry list in the National A. A. U. basketball tournament tonight reached 49 teams, three more than competed last year.

Among the latest to enter was the Rinaldi club, of Washington, D. C.

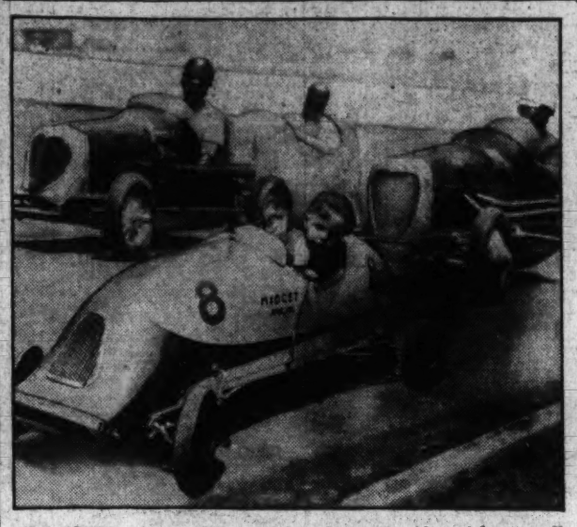
Midget Auto Racing, Bike Contests Planned For Stadium; Portable Track Will Be Used



Baby LeRoy, moom pitcher starlet, gives some idea of how small the midget cars are—if we are to believe this picture which shows the baby piloting one of the diminutive benzine buggies which may soon come to Washington.

Track to Be One-Sixth of Mile; George H. Long Promoting Venture.

By Bill McCormick.

MIDGET automobile racing, newest of the speed sports, will come to Washington this summer if plans of George A. Long, prominent speedway promoter, are carried out. Long hopes to stage not only midget races, but a national bicycle competition for school children, at Griffith Stadium.

Long, who was associated with the Altoona speedway, Culver City, Calif., plant and many others, has designed the only portable board track ever devised. To be built in sections, the track can be erected either as a fifth of a mile or sixth of a mile affair.

Griffith Stadium is not large enough to hold the larger track, but the sixth of a mile speedway could be laid down there. If Long is able to reach an agreement with those in control of the ball park, he will show his midgets and have his bicycle races here for one week—probably in June—then move on to Richmond and perhaps one other spot.

The fifth of a mile speedway is without straightaways. The running surface will be 24 feet wide with a 3-foot safety apron and a 12½-degree pitch on turns. The running surface will be capable of holding a speed up to 40 miles an hour, which is pretty fast for the little fellers. A guard rail faced with a steel band will encircle the running surface to protect spectators, none of whom will be allowed in the infield.

Long's plans call for the use of 140,836 board feet of lumber, 12,760 washers and 6,000 pounds of nails and spikes, which will give some idea of the sturdiness of the plant.

The track's sponsor feels that after the track is built on some other location and sawed into sections, it can be laid down in a new location in about four hours. The Culver City Speedway, in which more than 4,000,000 feet of lumber and 85 tons of spikes were used, was erected, a grandstand built, the whole business inclosed by wire fences and painted in 21 days, a record, but pointing the way to the fast work that can be done along that line.

The bicycle races which Long would hold in connection with the midget competition, will be open only to school children between the ages of 16 and 21. A national entry list would be sought, but it is felt that nothing comprehensive could be done along that line until next year, when elimination races will be held throughout the country.

Boys' Club Five Wins 115-Lb. Crown

TEN little players who never knew when to quit fighting last night won the 115-pound District A. A. U.-Washington Post basketball championship for the Washington Boys' Club.

The team: the Boys' Club Americans.

They defeated Northeast Boys' Club, 27-26, in a thrilling game that resulted in a five-minute extra period. The Americans led, 13-7, at the turn, but Northeast rallied and knotted the count just as the whistle blew, 23-all.

In the extra period, Shewbridge tossed in the winning point. Incidentally, he scored eight points to tie Reino, of Northeast, for high scoring honors.

Same Team Wins.

The same team that won the A. A. U. 100-pound championship at Tech High last year represented the Americans. Next year's goal is the 130-pound crown.

Bovello Plumbers, one of three teams entered by Anthony Bovello, local sportsman, entered the finals of the 145-pound championship by whipping Cooke's Flashes, 32-31.

Twin Oaks Black Hawks, defending 145-pound titleholders, eliminated Merrick Boys' Club, 33-25. The Hawks and Plumbers will clash tomorrow night at Heurich at 8:30 for the championship. Also tomorrow night the girls finalists, Typos and Sandy Spring, will meet, at 7:30.

Canoe Club Loses.

Profiting by Viana's 17 points, the Heurich Flashes whipped Washington Canoe Club, 42 to 37, last night in the Gordon Junior High gym in a Community Center Basketball League game.

Olympic Club Leads A.A.U. Fighters

BEFORE a crowd of 1,000 at Turner's Arena last night, the Olympic A. C. advanced, punch by punch, to a commanding position in the District A. A. U. championships. The Olympic organization, with four contestants qualified for the finals to be held Saturday night, needs only to win one championship to tie with the Jewish Community Center or Washington Boys Club, even if either of those organizations makes a clean sweep in all three of the title bouts in which they are participating.

Should the front-running club fail to win a single finals bout, either the Jewish Community Center or Washington Boys Club can capture the coveted trophy by making a clean sweep.

Last night's competition was perhaps as good as any amateur boxing ever seen in the District, with many of the bouts ending in sensational knockouts and even those that went the distance being featured either by fast and furious fighting or numerous knockdowns.

Steve Mamakos, Washington Boys Club 147-pounder, whose performance against Willie Wilkins provided a highlight for the opening night's competition, again stole the show by defeating game and willing little Bob Mathias in the best bout of the night.

Quarter-Finals.

Summaries:

135-pound class—H. Donn (N. E. B. C.), 133, won on knockout from W. Brass (O. A. C.), 129, Time, 30 seconds of third round. Mike Morton (Merrick), 134, won on a technical knockout from Roy Cromie (M. P. B. C.), 135, Time, 1:55 of second round. Leon Shub (J. C. C.), 134, won decision from El Brookman (M. P. B. C.), 134. Whitey France (Terminal Y. M. C. A.), won on forfeit from J. Corbie (Terminal Y. M. C. A.).

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, March 11.

Dear Al:

The Beat-Bill-Bennings, Pick-Your-Own Contest starts tomorrow. Here's a chance for all friends and enemies of Bennings, Inc., to try their hands at selecting the horses and at the same time try to win the three badges which will mean free admission to the entire Bowie meeting. There is nothing difficult about the contest. Each day a blank will be printed on this page. Just fill in the seven spaces with the seven horses you believe will win the races at Tropical Park. Mail your selections so that they will be postmarked before noon. The person having the best single day's record will be the winner. Remember, not the most winners during the contest, the most winners in one day. Everyone is eligible except employes of The Post and their families. You may select your horses in any manner. Handicap them, stab them with a pin or dream them, but start sending them in tomorrow. One set to a person each day and you will always have a chance. Clocker Mike is laying 10 to 1 that there isn't a Benningite alive who will pick seven. From now until the March 28 program, you pick them.

BILL.

First race—Creole Bird awoke to be second last out and can be depended upon to do some serious running now. Gets in this with only 107 pounds and I'm going to string along. Happy Flag, assigned top weight, will be dangerous under Coucci's handling. Relativity for the show.

Second race—Mixed Party has plenty of speed now and the mile route seems to suit. Alert handling at the start will give this one an excellent chance. Fervid, with Wright aboard, promises to be a factor. Ned's Affinity come off a promising effort and may be close.

Third race—Cebe seems most likely to graduate in this company. This is another Wright mount. Wise Run and Mauritius to take care of the others. Clocker Mike is partial to the last named.

Fourth race—The Hare, a recent winner, draws only 105 pounds tomorrow and will have Litzenberger for the riding. I see no reason for mistakes. St. Moritz and Knave to complete the money circle.

Fifth race—Credulous has a fighting chance to get home at sizeable odds in this field. I have reason to believe that this one will crack down tomorrow. Chance King is the one to beat. The Adrians entry of Red Badge and Round Table is due respect.

Sixth race—Bombastic, Galloping and Genesis is the way I prefer them in this test. I have tired of waiting for Stumptown to run his race which gives him a chance.

Seventh race—Fair Countess, with young Kastner in the saddle, may come through with that winning effort here. Top High and Tight Wad for the place and show.

Best bet—Credulous.

Seats for Opening Game On Sale at Stadium

Reserved seats for the opening baseball game of the season April 14 between New York and Washington, have been placed on sale at Griffith Stadium and may be procured during the day any time after 9 a. m. Secretary Eddie Eynon reports a liberal supply of good seats still available. Mail orders will be filled on a first come, first served basis.

Tow to Fight La Page in Chicago

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 10.—Bob Tow, Alexandria favorite son in the heavyweight boxing ranks, fights Lew LaPage, of Trenton, N. J., at Chicago Friday night for the championship of the Chicago "white hope" tourney. Tow entrained here last night.

Seventy-five baseball and 40 track aspirants are at work daily in the spacious George Washington High School gymnasium. Coach Maurice Givens is in charge of the two squads, assisted by Bob Garner.

Alexandria's Light Infantry basketball team and the Marine Reserves battle tomorrow night for the city military championship. The Guardsmen have won one game of the three-game series.

O'Hara to Attend Race Bill Hearing

Walter O'Hara, New England manufacturer and sportsman, will be a witness today at the hearing of the Norton bill to legalize horse racing with pari-mutuel betting in the District. O'Hara plans to build a $2,000,000 racing plant on the site of the old Benning track if the bill becomes a law. Maj. Henry Leonard, president of the American Remount Association; Harry Stringer, secretary of the National Thoroughbred Foundation, and J. W. Williams, Federation of Labor, are expected to testify in favor of the bill.

Civic and church organizations which have gone on record as opposed to the bill are expected to have representatives at the gathering.

The hearing will be a joint one presided over by Chairman Palmisano, of the Judiciary sub-committee of the House District Committee.

Big Red Wins Feature

Gentlemen Riders Have Innings; Brad Gains Second Money.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 11.—The featured spot on today's program was given over to the Flamingo Polo Club purse, a one mile claiming event with amateur riders performing. This unusual event attracted many Miami and Palm Beach socialites and the crowd was bolstered considerably by members of the fair sex.

It was not surprise when W. N. Adrians' 6-year-old gelding, Big Red, 4 to 5 favorite in the field of six platers, won by six lengths under the excellent handling of Carroll K. Bassett, one of the best amateur pilots in the country. Big Red, trained by Hirsch Jacobs, who saddled three winners the previous day and another in today's third race, carried 160 pounds and covered the mile in 1:42 2-5.

Brad, racing for B. Flaccus and ridden by Anderson Fowler, came from last place to take the place by a length and a half from A. G. Tarn's Wizard, which had Baylor O. Hickman in the saddle. The crowd got a laugh when it was announced that Wizard, already scheduled to carry 162 pounds, would carry two pounds overweight.

Sir Graeme Sinclair Lockhart, baronet, of Scotland and New Zealand, member of the Auckland Racing Club, poloists, hunts, world traveler, etc., was honorary steward for the race. Presentation of a trophy to the winning rider was made by Lady Lockhart.

There was considerable good natured bantering and "kidding" about the race, but it was almost a foregone conclusion with most of the crowd that Big Red couldn't lose with the well known steeplechase rider Bassett on his back; the advantage of being trained by Jacobs, leading American conditioner the past three years, and good recent form to recommend him. However, a last minute tip was circulated on Judge Judy, ridden by Fred Wettach, jr., who is said to hold the world's high jumping record (his mount, of course, not Wettach).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REGULA BADDUN, $7.50, $4.00, $2.90; M. J. BRENNAN, $3.10, $2.40; MOANE KEALA, $2.70.

REGULA BADDUN, having much speed, moved into a long lead at once, saved ground all the way and had enough in reserve to stall off M. J. BRENNAN when forced to a drive, when reaching the homestretch. M. J. BRENNAN dwelt slightly when the break came, secured racing room on the inside when bettering his position and closed determinedly under a vigorous drive. MOANE KEALA went in the first flight from the beginning and continued gamely when the final test came.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700. For 3-year-old fillies. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:55. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Mr. French's b. f. (3), by Black Servant—Patroness. Trained by William Hurley. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BITSY WITSY, $10.00, $5.70, $3.30; LETTER BOX, $7.40, $4.10; COUNT TEN (entry), $2.80.

BITSY WITSY followed in close pursuit of LETTER BOX in the early running, assumed command under severe urging when approaching the homestretch, was kept at her best speed and drew out slowly at the close. LETTER BOX was rushed hard to take command around the turn and held on willingly when challenged. COUNT TEN worked her way up gradually on the outside and finished with good courage.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' lt. ch. g. (5), by Sickle—Kawa. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAWAGOE, $12.60, $12.20, $6.40; TOANO, $13.20, $7.10; AIR LINE, $3.90.

KAWAGOE, racing kindly and a strong factor in the early running, rallied nicely when placed to punishment and finishing in determined fashion, was up in the conluding strides. TOANO had good speed to set the early pace, saved ground all the way and fought it out stubbornly when forced to a tenacious drive. AIR LINE went forwardly placed and came resolutely in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:06. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, William H. Furst's ch. g. (2), by The Scout—Riva. Trained by George E. Phillips. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:47 2-5.

†Formerly ran as Jackmal.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCIVA, $4.40, $2.80, $2.20; LEGION, $3.70, $2.60; DARK FRIEND, $2.50.

SCIVA, quick to settle in his stride, took command soon after the start, shook off stout opposition from DARK FRIEND and came out nicely when placed to a hard drive after reaching the homestretch. LEGION, hustled hard to gain a forward position, slipped through on the inside in the last three furlongs and finished with good courage. DARK FRIEND followed in chase of the winner under strong urging for the first three furlongs, then weakened under punishment during the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Amateur riders. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:34. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, William N. Adrians' ch. g. (4), by Big Blaze—Miss Lady. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:42 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG RED, $3.60, $2.60, $2.20; BRAD, $8.00, $3.40; WIZARD, $2.90.

BIG RED, nicely ridden, was sent through on the inside midway of the backstretch when in full stride, displaced WIZARD when leaving the backstretch, opened up a winning lead and came away without effort at the close. BRAD, reserved off the pace, bettered his position nicely when placed to a drive and wore WIZARD down in the closing sixteenth. WIZARD, a stout factor for the first seven furlongs, weakened in the closing furlongs while saving ground.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:07. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, H. H. Brown's b. g. (3), by Galetian—Facetious. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWAMP ANGEL, $37.40, $11.80, $4.10; AIR FORCE, $3.20, $2.30; CRINOLINE, $2.40.

SWAMP ANGEL, showing great improvement, followed within striking distance of the leaders, swung to the outside when engaging the pacemakers approaching the homestretch, finished determinedly and was up in the closing strides. AIR FORCE, steadied off the pace for the first six furlongs, circled his company and closed with a bold rush. CRINOLINE was rated while withstanding strong opposition from PIPES PAL, saved ground, but tired in the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:40. Start fair. Won driving; place same. Winner, Curtis King's b. g. (4), by Phillip—Diana. Trained by George E. Phillips. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHILDIA, $11.20, $5.30, $4.70; FAKE, $16.80, $7.40; MINTON, $5.30.

PHILDIA, intelligently handled, was backed off the pace in the opening quarter mile, gained fast when put to pressure, came through on the inside and finished fast to get up midway of the homestretch. FAKE maintained a contending position from the start and fought it out strongly after responding to punishment. MINTON bettered his position stoutly after getting into full stride and finished full of run on the outside.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 6:12. Off at 6:12½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Thomas F. Sward's ch. c. (4), by Supremus—Chacalot. Trained by George Mayberry. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CACHALOT, $6.10, $3.80, $2.50; HOMEWORK, $6.10, $3.60; JUBILARGO, $4.30.

CACHALOT, close up in the early racing, was blocked when attempting to go between horses approaching the final bend, swung to the outside after being eased back, took command readily and drew out smartly. HOMEWORK trailed until reaching the final turn, then closed gamely. JUBILARGO, placed to punishment with the start, was sent along stoutly all the way and held on gamely in the closing test.

On the Air Today

THE advance publicity on the "Crime Clues" broadcast from a "haunted house" last Tuesday night indicated that the broadcast would be an effort to outdo the British Broadcasting Corporation's airing from a ghost house earlier in the day, coming to these shores by short wave.

Perhaps I did not read carefully enough the advance publicity on the American style "ghost" broadcast, but I distinctly got the impression it was to be a report on what actually took place, an honest repdrting of what goes on in a haunted house.

Now, obviously, the manifestations of a ghost usually are nil when an investigation is made. And a certain amount of atmosphere must be injected for the American's appetite to make such a broadcast a good show.

But, for the first half of the "Crime Clues" program I still was of the belief it would be as advertised, although it sounded uncommonly staged and well rehearsed. When Miss Whoozis, however, went berserk and cut off the gentleman's ear (and a murder was committed on a stage set to lead the audience to believe the show was straight) I realized that no one connected with the program really expected any one else to take it—as advertised!

It was just another "Crime Clues" script act—using the buildup of the haunted house and the legitimacy of the property selected as a device to get an enlarged audience.

The entire airing was so confusing that one listener phoned Wednesday to inquire about it. The message, as relayed to me, questioned the honesty of intention of the sponsor, I gather. The answer is, obviously, that the broadcast was not bona fide—and I shall be more cautious about publicity in regard to this program in the future. Not even a radio writer likes to be a "sucker"—or pass along incorrect information.

A new radio show begins tonight when "Airshow" presents Alexander Gray, romantic barytone, and Charles Hanson Towne, columnist, with Mark Warnow's orchestra, at 8, WJSV. A chorus of 14 mixed voices backs up the musical numbers. Gray was a protege of Florenz Ziegfeld, making his stage debut in the "Midnight Frolic," following with such productions as "Desert Song," "Sweet Lady" and "Sally." The inaugural show presents everything from "Turkey in the Straw" to Gray's "I've Got Plenty of Nuttin'," from "Porgy and Bess."

Babst Fears U. S. Will Lose Sugar Industry

AAA Plan May Give It to Tropics, American Sugar Head Says.

New York, March 11.—The forty-fifth annual report of the American Sugar Refining Co., Earl B. Babst, chairman, issued today, says:

"The recent duplication of the home refineries by new interests in the tropical islands, culminating in their recognition by the Government in its AAA sugar plan, is brought into open public discussion by Mr. Babst in his annual report, by asking for a clarification of Government policy, as to whether it is proposed to abandon home sugar refining and transfer it under Government encouragement to the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Cuba.

He says: "With the validity of the AAA sugar plan now in doubt, new control measures may be in the making. This suggests that the time has come when it is desirable to obtain, if possible, some clarification of policy from our Government. Does the Government still rely on the home refiners and their experience as the mainstay of the national sugar supply? If the answer is 'yes,' then there should be no delay in modifying the sugar plan so as to return the home market to the home refiners.

"There is unchallenged power to do this. Is it the policy of the Government to transfer sugar refining to the tropics and to abandon cane refining at home? If the answer is 'yes,' then it is easy to forsee the complete duplication in some or all of the Insular dependencies now established at home."

The company's report for 1935 shows consolidated income from all sources of $5,257,953.10, which after depreciation and preferred dividends, leaves 93½ cents for the common stock against $3.56 last year. The refining earnings after providing $1,000,000 for depreciation were about one-tenth of a cent on each pound of raw sugar refined. Taxes increased to about $2.50 for each share of common stock as against $2 last year.

Refined Sugar Raised To 4.75 Cents a Pound

New York, March 11 (AP).—Two large refiners advanced the price of refined sugar today .10 of a cent to 4.75 cents a pound. Those announcing price increases, effective immediately, were American Sugar Refining Co. and National Sugar Refining Co.

The higher level for refined sugar follows a considerable rise in recent weeks in the sugar futures market where new highs for the current season have been made repeatedly.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, March 11 (AP).—DRIED FRUITS—Steady, unchanged.

General Foods Profit in Year Is $11,730,768

Net of $2.23 Per Share Compares With $2.12 in 1934.

New York, March 11.—The preliminary statement of General Foods Corporation and subsidiaries for 1935 shows, after all charges, expenses and provision for taxes, net earnings of $11,730,768.18. This is equal to $2.23 a share on 5,251,440 shares of common stock, and compares with net earnings of $11,143,875.75, or $2.12 a share earned during 1934 on the same number of shares.

Net earnings for the fourth quarter totaled $2,960,331, or 56 cents a share, against net earnings of $2,112,142, or 40 cents a share for the corresponding period in 1934. Total dividend payments amounted to $9,452,592 in 1935, the company having maintained its quarterly dividend rate of 45 cents throughout the year.

Columbia Pictures.

Net earnings of the Columbia Pictures Corporation for the first six months (26 weeks) ended December 28, 1935, of the current fiscal year, totaled $781,273, according to the company's semi annual report. This was equal, after deducting dividends on old preferred stock, which has now been redeemed, to $2.74 a share on the 273,573 shares of common stock currently outstanding following the declaration on December 10, last, of a 50 per cent stock dividend, and compared with $3.26 a share after preferred dividends calculated on the basis of the same number of common shares in the corresponding six months' period of 1934 when peak net income of $919,000 was reported. Current assets are $10,170,036 and rent liabilities $1,521,010.

Store Sales Here Up 16.3 Per Cent

Retail sales in Washington department stores in February advanced sharply over February, 1935, with a gain of 16.3 per cent, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The average for the fifth district revealed a gain of 12 per cent, while retail trade in the whole United States scored a 13 per cent improvement. In cumulative dollar volume sales for the first two months of this year the Capital showed an average of 15.3 per cent over the like period a year ago.

Power Output Lower.

New York, March 11 (AP).—The Associated Press index of electric power production declined for the week ended March 7 to 103.5 from 104.6 the previous week.

Stocks Work Irregularly Higher in Less Active Trading; Air and Farm Shares Buoyant.

New York, March 11.—Stock trading volume was the smallest of the month at around two and a quarter million shares and prices closed with some irregularity, but with a greater tendency to advance than to decline. Enough stocks were shoved up strongly to counteract the lassitude in various groups. Bonds were rather dull and Government issues declined. May wheat rose an eighth to 99½ cents a bushel.

Early trading converged on the airplane issues, most of which were pushed a little higher, but when it grew difficult to roust out a big following in those stocks attention drifted elsewhere. Farm implements were popular throughout, with gains of 1 to 5 points the rule. Rails came in for the first notice they have had in a week or so, and for a while in midafternoon most of them were reported on the tape at somewhat better prices, but they couldn't hold. Low-priced issues were the favorites, several large sales taking place in the lowly Frisco.

Oil shares were fair. Amerada continued its spectacular climb, Seaboard Oil held its demand with a rise of more than 3 points. Continental and California were strong. U. S. Rubber led its group on large volume. Among the chemicals, Air Reduction took the spotlight from Allied and rose more than 5 points on a few sales.

Metal shares were firm, but the range for most of them was narrow. American Sugar had another break, on publication of its annual report, which showed a sharp fall in profits. Foods were mixed. Biscuit gained on the optimistic prophecy of its president, but Borden gave up about 2 points. American Telephone was strong and Steel was fairly steady, but it could make little progress. Owens Glass and one or two other specialties rivaled the fast-moving farm implement issues.

Dollar Stiffens.

Foreign exchanges continued under the pressure of war uncertainties. Russian quotations were lower on the double menace of Japan and Germany. Sterling and francs suffered most early in the day and later recovered a little. The effect on our merchandise trade of declining foreign currencies probably will not amount to much, for no permanent basis is likely to be established and war orders for materials further complicate the matter. Measured in terms of its purchasing power at home, the dollar's value is changing little.

Money markets are taking only mild interest in the approaching discussions of the Federal Reserve Board of excess reserves. It scarcely can be said that the current decline in Government bonds is in anticipation of early action to cut down the excess, for the authorities are unlikely to do anything that in itself would add much to the cost of borrowing. That is especially the logical view when it is so clear that the real menace of credit inflation comes from Treasury spending. However, it must be recognized that the supreme monetary authority is now an administration with doubtful views on monetary matters, backed and advised by others with, to say the least, rather sketchy experience.

Trade News Favorable.

Midweek industrial news was favorable. Leading railroads reported for last week a good rise in freight car loadings compared with the corresponding week of last year, but a small drop from the preceding week's traffic. Production of electricity, while slightly under preceding week, rose nearly 10 per cent over a year ago. Steel trade reviews are optimistic. The industry's operating rate continues to rise and prices at least are steady. Retail trade in February, it turns out, was well maintained. The Federal Reserve Board's adjusted index for the country was 80 per cent, against 79 per cent in January, the comparison being made with a 1923-25 average. Sales value in February was 13 per cent greater than a year ago.

Considering the record breaking harshness of the winter, the large amount of unemployment—accepting the usual estimates at their face value—and the spurt in business last autumn, the winter has been a satisfactory one for trade. So far the optimism for the year is being justified, and much credit for that must be given for the de facto stabilization of currency that we have enjoyed, the fading into the background of the communistic section of the brain trusters and New Dealers, and the return to economic sanity by a large section of the population.

In this connection the annual reports of corporations now appearing in large numbers have several common characteristics. They show an increase in profits for last year over a year ago, executives look for further gains in revenues this year, point with one accord to the steep rise in taxation and other cost items, and qualify their predictions for further improvement with the warning that if taxes continue to rise at so rapid a pace the recovery may be halted. Business is indeed being granted a breathing spell, but it is uncertain as to when the noxious gases of crazy Government spending, punitive taxing, and the like may be turned on at Washington.

Odds and Ends.

Rubberoid had a closing bid and asked of 86-105, which is pretty fair spread for a common stock and suggests anything but a close market. A bid and asked quotation of 120-145, followed by one for 125-145 and then 130-145, was sent over the ticker this afternoon for Vulcan Detinning preferred. A sale then was made at 135. The closing bid yesterday was 130 and the offer was 145. . . . The ruling triumvirate in the farm implement section—Case, Deere and International Harvester—quickly ran up an average of 5 points each. Cold fact is that farm profits on unmortgaged land are now the best they have been in a great many years (war period excepted), and on top of it all the bonus is available. Naturally, the farmer is buying a good deal of new machinery. He never could take care of old machinery and prefers to buy new every year. Moreover, when he has a little cash he buys regardless of price. Farmers are now taking it out of the pockets of taxpayers and food consumers with a vengeance, but they have a lot of votes.

Surplus Tax Seen as Spur To Dividends

New York, March 11.—In a special analysis of possible results of adoption of the Administration's plans for taxing corporate surpluses, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, draws the following conclusions:

"Analysis of the earnings and dividend positions of some 200 leading corporations which have already reported their 1935 results provides the basis for certain tentative conclusions with respect to the probable results of the enactment of a measure along the lines proposed.

"Substitution of a tax on the difference between net income before Federal taxes and the amount of dividend payments would:

1. Encourage companies which have been paying out less than about 62-65 per cent of net incomes (as currently calculated) to increase disbursements as an alternative to bearing a heavier tax burden.

2. Reduce the tax burden of corporations now paying out 65 per cent or more of net incomes as dividends, but still tempt such companies to adopt even more generous policies.

3. Influence companies which are now paying dividends out of surplus to reduce payments if, under the new basis of calculating net income, they still constitute more than current earnings.

4. Force reconsideration of dividend policies by closely held corporations, with new dividend rates determined by whether the increased personal income taxes of controlling stockholders would exceed the new corporation tax rate.

5. Tend to hasten the payment of preferred dividend accumulations and of non-cumulative preferred dividends.

"Until the House sub-committee has had an opportunity to examine all angles of this problem it would be dangerous, however, to draw any hard and fast conclusions along the lines just outlined. It would seem reasonable to expect that some consideration will be given the problem of the small and weak corporations and those with heavy capital requirements, all of which would be adversely affected as compared with the strong corporations, which might actually find their taxes reduced."

Strait to Manage Sun Life Here

Goodyear Rescinds $1,250,000 Budget

Cleveland, March 11 (AP).—Directors of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. in a special meeting rescinded today a previous authorization of expenditures totaling $1,250,000 for improvements in its plant No. 2 at Akron, Ohio.

The improvement authorization was made a few days before the strike, now in its fourth week and affecting 14,000 employes. President P. E. H. Leroy did not announce reasons for the board's action rescinding the previous authorization.

Daily Oil Output Declines in Week

New York, March 11 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 16,050 barrels in the week ended March 7, totaling 2,758,650 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates.

Food Prices Rise 40% From Lowest

Boston, Mass., March 11.—There was a slight relaxation in January in the steady climb of retail food prices, and this was in spite of a normal increase from December to January. Compared with a year ago, retail food prices were 7 per cent higher, although still 6 per cent below the January average of the past ten years. The price of food was the lowest in March and April, 1933, since when it has increased 40 per cent.

Air Line Forms Own Express Unit

Formation of an independent air express system was announced yesterday by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., following its recent refusal to enter into an agreement proposed by the Railway Express Agency, whereby all domestic air lines would pool their express service through the railway agency. A struggle for supremacy in the air express business of the United States revolves about this independent move by TWA.

The independent system will be known as General Air Express, The Independent System, Inc., and pick-up and delivery service will be coordinated with the facilities of the Postal Telegraph Cable Co. and the Keeshin Transcontinental Truck Lines. M. V. Little, who formerly headed the express service of the Greyhound Bus Lines, will direct the activities of General Air Express. A fleet of pick-up and delivery trucks has been purchased and the service is being rapidly expanded to cover all important cities in America, and through connections will serve foreign countries as well.

Balance for Dividends Increases First Time Since 1930.

New York, March 11.—Operating revenues of the North American Co. were $107,029,663 for 1935 as compared with $101,386,964 for 1934, an increase of $5,642,699, or 5.57 per cent. Electric revenues alone were $84,093,174, an increase of 6.10 per cent. Operating expenses, maintenance and taxes amounted to $60,302,894 for 1935, an increase of $2,802,901, or 4.87 per cent over 1934. The operating ratio, or the percentage of operating revenues required to pay operating expenses, maintenance and taxes, decreased from 58.71 per cent in 1934 to 56.34 per cent in 1935.

The balance for dividends and surplus, after all charges, including preferred dividends of subsidiaries, amounted to $13,431,472 for 1935, compared with $10,792,414 for 1934. After dividends of $1,819,795 on North American preferred stock the consolidated balance of income was $11,611,678, equal to $1.35 per share of North American common stock for 1935, as compared with $8,972,380 or $1.04 per share for 1934, an increase of 29.42 per cent.

President James F. Fogarty says: "The year 1935 was the second in succession in which total revenues showed an increase compared with the preceding year, and was the first since 1930 in which the trend in revenues and percentage cost of doing business was favorable. While operating costs increased in relation to operating revenues in 1933 and 1934, the increase in costs in 1935 was relatively smaller than the increase in revenues, due principally to a larger proportion of hydroelectric generation with consequently reduced operation of coal-burning plants. Consequently the year 1935, compared with 1934, showed an increase in net operating revenues, most of which was carried down to the balance available for dividends, resulting in an increase in that item for the year for the first time since 1930."

American Water Works.

American Water Works & Electric Co., Inc., in its annual report for 1935 reports consolidated net earnings, equivalent after payment of preferred dividends, to $1.32 per share on the common stock, comparing with $1.03 per share for 1934. Net income which represents actual income available for dividends on its common stock amounted to 57 cents per share compared with 78 cents per share for the previous year. The company's balance sheet as of December 31, 1935, shows current assets of $22,399,157, of which $14,908,226 is represented by cash items. Current liabilities in the total amount of $10,532,097 are shown which included a bank loan of $1,000,000, which has been paid off.

Certain-teed

"Certain-teed" asphalt shingles couldn't be more securely applied if each shingle was padlocked. "Certain-teed" shingles stay on. Each shingle interlocks with the one next to it. A "Certain-teed" roof needs no repairs, no repainting. "Certain-teed" roofing is applied right over your old roof and costs no more than an ordinary roof to apply. Pay as little as $5 monthly on FHA terms. All work is done by our own men. We're not sub-contractors.

'Rotten Politics' Foster Crime, Says U. S. Aid

Edgar Hoover Urges People to Make Fight 'Their Business.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 11.—"Rotten politics" was scored today as encouraging crime and hampering the development of programs to combat crime.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, asserted "the only thing that can put the criminal out of business is for the American people to make it their business to combat crime and all of the filthy, stultifying influences which foster crime.

"Of those stultifying influences, may I say with the utmost emphasis that the most important of all is rotten politics."

Byrnes MacDonald, director of the juvenile aid bureau of the New York police department, another of the speakers, told of efforts to develop programs which would keep young people from falling into criminal habits.

"I would like to emphasize," he said, "the danger that lurks in a program (such as he had outlined) being associated, no matter how distantly, with politics. No greater calamity could befall the children of any city than to have the program ostensibly dedicated to their benefit become a political grab-bag and vote-getting medium."

Hoover said that honest police chiefs had told him time and again that they were powerless to move against "certain protected elements of lawlessness."

"The greatest service that can be done by the American citizen," he said, "is to take the shackles off the policeman and put them where they belong, on the wrists of the crooks."

The chief of the Federal agents called the picture of criminality in the United States "ghastly" and said that unless the march of a super-army of law violators is checked "you can make up your mind to submit to what really amounts to an actual armed invasion of America."
